OUR LONDON CABLE.

DIFFICULTY IN GETTING GOLD

Six Per Cent. Bank of England Rate Has Not Resulted in Much Bullion Going to England—Strain of Dear Money Will Bring Weaknesses to Light—Rate May Go to 7 Per Cent.

Cable Correspondence.

Copyright, 1899, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Nervousness and anxiety increase in our money market because it begins to see how difficult it is for any other market to supply its necessities in the matter of gold. Exchanges have responded in the usual manner to our 6 per cent. bank rate, but as they move in our favor steps are taken by the markets threatened to prevent loss of bullion. The Bank of France wished to advance the rate to 4 per cent. on Thursday, but the Government pleaded for a half measure, which does no good. So the Regents fall back on the gold premium or on refusals to sell bullion at any price, and only the imminent danger of a panic here would induce them to change their tactics, if that.

At the moment it looks as if your market might be obliged to come to our assistance by sending gold, but directly exports began, difficulties would assail you likewise. Our market talks at random about borrowing gold here and there, as in the Baring difficulties. Then, however, credit was much less irrevocably committed beyond its strength on all markets than now, and, where all must be borrowers, none can lend.

Superficially the strength of the State banks of Europe appears greater now than a year ago. France, Germany, Spain, Austria, and Italy all show more gold on hand now than then. But unfortunately every one of them also shows heavier commitments, and the rapid and severe advance in the Bank of England rate this Autumn has caught them all unprepared to support or cover their excessive commitments from their own resources alone.

The proximate consequence of the impasse that confronting all markets will probably be an advance in the Bank of England rate to 7 per cent., and there is betting on the Stock Exchange in favor of an early move of this kind of 5 to 1. I hardly expect the advance to come this year, but this week the Bank will probably charge 7 per cent. for short loans, and will certainly do so should the demand attain great proportions. And our 6 per cent. rate has thus far only attracted about £60,000 in French gold coin from the open market of Paris.

Despite all prospects of trouble in the near future, the discount market till last Friday leaned toward weakness, and at one time three months' bankers' acceptances were bought at slightly under 5½ per cent. discount.

The fact is the average handler of credit tends to become a mere machine, incapable of accurate perceptions of the drift of events shaping themselves behind the routine in which he lives. All last week clear-sighted bankers were struggling against the weak-kneed aspect of the market, and yesterday found their thoughtless competitors more eager after a high rate than they were themselves.

The fine rate now is 5½ per cent., but it is doubtful if much business could be done in discounts under the bank rate, and the leading houses are indisposed to take long paper at any terms. And no wonder, for the bank, thanks to the rules of its console and the diminution in its bill case, is completely in control of the market. This is the most reassuring fact about the situation. If gold can be obtained from abroad by high interest, the bank means to have it.

Inevitably a strained position such as I have sketched crushes Stock Exchange business, and all last week the poor fellows in the markets tried to keep their spirits up by amusements. "But for larking and bikes, some of us would soon go mad," is the remark one often hears stock brokers make in times like these. All thoughts are now bent on the settlement, commencing to-morrow, and fears of trouble in more than one quarter are entertained. Except in the Westralian section there is not much to be afraid of, because the wide indebtedness public are the lenors, not the market, in most other directions. Lenors that are spread thin make much misery unseen, but seldom a great noise or a big explosion. In the Westralian group, however, the manipulated gambles of old standing shows signs of breaking down, and I should not be surprised to see bad failures there furnishing plenty of raw material for moralists.

As weeks pass the strain of dear money is sure to bring to light other weaknesses on a larger scale. For example, the Chamber Corporation is keeping going by the help of accommodation bills discounted at 5 per cent., and New South Wales is demanding £4,000,000 on bills, half for the renewal of the old floating debt, half for a new. It cannot get money under 5 per cent., and for the next three months might touch little at that.

From these samples judge the lot, and multiply by the known commitments and necessities of the civilized world, busy enlarging its producing powers, and the cost of the South African war, now estimated at £30,000,000, and then judge the contango required to be cheerfully confident of money at 4 per cent again before three months are over. It is the multitude of urgent and hungry borrowers of the types just named that are going to give our banks their hardest job.

In every quarter of the market for outside securities during the past week liquidation was apparent and substantial net losses were recorded in a large number of issues. Not only were commission brokers large sellers of stocks, but traders were pretty generally arrayed on the bear side, and especialy at the end of the week made vigorous attacks on prices. High rates for money and the easily aroused fears as to the future of the money market, together with some unfavorable developments affecting particular issues, were responsible for the general declines. Of the more active issues, scarcely more than half a dozen ended the week at higher figures than those recorded at the close of the previous week, and among the stocks that declined were a number that showed losses of 3 points or more. In many cases the amount of stock sold was relatively small, but so little demand was there for any but the most active issues that the sales were sufficient to bring about serious declines.

Confident buying showed here and there in the market, but nothing like general support appeared, and it was a relatively easy task for bear traders to lower quotations. Transactions for the week showed a fairly large total. Trading was most active on the last two or three days, Friday especially giving much business to curb brokers.

Among the industrial stocks a number of sharp declines were recorded. Royal Baking Powder, Distilling of America, Havana Commercial, and International Pump all ended the week much below the previous Saturday's closing. Distilling of America was probably the most active of the industrial issues. Both issues declined steadily throughout the week, but the loss in the preferred stock was the heavier. This issue sold down to 28½ and closed at 28¼ bid, a net loss of 4⅝ points. In the common stock a net loss of 1½ points was recorded, the stock closing at 8⅜ bid, which represented a half-point rally from the lowest. Rumors in regard to dissatisfaction with the present management of the company were heard, but they met with prompt denials from officers of the company, and they appeared to be nothing more than repetitions of reports previously heard and previously emphatically denied. Weakness in the stocks seemed to be due to selling by holders who became tired on account of the continued low prices in the stock, prices established after the recent heavy liquidation in the stock. General market conditions seemed the most natural explanation for the losses recorded in these issues.

Amalgamated Copper declined under somewhat heavy liquidation and was helped down by energetic bear attacks. Late in the week Boston appeared to be a seller of the stock, which is almost invariably taken as an unfavorable factor. During the week it touched the lowest price at which it has yet sold. It changed hands at 81, which was more than 2 points below the lowest figure which it touched on the decline which followed the first withdrawal of inside support. It ended the week at 80½ bid, a net loss for the week of 5½ points. Other copper stocks shared the weakness of Amalgamated and were freely offered with little demand apparent. With the exception of Amalgamated Copper, none of the copper stocks were actively traded in, although on one or two days there were a few transactions in British Columbia Copper, which was probably the strongest of all these issues.

Stocks of the electric group were not very active, with the exception of Electric Axle. This issue fluctuated over a narrow range, and closed at 6⅝ bid, showing only a fractional change for the week. On some days it was very strong on what appeared to be good buying, and even on Saturday, when the whole market was weak, it was in fairly good demand. News was awaited in regard to developments of the company's affairs, but nothing of a definite character was made public. Friends of the company say that much progress is being made and are still predicting early announcement of very favorable developments.

Electric Vehicle sold as low as 68, and at the close was offered at that figure without a bid. This was 7 points below the price at which it was held the previous week. The transportation stocks, and especially New York Transportation, shared the weakness of Electric Vehicle and ended the week with net losses, which in the case of the New York company amounted to 3¼ points. In these stocks liquidation seemed to account for the declines recorded, and in none of them were traders particularly active.

Developments in the local gas situation attracted considerable attention to the city gas stocks, and all of these issues traded in on the curb closed a number of points lower for the week. In the New Amsterdam issues the lowest prices of the year were recorded, and they closed at about the bottom. Sales in the common stock were made as low as 22⅝, which was the closing bid for this issue, a net loss of 4½ points. The preferred stock lost 7½ points, ending at 44½ bid, and the bonds showed a recession of 3½ points, the final bid being 93, and the last sale 93½. An offer was made during the week by a broker who was supposed to be representing New Amsterdam Gas interests to discount at 6 per cent. the coupons falling due in January, and this was taken as an assurance that the interest due at that time would be paid, but the offer had little effect, for it was generally believed that the payment of the January coupons will have to be made not from earnings of the company, but from moneys borrowed for the purpose. The action of the Standard Gas Directors in adjourning the regular dividend meeting without taking any action on a distribution on the stock was taken as indicating that the gas war is still being followed as aggressively as at any time in the past. Standard Gas stock was sold on the announcement, but on the last day of the week, on what appeared to be inside support, recovered from the lowest and closed for the common stock at 105 bid, and for the preferred at 120 bid. This represented in the common stock a decline of 7½ points, and of 10 points in the preferred.

Storage Power was the most active stock of the week. Announcement was made of the election of W. Seward Webb as President of the company, which was very favorably viewed and helped the advance in the stock, which early in the week was strong and advancing sharply daily. It got up to 17⅝, but from this figure a sharp reaction began, which, after some irregularity, brought the stock down on Saturday to 9⅝. This low figure was brought about by very energetic bear attacks made on the stock, and it recovered very sharply from this price. It got up to 13, and fell back again to 11, where it closed for the week, showing a net gain of 2⅝ points.

Royal Baking Powder suffered a net loss of 2½ points, closing at 82 bid. Heavy liquidation in this stock at the close of the week was responsible for the decline. On Friday the transactions amounted to nearly 2,000 shares, which was a very large day's business in this issue.

CONGRESS.—The debate in the House on the Currency bill was begun yesterday by Mr. Overstreet of Indiana on behalf of the Republicans. Mr. McClellan of New York was among those who opposed the measure. He urged all Gold Democrats to vote against it and argued that it would, if it became a law, cause a great contraction in the currency. Senator Mason of Illinois in support of his resolution of sympathy for the Boers denounced Great Britain for bringing on the war. At least seven Democratic representatives from New York are counted upon to vote for the Currency bill. Democratic Senators threaten to oppose the confirmation of W. D. Bynum as a member of the Board of General Appraisers.—Page 3.

FOREIGN.—The Boers report that they captured 672 prisoners and three guns in the fight with Gen. Gatacre's forces. London is not inclined to censure the General until further advices are received from him. It is reported that Gen. Methuen is advancing and that heavy fighting is expected north of the Modder River. The German naval estimates were yesterday debated in the Reichstag. Prince Hohenlohe and Count von Buelow urged the necessity for more warships, not so much for means of attack, but as defenses. It is said that the Kaiser contemplates dissolving the Reichstag if events foreshadow the defeat of the measure. The Royal Societies Club yesterday gave a banquet to Lord Chief Justice Russell and Sir Richard Henn Collins, Great Britain's representatives on the Venezuelan Boundary Commission. Baron Penzance, Privy Councilor, died yesterday in London. Count de Dion was yesterday ejected from the French Senate Chamber by order of the court. It is said in London that the Yale-Harvard team will challenge the English college men for a return athletic meeting.—Pages 1 and 6.

Frank Miller, a Broklyn merchant, beat his horse and was arrested on complaint of a citizen.

George W. Hewitt of Brooklyn was sentenced to one year in Sing Sing Prison yesterday for bigamy.

Nine persons were injured in a collision between an electric car and a horse car in West Broadway.

Gov. Roosevelt yesterday announced the appointment of James W. Houghton of Saratoga as Justice of the Supreme Court.

Gov. Roosevelt said yesterday two or three matters connected with the remodeling of the New York City charter might be acted upon at once.

The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor was opened at Detroit. The report of President Gompers was read by Second Vice President Duncan.

John D. Rockefeller refuses either to confirm or deny the reported deal by which H. C. Frick will become head of the Union Steel Company, to fight Carnegie interests.

Dr. Dudley of the Harlem Hospital made a strong appeal for a new building before the Harlem Board of Commerce last night, describing the present condition of the hospital as disgraceful to the city.

The North German Lloyd Steamship Line's traffic arrangements for next year have been announced.

Joseph Palmerston Gill-Martin, who sued Patrick McInerney for $100,000 for alienation of his wife's affections, obtained a verdict of $10,000.

Politicians who are said to have acquired valuable water rights in Suffolk County may make an offer to relieve the shortage in the Brooklyn water supply.

Several men, occupants of a Fire Department repair wagon, which crashed into a cable car on Lexington Avenue yesterday, were thrown out later and badly bruised.

Commander C. P. Howell of the steam engineering department of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, a survivor of the battleship Maine, was buried yesterday.

The joint legislative committee appointed to investigate the workings of the tax laws and suggest amendments is in session here.

Detectives are looking for Meyer Goldstein, formerly a bookkeeper employed by H. S. Kramer, a jeweler, who disappeared on Nov. 9, and whom Mr. Kramer accused of taking jewelry and cash to the amount of $20,000.

In a suit on trial before Justice Andrews, in the Supreme Court, Peter J. Kiernan, an employing tile layer, alleges that his business was ruined by a boycott ordered by the Tile, Grate, and Mantel Association of New York.

A general decline and alarming signs of demoralization marked the earlier hours in Wall Street yesterday. In the afternoon liquidation and an easing money market restored a more normal tone, and stocks recovered. The slump caused the failure of two Consolidated Exchange brokers.

PUERTO RICO RECORDS ARRIVE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Loads of documents from Puerto Rico are arriving at the Congressional Library every time a transport comes from the island. About twenty big boxes came in to-day. All the old Spanish records, except those which are needed in the island, are sent to the library and stored away. None of the boxes have been opened, and none will be until the flood of records subsides.

Another immense stock of records, which occupy a big room, is the fruit of the recent removal of the Post Office Department to its new building. A number of ancient records were disinterred from the garrets where they had been stored and almost forgotten and sent to the library. The books, mostly old accounts, running back to the year 1785, are tightly packed together, and the distance from one end of the pile to the other is 100 feet. There are

GATACRE'S HEAVY LOSSES

The Boers Assert that 672 Prisoners Were Captured.

THREE GUNS WERE ALSO TAKEN

Reported at Pretoria that Gen. Methuen Is Advancing and that Severe Fighting Is Expected.

PRETORIA, Dec. 11.—The Boers captured three British guns in the engagement with Gen. Gatacre's force at Stormberg.

Six hundred and seventy-two British prisoners were also taken.

Important news is expected from the Boer outposts in the direction of Modder River. There is a report that the British are advancing on the plain, and heavy fighting is anticipated. Gen. Prins Loo and Gen. Cronje command the Boer forces.

In the fighting at Modder River yesterday evening Gen. Cronje maintained his position and captured fifty British soldiers.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Later details regarding the disaster to Gen. Gatacre's column show that but for the magnificent work of the British artillery the disaster would have been far more extensive, as the incessant Boer shell fire in the midst of the repulsed infantry ultimately led to disorder, which only escaped developing into a rout through the batteries of artillery, occupying successive positions, covering the retreat, thus drawing a portion of the Boers' galling fire.

Apparently, the British were set an impossible task and were treacherously guided. After a trying march and being under arms sixteen hours, they attacked the wrong part of the Boer position, where the hill was impregnable, and the burghers were estimated to number 6,000 men, instead of 2,500, as the spies had reported.

There is little in the story to assuage the intense humiliation occasioned by the episode, which is almost an exact counterpart of the battle of Nicholson's Nek. The War Office is besieged with anxious relatives, and the successive editions of the newspapers were eagerly scanned. Men and women were equally persistent in pleading for information, but the authorities either do not possess any or have not published it up to the present.

Gen. Gatacre has not yet forwarded the promised additional message, and the censorship has prevented the correspondents from explaining his defeat. While it appears to be generally admitted that Gen. Gatacre is inclined to overwork his men, Lord Durham's charges of incompetency are considered as in rather bad taste. Until Gen. Gatacre has given his explanation it is felt that considerable allowance must be made for the extreme difficulty of getting intelligence in a country whose inhabitants are in strong sympathy with the enemy.

Stormberg is described as a stronger position than Laing's Nek. The only road winds through lofty hills, and flanking is impossible. Colesberg is also said to be in an almost impregnable position, and as no troops are available to reinforce the columns acting in those directions, it becomes evident that Gen. Gatacre's misfortune or error will delay the invasion of the Free State, perhaps, some weeks.

It is exceedingly probable that he will be compelled to retire on Queenstown and to wait for reinforcements, which can hardly reach him until Sir Charles Warren's division arrives at the Cape. The first detachments will sail Saturday next. Even if Gen. French is not compelled to retreat, he will be obliged to pause in his advance.

The Stormberg affair has caused the most depressing influence everywhere, not excepting the Stock Exchange, where consols were at the lowest price in many years, and South African securities slumped, not so much on acount of the military reverse, which is retrievable, but owing to the profound apprehension as to its political effect. No great surprise would now be felt if Gen. Gatacre's reverse resulted in Cape Colony becoming aflame from end to end.

The afternoon newspapers, like the morning newspapers, withhold the apportionment of blame until they are further acquainted with the facts, and take the reverse philosophically.

The Pall Mall Gazette remarks:

"The country's calm will again surprise the Continent. If the blow is more serious than it appears, neither the Crown nor the Ministry will be in danger of a single seditious, vilifying howl in the street. We have confidence in those who are fighting for us and their directors."

It now seems certain that the Seventh Division, which is being mobilized at Aldershot, will also be sent to South Africa.

The War Office has issued a notice that after Jan. 1 a deduction will be made from the pay of soldiers serving in South Africa—in the case of privates, four pence per day for wives and a penny for each child; in the case of Sergeants, eight pence for wives and two pence for each child. These sums have thus far been paid by the Government. The order indicates a belief that the campaign will be a long one.

It is announced from Cape Town that the Boers have succeeded in repairing the Leeuwfontein Bridge, between Stormberg and Burghnersdorp, which the British destroyed on retiring.

Commandant Swanepol, who commanded the Boer forces at Stormberg, has been replaced by a Scotchman named Robertson.

PARIS DISCUSSES THE DISASTER.

Predicts Gravest Consequences from Gatacre's Defeat.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The news of Gen. Gatacre's reverse made an immense impression in Paris. But, although the afternoon papers predict the gravest consequences in the disaffected Dutch portion of Cape Colony, they cannot be accused of unseemly exultation over British misfortune.

Most of the journals see in the defeat an undoubted trap laid by Boers working in conjunction with Dutch traitors. The Journal des Debats epitomizes the general opinion, saying that Sir Alfred Milner has threatened in vain to overwhelm the disloyal Dutch with the thunderbolts of British wrath, and that even he must to-day realize that race sympathy is stronger than loyalty. It sees in the attitude of the Afrikanders "the inevitable result of the tactless language of the British press in referring to the war as a struggle between the British and Dutch for supremacy in South Africa."

The Temps says:

"The story of the ambush at Stormberg reads like a chapter from Fenimore Cooper's 'The Spy.' The situation resembles that of the American war of independence, when the colonists devoted themselves to deceiving, misleading, and ambushing the British Generals for love of their country, and with the assent of Washington."

DEFEAT GLADDENS THE GERMANS.

Berlin Crowds Rejoice Over the News of Gatacre's Reverse.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Gen. Gatacre's reverse at Stromberg was joyfully greeted on the streets of Berlin, but the newspapers, for the most part, are reticent on the subject.

The Berliner Tageblatt, which prints a long letter from a German in London, advising the public here against demonstrative Anglophobia, gives the news of the repulse without comment.

The Vossiche Zeitung comments in a strain almost friendly, saying:

"After the soldierly virtues which the British have already shown in this war it may well be believed that Gen. Gatacre's troops fought as if on the parade ground."

The Neueste Nachrichten asks if it is against English custom to reconnoitre before attacking. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung is about the only paper this evening which is distinctly Anglophobe in its comment.

CAVALRY SKIRMISH AT COLENSO.

Parties of Boers Exchange Shots with the British.

FREERE CAMP, Natal, Dec. 11.—The British

of Boers who fell back across the river. The kopjes were observed to be thickly occupied by the enemy.

The railway bridge at Colenso has been completely destroyed. Two stone piers were blown up last night. The highway bridge is intact.

BRITISH LOSSES ARE 4,570.

Of This Number Since the War Began 566 Have Been Killed and 2,027 Wounded.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—It is just two months since the Transvaal ultimatum was delivered. Nine engagements have been fought, and the British have lost 566 killed, 2,027 wounded, and 1,977 missing or prisoners.

SAYS GATACRE IS INCOMPETENT.

Lord Durham Alleges He Is Not Fit to Command.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—At a luncheon to-day Lord Durham, formerly a Lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards, said that Gen. Gatacre had overworked his troops in the Soudan, and that he was not fit to have a command in South Africa. He also said he blamed the War Office for the disaster to the British forces in the attack on Stormberg, as the officials know the opinions of the officers who had served under Gen. Gatacre.

QUEEN VICTORIA SHOWS ANXIETY.

Sends Her Private Secretary for Details of the Disaster.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Queen has sent her private secretary, Sir Arthur Bigge, specially from Windsor Castle to glean full details at the War Office for her Majesty respecting Gen. Gatacre's reverse.

METHUEN SHELLS THE BOERS.

Lyddite Shells Explode with Terrific Force—Burghers Reply with Twelve Big Guns.

MODDER RIVER, Cape Colony, Dec. 10.—The naval 4.7-inch gun again took up a position north of the camp, this afternoon, while the howitzer battery was posted southeast, on the left of the Boers. Both opened a hot fire with lyddite shells and shrapnel, to which the Boers sharply replied with a dozen guns, thus unmasking their position, which was the object of the British manoeuvre. After an hour's firing the Boer guns were silenced, the howitzers searched the trenches and then threw shell after shell upon the hills, the explosion of the lyddite causing the whole ground over an extensive area to rise in the air in dense, brown clouds. A Boer long gun was dismantled.

It now appears that the Boers intend that the next fight is to take place at Magersfontein. Apparently, Spytfontein is not defended, or the Boers are unwilling to unmask their position there, as the replies to the British artillery were all from guns at Magersfontein.

CONSUL MACRUM IS RELIEVED.

Hollis Sent by Hay from Lorenzo Marques to Pretoria.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Secretary Hay has cabled United States Consul Stanley Hollis, at Lorenzo Marquez, Portuguese East Africa, directing him to proceed to Pretoria and take charge of the United States Consulate there upon the departure of Mr. Macrum.

This will obviate the necessity of accepting the service of Mr. Attebury, who had been designated by Mr. Macrum to take his place. Mr. Hollis will serve as Consul at Pretoria only until the arrival there of Mr. Adelbert Hay.

IRISHMEN CHEER FOR KRUEGER.

Dublin's Lord Mayor Denounces the Transvaal War.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—The Lord Mayor of Dublin, Daniel Tallon, presided at a meeting of the corporation to-day, called to protest against the Transvaal war. The Clerk declared that there was no quorum, but the Lord Mayor insisted on making a statement in which he declared that the war was "wanton and unprovoked aggression, undertaken by Mr. Chamberlain and capitalists against a handful of farmers." He further declared that America was "opposed to this iniquitous war."

In the meantime the members present shouted "No quorum!" and "Order!" and the tumult in the galleries drowned all the speeches. Eventually, the Lord Mayor left the chair, with the galleries cheering for President Krüger. No attempt was made to adopt the previously prepared resolution against the war.

AMERICANS DETAINED AS SPIES.

Two Commercial Travelers Say They Were Arrested in Ireland.

BELFAST, Dec. 11.—Two American commercial travelers who have arrived here say they were detained at Queenstown on suspicion of being Boer spies. They add that the United States Consul obtained their release and that he is making an inquiry into the matter.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 11.—The United States Consul here, in reply to a query regarding the charge made by two American commercial travelers at Belfast that they had been detained at Queenstown on suspicion of being Boer spies, said he was not aware of any such detention.

Whisky Costly in Ladysmith.

LOURENZO MARQUEZ, Dec. 11.—The following dispatch has been received from the Boer laager near Ladysmith: "Several Kaffir runners from Ladysmith to Estcourt have been captured. They received from £15 to £40 for the trip. The intercepted messages show that men and horses in Ladysmith are now on half rations, that whisky is £1 a bottle, and that beer is exhausted."

List of Prisoners Asked For.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Upon the application of the South African republics, through the medium of the Netherlands Government, the British Government has consented to supply the Boers with lists of the Boer prisoners held by the British, and with other proper information as to their condition. The British Government has intimated in addition that it expects that the Boer Government will reciprocate when called upon in kind.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

Executive Committee Is to Meet in Washington To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Republican League will be held here to-morrow. After the adjournment of the league meeting an assembly of Southern Republicans is to be called. There are in the city now a great many Republicans from every Southern State. The object in calling the assembly is to indorse Senator J. C. Pritchard of North Carolina for Vice President of the United States.

Letters have been received from prominent league men in all sections of the South expressing sympathy with the movement, and confidence is felt that the entire Southern delegation can be depended on to support Senator Pritchard for the next National convention.

Vice President Roscoe Mitchell of the National League is reported as announcing that Pension Commissioner Evans has given an interview declaring that he will not be a candidate for the Vice Presidency. Commissioner Evans says he has not heard of this interview himself yet. It is assumed by the promoters of the Pritchard movement that the reported interview clears the field of all Southern competition.

REPORT OF GOV. OTERO.

Pleads for Statehood for New Mexico, and Gives a Resume of Religious Progress There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—One of the most interesting features of the report of Gov. Miguel A. Otero of New Mexico, which was made public to-day by the Secretary of the Interior, is the part relating to religious affairs in the Territory. Gov. Otero says that there are only two Jewish places of worship in New Mexico, one of which is at Albuquerque and the other at Las Vegas. There are only four churches of the African Methodist Episcopal denomination.

"The Mormons," says Gov. Otero, "have a few settlements in New Mexico; but these they have exclusively to themselves, and they are pretty generally on the northwestern borders of the Territory. There are freethinkers, Unitarians, and Universalists scattered through the various towns, but none of these have any organized societies."

The Catholics had the field to themselves for a long time, and the first Protestant church to enter New Mexico was the Baptist. The Rev. Samuel Gorman of that Church arrived in the Territory in 1850, and in 1851 the Methodists and Presbyterians came. In 1863 the first Episcopal services ever held in the Territory were held at Santa Fé. It was not until 1881 that the Congregationalists built a church. Other denominations have come in since.

Gov. Otero pleads for Statehood. He gives the population as 260,500, excluding Indians, who number 25,329. The Territory contains nearly 79,000,000 acres, of which 24,000,000 comprise land grants, Indian and military reservations, railroad grants, and Government entries. The assessed value for taxation is more than $40,000,000. The improved system of irrigation on which the Territory has to depend for the multiplication of its land area is developing rapidly.

NEW GRAVES FOR MAINE DEAD.

Plot Selected in Arlington Cemetery for Final Resting Place.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen has selected a plot in Arlington Cemetery, and on a knoll not far from the section in which the soldiers who died in Cuba and Puerto Rico were buried, as the place of burial for the victims of the Maine explosion. The site is easily accessible from the main road to the cemetery and not far from the dead buried during the war of the rebellion.

Arrangements will be made to mark the event with appropriate and impressive ceremonies.

TEACHERS AND SHORT SKIRTS.

Louisville Order Against Them Causes Comment in Cincinnati.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 11.—An order issued by the Board of Education of Louisville, Ky., has created a great deal of comment in Cincinnati. The order prohibits all teachers from wearing short skirts while on duty. It probably emanated from a desire to prevent the example being set before pupils. Of course "rainy day" skirts are included in the order. These reach to the shoe tops, and in no place have they become so much the fad as in Cincinnati. Numbers of teachers wear them, and if Cincinnati should follow in the wake of Louisville the order would create quite a sensation.

Superintendent of Schools Boone was asked this morning if he intended to take any action in the matter. "I have heard about the Louisville order," he said with a smile. "Will Cincinnati follow suit?" was asked. "Not so far as I am concerned." Mr. Boone replied. "I shall not attempt to tell my teachers what sort of skirts to wear. I do not consider it any of my business. They can use their own discretion. I am sure they will exercise it properly."

SCARLETINA AT WELLESLEY.

Only Two Mild Cases, but the Term Is to Close Earlier in Consequence.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—Last week two slight cases of the scarletina prevalent in the vicinity of Wellesley were found among the students of Wellesley College, and, although the patients were at once isolated and every precaution taken, it was decided by the college authorities that the term should be brought to a close on Wednesday of this week, the earliest convenient date, to prevent the possible outbreak of other cases. This action sets the beginning of the Christmas holidays a week ahead of the appointed time, and the Winter term will begin a week in advance—Jan. 4 instead of Jan. 11. Several anticipated events are cut off by this unexpected closing of the college, notably the Christmas vesper service appointed for next Saturday evening, the sale of dolls for the college settlement, and a number of lectures and club meetings; but the students as a whole will welcome the earlier recess, the Autumn term being the longest and hardest in the year.

IRON IMPORTS TO BE LARGE.

Two Hundred Vessels Will Be Needed to Take Ore to Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—Vessels chartered and other preparatory signs of activity at this port indicate that the year 1900 will be one of unusually large imports of iron ore. It is said that 200 vessels will be required to load cargoes of iron and copper destined for Philadelphia from Cuba and the European ports. The ore beds in the lake regions and other mineral territory in the United States are said to be totally inadequate to meet the demand for manufactured iron and steel products in the coming year. It is reported that 200,000 tons of iron ore have been engaged for shipment to this city from Spanish and other Mediterranean ports alone. A large amount of these shipments, it is believed, are destined for the Carnegie Steel Company.

There has been a revival of the Cuban ore trade since the close of hostilities in the island, as indicated by a number of recent shipments from the mines at Juragua. In addition to ore shipments, there are other indications of a year of increased activity at the Port of Philadelphia. In anticipation of some of the expected activity the Pennsylvania Railroad is making important extensions at Greenwich Point for increased wharfage facilities.

Stamford's Oldest Man Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Dec. 11.—Stamford's oldest man died this morning, after an illness of eight months' duration. He was James St. John, and was one of the most familiar figures in town. He was born in 1805, and was ninety-four years and nine months old. He was born during Thomas Jefferson's Administration, and cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson. He could recall occurrences of the war of 1812 and had lost none of his faculties in old age.

Mrs. Rhinelander to be Buried To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Dec. 11.—The body of the late Mrs. Frederick W. Rhinelander, who died in Washington Friday, arrived this evening for interment. The committal service was performed by Bishop Satterlee of Washington, who accompanied the remains from New York. The body was placed in the receiving vault until to-morrow, when the interment will occur.

Belgian Electoral Bill a Law.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 11.—The new Electoral bill, giving proportional representation, passed in the Chamber of Deputies to-day. The Catholic Party will be unable to elect more than seven Deputies in Brussels, instead of eighteen as heretofore. The Liberals assert that they will have a majority in the elections next June.

YOUNG'S MEN IN DISTRESS

His Infantry, Shoeless, Marches in Pursuit of Aguinaldo.

FORCE REDUCED BY SICKNESS

One-third of the Troops Are Incapacitated—Filipinos Drive American Prisoners with Bayonets.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—Dispatches dated Concepcion, Dec. 2, from a correspondent with the detachment pursuing Aguinaldo have just reached Manila by messenger.

The military wires on all lines to the northward are continually cut by the natives or are crowded with Government business when working.

According to these advices, Gen. Young was at Condon Nov. 29, having three troops of the Third Cavalry, Cunningham's scouts, and Major March's battalion of the Thirty-third Infantry. The nominal strength of his command had been reduced one-third by sickness. The horses were worn out and handicapped by lack of shoes. The infantry, after a march of a hundred miles from San Jacinto, were shoeless, and all were living on the country. The troops had no ammunition except what they carried in their belts.

Gen. Young, having then been without communication with Gen. Lawton for ten days, and not knowing the disposition of the other troops or whether support was being sent forward, resolved to keep moving.

Having received information that the insurgent General Tino, with a thousand men, was somewhere to the north, and that Aguinaldo, with Gen. Pilar, 5 women, and 400 soldiers of his faithful Bulacan Battalion, was in the mountains to the east, Gen. Young decided, on Nov. 30, to divide his force. He proceeded toward Vigan, hoping to attack Gen. Tino, with his handful of men, and to prevent him from joining Aguinaldo. Major March, with his battalion, and Cunningham's scouts started over the mountains toward Cervantes after Aguinaldo, who was reported to have been there on Nov. 28. This column marched for thirteen hours without food.

The dispatches go on to say:

"The Americans found that the insurgents had impressed the Igorrotes, compelling them to dig trenches and to construct pitfalls along the trails, which were fearful traveling at the best. One stream had to be forded twelve times in the course of a mile. These inoffensive, stupid creatures, usually pictured as bloodthirsty savages, cheerfully turned to undo their own work, and actually went foraging for the Americans.

"The Ilocos region is the richest the Americans have entered in the northern campaign. The people are prosperous, intelligent, and more than half civilized. They have excellent houses and carry on flourishing industries. Many of them are evidently rich. Several towns received the troops with bands and the ringing of church bells. Cattle were killed and houses were opened to the troops.

"How much of this display was sincere and how much due to a desire to propitiate the conquerors, it would be hard to say. There were evidences that similar hospitality had been extended to Aguinaldo. The people described him as cheerful, hugging the hope of salvation through American politics, and everywhere trying to retain support by proclaiming, with seeming sincerity, that the United States Congress would certainly recognize the independence of the Philippine Republic in December.

"Many of the natives exhibited notes from Lieut. Gillmore and other American prisoners, in which the recipients were commended to the Americans on the score of kindness shown to the writers.

"There are twenty-seven Americans with Lieut. Gillmore. Another party of fourteen were taken through Ilocos a week ahead of Gen. Young. They were ragged and dirty, and the natives say some of them were urged forward at the point of the bayonet."

GRANT'S FORCES HOLD SUBIG.

Marines Take Possession of Navy Yard at Olongapo—Enemy Flees Before Advancing Americans.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—The advance guard of Gen. Grant's command, under Major Spence, arrived at Olangapo, Subig Bay, during the night of Saturday, Dec. 9, which place was occupied with little resistance, the enemy fleeing.

Major Spence had an arduous march over the mountain trails from Dinalupihan.

Yesterday morning the Baltimore and Oregon and a chartered transport arrived at Olangapo from Manila. The navy was disappointed to find the army in possession of the place, which they had hoped to capture. A detachment of marines under Lieut. Myers occupied the navy yard at Olangapo, and will hold and occupy it as a naval station. The yard consists of seven new large buildings and some repairing and machinery shops, all damaged by the bombardment of Sept. 23.

During the morning of Dec. 10 the navy transported Major Spence's command from Olangapo to the town of Subig, five miles distant. The enemy was seen deserting Subig as the troops landed, and the latter occupied it without resistance. They found the place abandoned by the retreating enemy, who fired a few shots. The Americans deployed to the right and left of the town and killed one of the enemy.

Gen. Grant and the balance of his command arrived at Olangapo yesterday afternoon. He will proceed to-day to Subig and join Major Spence. Gen. Grant moves north along the coast and will effect a juncture with the Twenty-fifth Infantry, under Col. Andrew S. Burt, who was reported eight miles from Iba Dec. 7.

The enemy encountered in Gen. Grant's advance fled to the mountains and scattered. The towns occupied on the advance are not being garrisoned. No casualties are reported in his command.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The following cablegram has been received at the Navy Department from Admiral Watson, telling of the part played by the navy in the occupation of Subig Bay:

"Manila, Dec. 11.

"On the morning of the 9th, about 11 o'clock, I received a telegram from Schwan, asking for MacArthur, our co-operation with Grant's forces scattered toward Olangapo, Subig Bay. I suspended the Charleston court of inquiry and started the same evening for Subig with the Baltimore, the Oregon, and a company of marines from the barracks. We arrived at daylight on the 10th, with landing parties organized. Found Major Spence in possession of Olangapo, having arrived at dark on the 9th. Relieved the army forces with 100 marines. Myers commanding. Transported the army detachment to Subig. The town was abandoned on our arrival. Grant arrived in the afternoon. We left the Oregon, the Gardoqui, and the Mindora, and returned to Cavite on the 11th. The Olongapo Navy Yard manchinery is in fair condition, the shops damaged only by the previous attack."

MOVEMENTS OF TRANSPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Adjutant General received a telegram to-day saying that the troop ship Meade, carrying the Forty-third Volunteer Infantry, Col. Murray commanding, arrived at Aden, at the southern extremity of the Red Sea, this morning in good condition. He also received word that the transport Logan, carrying the Forty-first Infantry Volunteers, Col. Richmond commanding, arrived at Port Said, the entrance to the Suez Canal, yesterday afternoon, with all well on board. These two regiments are on their way to the Philippines.

Gen. Otis reports to the War Department the arrival at Manila of the transports Conemaugh and Leelanaw with 5 officers, 16 enlisted men, 78 civilians, and 492 horses.

The Nashville sailed to-day from Colombo for Singapore.

The New Orleans Loses Two Days.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The New Orleans arrived at Singapore yesterday, three days behind the Brooklyn, en route for Manila. The little cruiser lost fully two days to the Brooklyn on the run across to Singapore from Colombo. Both vessels are due at Manila in about a week.

The Opening of Philippine Ports.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Secretary Root to-day said that he had sent no directions to Gen. Otis to open up the ports in the Philippines. The matter was in the discretion of Gen. Otis, however, and the War Department earnestly hoped that the day would not be far distant when all of the ports could be safely opened.

HOBART STUDENTS ARRESTED.

Six Juniors Charged with Taking Signs Belonging to Merchants.

Special to The New York Times.

GENEVA, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Six members of the junior class of Hobart College have been arrested on the charge of petit larceny.

On Friday night the class held a smoker, and several of them, it is alleged, while on their way home, helped themselves to signs belonging to merchants. Three members of the class have been threatened with suspension by the faculty of the college.

The entire freshman class was threatened with suspension if they carried out the old college custom on Sunday night of raising a banner as a sign of their meeting. The banner was not raised, but there appears yet to be trouble ahead.

One sophomore had his shoulder broken in a class fight.

WOMAN DEFENDS HER FORTUNE.

Sarah Adams of Norwalk, Conn., Attacked by Brother in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 11.—Proceedings are in progress in the Norwalk Probate Court for the appointment of a conservator over Sarah Adams, aged fifty-five years, a wealthy resident of this city, the petitioners representing that she is of unsound mind.

The petition is made by John E. Adams of Middletown and Charles E. Adams of Greenwich, brothers of the defendant. Ex-Congressman Levi Warner of Norwalk, a brother-in-law, is also interested with the petitioners in the case.

Miss Adams is a member of the Norwalk Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and is prominent throughout the State. The petitioners have introduced evidence to show that the defendant is laboring under mental delusions regarding several matters. The defendant says she will spend her entire fortune as well as summon the entire town as witnesses in her behalf.

POPE GRANTS A PRIVILEGE.

Says an Unusual Mass May Be Celebrated at Midnight Dec. 31.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Mgr. Martinelli has just received from Rome a document in which the Pope grants to the Catholics of the world an unusual privilege in connection with the celebration of the year 1900. It concludes as follows:

"Therefore, in order that the year 1900, which is about to begin, and which, it is to be devoutly hoped, will usher in a far more happy century, may, by the aid of God, and of His only begotten Son, our Saviour, have an auspicious opening and may close after a prosperous course, his Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., graciously grants that on the 31st of December, both of the year which is now ending and of the year to begin, at midnight in churches and chapels where the most holy eucharist is kept, according to the prudent judgment of the ordinary, the most august sacrament may be exposed for adoration; and he grants also the permission to say or to sing, in the presence of the eucharist thus exposed, and at that hour, one only mass of the Feast of the Circumcision and the Octave of Christmas. Moreover, he grants to the faithful the special privilege of receiving holy communion at the same time, either during or outside the celebration of the mass."

THINK CHICAGO'S CREDIT GOOD.

Holders of Sewer Bonds Do Not Care to Sell Before Maturity.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—No offers to sell any part of the $205,000 worth of sewer bonds that were advertised for by Controller Kerfoot were received to-day. The purchase of the bonds was she gave the name of Mary A. Melando in a low voice that trembled with nervousness.

"Where do you live?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"In Bayonne."

"Your father is Christopher Melando?"

"Yes."

"And he was employed for twenty years by C. B. Reynolds & Co?"

"He was."

"And when you went to work for a living you also went into that factory?"

"Yes, Sir."

"How long did you work there?"

"Nearly four years."

"Did you meet the defendant there?"

"I did."

"When he went from that factory where did he go?"

"To Hermann & Co. in Newark."

"Did he take a number of employes of the firm with him?"

"Yes."

"Did he take you?"

"He did."

"Whom else did he take?"

"Robert A. Zeller, Martin Mitchell, and Frederick Kuhl."

"Has Kuhl a blonde beard?"

"He has." [Miss Miller, the saleswoman in Hartdegen & Co.'s store in Newark, swore at the Coroner's inquest that a man with a blonde beard bought the silver bottle holder from her.]

ELEVEN YEARS WITH MOLINEUX.

"How long have you been employed with Molineux altogether?"

"About eleven years."

"How long ago did you quit the employment of Morris Hermann & Co.?"

"About two years ago."

"What were your duties there?"

"I was forewoman in the paris green department."

Mr. Osborne here handed the witness exhibits E, D, and G. They are letters to patent medicine firms written in the names of Cornish and Barnet and on blue-tinted paper with three crescents entwined as a crest. He asked her if she had ever seen such paper and she said she had.

"Where did you see it?"

"In Mr. Molineux's room."

"In what part of the room?"

"In the sideboard drawer."

The witness appeared greatly frightened at this point. Molineux leaned forward in his chair, and resting his face on his folded hands regarded her narrowly. While the jurors were looking at the exhibits she glanced at her former employer and it was apparently only by a strong effort of the will that she kept back her tears. Molineux was pale, but he smiled from time to time and his smile seemed to reassure the witness.

"How long has he had that room in the factory?" went on Mr. Osborne.

"For five years."

"In what month did you first see this paper?"

"In August, 1898."

"You don't mean that identical paper, do you?" put in the Recorder.

"No, paper similar to that," said the witness.

"Did you ever see it again?" continued Mr. Osborne.

"Yes, in October, 1898."

"About how much of the paper did you see in the sideboard in October?"

"About half a dozen sheets."

"Did you take any of it?"

"Yes, three sheets."

"What did you do with it?"

"I wrote a letter on one sheet to Peter Wilson of Trenton."

LOST THE OTHER SHEET.

"What did you do with the rest?"

"I lost it. I don't know what became of it."

"When did you lose it?"

"About Christmas, 1898."

"Didn't you lose it about the time you first heard of this case?"

"No, I did not."

"Did you come to New York as a willing witness?" said Mr. Osborne, starting on another tack in order to calm the witness, who was very nervous.

"I did not want to come," was the frank answer.

"Did you ever see Mr. Weeks before?"

"Yes, I went to his office in January, 1898. He sent for me."

"Did you see Mr. Molineux there?"

"Yes."

"Did Mr. Weeks talk to you about a lawyer in Newark?"

"Yes."

"What lawyer was that?"

"William R. Guild."

"At whose request did you go there?"

"At the request of Detective Glori."

"Have you been in the habit of visiting the office of Mr. Guild every week since Molineux was arrested?"

"Yes."

"Did you call every Friday?"

"Friday or Saturday."

"Did Mr. Guild tell you to stay in Newark?"

"He did not," said the witness with emphasis.

"I ask you it you did not receive a check each week from Mr. Guild when you called?"

Mr. Weeks interposed an objection and was sustained by the Court. The witness looked relieved.

"I show you a paper, this check," said Mr. Osborne, waving it in the air. "Did you not receive it from Mr. Guild? Is it not one of a number that you received?"

There was another objection by Mr. Weeks, which was sustained, and the question was not answered. Mr. Osborne then turned the girl over to Mr. Weeks for cross-examination.

THE CROSS-EXAMINATION.

"Was it subsequent to the time you left Hermann & Co.'s employ that you saw this blue paper?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"It was."

"Did you ever see any paper like this before you saw it in October and August, 1898?"

"Never."

"Are you sure?"

"I am."

"And you are positive that this is the kind of paper you saw?"

"I am positive."

The witness then reiterated that she took three sheets of the six that were in the drawer. She said she counted what was there and took half. She used only one sheet in her correspondence, and she also used the same kind of envelope.

"When did you last see Fred Kuhl?" asked Mr. Weeks, coming back to the other subject of the direct examination.

"About eight months ago."

"What was his position in the factory?"

"Laborer."

"In the color department?"

"Yes."

"Were his hands all stained?"

"They were."

"Has he a light beard?"

"His beard was blonde once, but it is turning gray."

"Is it as gray as the foreman's beard?" asked Mr. Weeks, pointing to Juror Martin, whose beard is almost white.

"Not quite. It is about the color of the foreman's mustache."

"How do you fix the date as October when you last saw this paper?"

"I don't know how I fix it, but I am sure it was that time."

"Were you ever in the factory after October, 1898?" asked Mr. Osborne on redirect examination.

"Yes, twice."

"When?"

"In January and February, 1899."

"Whom did you see there at those times?"

"Mr. Molineux."

"About what time in February was it?"

"I think it was on the day before Mr. Molineux was arrested."

"Did you go there to see him?"

"Yes."

"What did you talk about?"

"I haven't the slightest recollection."

"What day in January was it that you were in Mr. Weeks's office?"

"I cannot remember."

"Whom did Mr. Weeks send after you in January?"

"Robert Zeller."

"Has he not been in the employ of Molineux for years?"

"He has."

RECORDER TAKES THE WITNESS.

"I have not been able to find the witness Zeller," Mr. Osborne announced, and Mr. Weeks made a vigorous objection, asking the Court to instruct the District Attorney to act with some decency and fairness to the defendant." This remark called forth another wrangle and then the Recorder took a hand. Slowly he turned toward the witness, and in the mildest and most persuasive tone, said: "You can go home now, but before you leave the stand I want to ask you a few questions."

The Recorder started easily by asking the frightened woman if she recognized the paper and how. She said she remembered the color and the crescents, and that she was attracted by it because she thought it pretty. She told again about seeing it in the sideboard drawer and said she was in the habit of opening these drawers to look for magazines to read.

"You have not been engaged in any business since you left the factory two years ago?"

"No," with downcast eyes.

"You have not received pay from any one in that time?"

"No," softly.

"Did you ever tell the defendant that you had taken that paper?"

"No."

"Did you ever tell any one?"

"I never did."

"Turn your chair this way," said the Recorder. "Your name is Mary, is it not? Yes? Well, now, Mary, tell me, is your father living?"

"Yes."

"And your mother?"

"Yes."

"Did you go to school in Bayonne?"

"Yes."

"To what school?"

"No. 5, in the Fifth Ward."

"And you went to church, did you not, Mary?"

"Yes."

"What church was it?"

"St. Mary's Catholic."

"Did you belong to any sodality or society there?"

"No." replied the woman, her head drooping.

"Now, Mary, you know that you are expected to tell the truth, don't you?"

"Yes, Mr. Goff, I do."

"And you will tell it, I know, will you not?"

"Yes, Sir."

"All that you have told is the truth, is it not?"

"Yes, Sir."

"You knew the defendant?"

"Yes."

"He has treated you kindly, has he not?"

"Yes, Sir."

"That wouldn't keep you from telling the truth, would it, Mary?"

"No, Sir, it wouldn't."

WOMAN PLEADS FORGETFULNESS.

"Now, try to remember who it was that spoke to you about this paper."

"I can't remember," pleaded the woman, trying to raise her eyes so as to get a glance at Molineux.

"Now, look at me, Mary," said the Recorder, detecting the vagrant glance. "Now we will see. You don't feel excited, do you?"

"No, Sir."

"Now, tell us who spoke to you about the paper."

The witness did not answer. She looked at the Recorder as if charmed, and she struggled to keep back the tears that seemed near the surface. Three times the Recorder asked the question in such a low tone that none except those very close to him could hear.

"Look at that gentleman sitting at the table with the glasses on," pointing to Mr. Carvalho. "Did he speak to you about it?"

"No, Sir."

"Look at the other gentleman, Mr. Battle. Did he speak to you about the paper?"

"No, Sir."

"Was it this gentleman?" pointing to Col. Beard, the stenographer.

"No, Sir."

"Now, if you know who did not speak to you about it, how is it that you cannot remember who did?"

"Oh, I don't know!" half sobbed the unhappy woman. "I don't know!"

The Recorder went on, more gently than ever: "You are a good girl, are you not, Mary?"

"I have always tried to be," said the woman, bursting into tears and sobbing violently.

"Don't be afraid, Mary," went on the Recorder, pressing his advantage. "No one here will hurt you. You will be treated with the greatest kindness."

The courtroom was as still as a tomb. The jurors and spectators leaned forward, straining to hear the questions and answers. Miss Melando's frame shook with the force of her sobbing. The white-haired Recorder seemed as if coaxing a petted and spoiled child.

"You have nothing to secrete, have you, Mary?" he went on, as the woman wiped her eyes.

"No, Sir; nothing."

"There is nothing that you would rather not have known?"

"No, Sir; no, Sir; nothing at all."

MR. WEEKS SPOKE TO HER.

"Now tell us who spoke to you about that paper?"

"Mr. Weeks. Mr. Weeks spoke to me about it," she said, with a great sigh of relief. Mr. Weeks leaned forward in his chair. His face did not change, and a look from the Court stopped a word that started from his lips.

"When did he speak to you about it?"

"In January."

"Where?"

"In his office."

"I can't hear the witness, your Honor," put in Mr. Weeks, who seemingly could no longer control himself. The witness tried to look up, but the Recorder caught her eye and went on:

"Don't mind what any one says," he said. "Those lawyers talk to one another and to the stenographer. They are not talking to you. Look at me." There was no tone of command in this. It was like a plea.

Recorder Goff had gained his point, and to relieve the tension he went back to the date of the taking of the paper by the witness.

"Now, you say you went to the office of Hermann & Co. in February. Was Mr. Molineux there?"

"Yes."

"Did you see Molineux in his room?"

"Yes."

"At that time had you read anything in the newspapers about this case?"

"Yes."

"Now, how did you come to go to Mr. Weeks's office?"

"I went of my own accord."

"Why, did you not tell us that Zeller sent for you?"

"Oh, yes," said the witness, frightened again to the verge of collapse. "I was mistaken. Indeed I was."

"That is all right," said the Recorder, soothingly. "I understand that. Any one is likely to be mistaken. Was the message Zeller sent verbal or written?"

"It was a note."

"Did you go to Mr. Weeks's office the same day?"

"Yes."

"Now, how did you come to visit the factory in February?"

"I went of my own accord."

"Had you received any letters about that time?"

"No, Sir."

"Now, why did you go to the factory?"

"I went to see Mr. Molineux; he was a friend of mine." said the woman, sobbing again.

"But you must have had some reason for going?"

"No, I had none."

WENT TO SEE MOLINEUX.

"Why did you go in January?"

"Just to see Mr. Molineux. I was out shopping, and just dropped in, as I had done on occasions before."

"Did you see him when you went into the factory?"

"Yes."

"And what did he say?"

"He sent word that he would like to see me, and I went to his room."

"What did he want to see you about?"

"Nothing in particular."

"How long was this before you went to Mr. Week's office?"

"About a week or ten days."

"At the time you visited him you knew that he was mixed up in this case?"

"Yes."

"And your visit was one of sympathy, was it not, Mary?"

"Yes, Sir, sympathy. It meant nothing in particular, I assure you."

"Did you tell him you were sorry for him?"

"Yes, Sir, something like that."

"What did he say?"

"I cannot remember. I think he said something to the effect that he was not worrying."

Mr. Weeks interrupted again with the statement that he could not hear, and the Recorder told the witness to pay no attention to interruptions.

"Did you go to the drawer of the sideboard on that day in January?"

"No, Sir."

"Was there any talk that day about your taking the paper?"

"No, Sir."

"Don't you remember reading in the newspapers about some blue paper with entwined crescents connected with the case?"

"Not at that time."

"Did you ever get any letters from Mr. Molineux?"

"Yes. I received some two or three years ago."

"Have you them now?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you ever show any of Molineux's letters to any one?"

A MYSTERIOUS QUESTION.

Nothing connected with this question was brought out on the direct examination, and what the Recorder was driving at was a mystery. The import of the question was not explained.

"I do not remember that I did," answered the witness.

"Now, think again, Mary," said the Recorder. "You have girl confidants, have you not? Did you ever show them any of the defendant's letters?"

"Only an order for a dress."

"I did not mean that," said the Recorder, whose influence over the witness seemed to be waning. "Will you swear that you did not show the letters to any one?"

"No, and I will not swear that I did," said the woman, more boldly.

"Did you ever go to the factory after February?"

"No, Sir."

"At the time of your last visit in February did you speak to him about the case. Did you speak of your visit to Mr. Weeks?"

"No, Sir. Not a word."

"Who was it that you showed the order from Molineux to?"

"To Mrs. Steele of 275 Wayne Street, Jersey City."

The witness explained that this was in October, 1898, and that she had carried the order in her pocketbook since the March preceding.

"You kept the order as a kind of keepsake?"

"Yes, Sir."

"What did you do with it?"

"I burned it."

"Where?"

"In Mrs. Steele's house."

"Why should you have done that when you had kept it so long as a memento?"

"It was of no further use to me. I wanted to burn up a lot of papers and cards."

"I suppose you want to go home now, Mary?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Well, you can go."

The witness left the stand with faltering steps and bowed head. She did not look up once in her long walk to the door. It is understood that Mr. Weeks may call her again as a witness for the defense.

The jury made a request that the testimony of the witness be read. A number of jurors said that they had not heard it, and the balance of the morning session was taken up in reading the questioning of the Recorder and the answers.

TESTIMONY OF THE EXPERT.

Mr. Weeks opened the afternoon session by admitting the authenticity of a number of letters, and photographs of them were passed to the jury. Expert Kinsley was told to look them over, and when he had done so he swore in answer to a question by Mr. Osborne that in all his experience he had never seen anyone write the word "oblige" as it appeared in these admitted letters. The Burns letter, one of the admitted writings, was then handed to the expert and to the jury, along with the following:

Gentlemen.

Please find inclosed $1 for which send Dr. Parler's Marriage Guide, and oblige.

H. C. BARNET,
257 West 42 Street, New York City.

Dear Sir

Please send book and greatly oblige

H. C. BARNET,
257 West 42 Street, New York City.

Mr. Osborne said that he wanted the exhibits to go in for style as to wording, in comparison with the Burns letter, as well as for handwriting. He referred to the punctuation, and Mr. Weeks protested that he had not fairly stated the case.

"I desire the Court to tell the District Attorney that it is his business to be honest," said Mr. Weeks.

"Oh, you don't mean that," said Mr. Osborne.

"I do mean it," said Mr. Weeks hotly.

Mr. Kinsley then made his comparisons, drawing the word "oblige" on sheets of white paper tacked against a blackboard. He said there were differences in the various letters, but that in his opinion it was not possible that they could have been written by any other than the defendant. "I was convinced of this in my own mind beyond the shadow of a doubt before I made my report," said Mr. Kinsley.

Mr. Kinsley made the same technical comparison of the word "find" as it appeared in the various letters and made the same statement regarding it. He was still on the stand when the session closed.

Mr. Osborne said in answer to a question from Mr. Weeks that he knew of no other interpolated testimony that he would introduce for the present. He said his examination of Mr. Kinsley would take at least all of the morning session to-day.

MR. GUILD AND MARY MELANDO.

Newark Lawyer Says He Advised Her as to Her Legal Rights.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—William B. Guild, the Newark lawyer referred to by Mamie Melando in her testimony in the Molineux case to-day, is one of the leading lawyers of this city and is a member of the Board of Police Commissioners. When seen this afternoon he said:

"My relations with Mamie Melando, to which she referred, were those of counsel and client. She came to me to ascertain what her rights were. What she wanted to know was whether or not, in case she did not desire to go to New York to testify in the Molineux case, she could be made to go. I told her that while she remained in New Jersey there was no power that could get her out of it to testify in New York. She paid me a fee and I acted as her counsel. I did not mix in the case at all, but simply told the girl her rights under the statutes.

"I will say that the way the girl was gotten into New York was a disgrace, and the District Attorney's men in New York ought to be ashamed of the course they had the detectives follow. Still, if she read the papers after Molineux's arrest she must have known she was wanted as a witness. I told her what her situation was and she's a pretty bright girl. There's no reason why she should have been warned by a local detective that she was wanted, as it has been reported she was, for there wasn't any need for her to be posted if she took my advice."

CHILD BETRAYS A BIGAMIST.

Little One's Curiosity Led to George W. Hewitt's Imprisonment.

The curiosity of one of his children to learn "how many mammas" she was going to have led to the imprisonment yesterday of George W. Hewitt, a Brooklyn resident, for bigamy. He was sentenced to one year in Sing Sing Prison by Justice Aspinall in the Kings County Court.

Hewitt has had four wives. His first died after the birth of her third child. He was divorced from his second wife and separated from his third.

Hewitt moved to Brooklyn with his three children by his first wife, and married Mamie Blanche of 1,311 Gates Avenue. Her suspicions were aroused when her eldest stepchild said to her: "I wonder how many mammas we're going to have?"

Mrs. Hewitt No. 4 found that wife No. 3 was still living, and on complaint of the latter Hewitt was indicted for bigamy. Hewitt is thirty-eight years old.

Big Ice Deal in Full Effect.

The big ice deal, by which the American Ice Company succeeds the Consolidated Ice Company, has been in full effect since Dec. 1. All the bills of the Consolidated Company sent out to its customers this month have stamped upon them the words "American Ice Company, successor to." In October the new concern was capitalized at $60,000,000, and incorporated under the New Jersey laws. The scheme, it is said, was promoted by Charles W. Morse, who was President of the Consolidated and holds the same office in the new company. The American Company has branches in Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Chicago.

New Trolley Road's First Accident.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 11.—The first accident on Senator John Kean's new trolley road, on which the cars made their first trips yesterday, from Staten Island Sound to Elmora, occurred to-day, when the nine-year-old son of Dr. Hurly of Elmora, while attempting to get on one of the cars, fell and was dragged some distance. He was badly bruised and cut about the body.

Mexican Mine Owner a School Teacher

SYRACUSE, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Mary D. Grace of this city, one of the principal stockholders of the company to which the Supreme Court of Durango has restored ownership of silver and lead mines, worth several millions, is a teacher in the public schools, and has with difficulty from her salary conducted the expensive litigation for her rights. She is confident that the highest court of Mexico, to which an appeal has been taken, will affirm the decision.

WAR AGAINST MR. CARNEGIE.

Details of the Reported Deal by Which Mr. Frick Will Head Union Steel.

An effort was made yesterday to obtain the confirmation or denial by John D. Rockefeller of a circumstantial account published in Philadelphia of the reported deal by which, it is said, Henry C. Frick is to become the head of the new Union Steel Company, organized to wage war on the Carnegie interests. Mr. Rockefeller could not be seen. His secretary, a woman, took the publication into his private office, presumably for his perusal, and upon coming out declared that there was nothing to be said about the matter. In reply to a question she said that she was not authorized either to affirm or deny the published reports.

According to the publication Mr. Frick's backers in the Union Steel Company besides Mr. Rockefeller are W. L. and A. W. Mellon of Pittsburg. The steel manufacturing assets of the new concern, it is said will consist of the great Mesaba deposits of ore on Lake Superior, which are controlled by Mr. Frick rather than by Mr. Carnegie, as has been supposed; the Rockefeller system of lake carriers, and an unlimited supply of coke to be provided by the H. C. Frick Coke Company. As the base of its operations the Union Steel Company is said to have selected a tract of land in the Monongahela Valley, about thirty miles from Pittsburg, and in the heart of a region in which there are abundant supplies of coal, natural gas, and limestone. It is said that the company will begin operations by the erection of several blast furnaces, each of upward of 600 tons' daily capacity, after which a monster steel plant will be built.

It is declared that Mr. Frick's action in leaving the Carnegie Company was due to the fact that he was not permitted to carry out some of his plans, one of which contemplated the building of shipyards on Lake Erie and maintaining an independent line of ore boats on the great lakes. This and other matters, it is said, led to the negotiations by which Mr. Carnegie was to have sold his interests to a new company, with Mr. Frick at its head, and these negotiations fell through because Mr. Carnegie imposed the condition that the new concern should bear his name.

MERCHANT BEAT HIS HORSE.

Brooklynite, Arrested on Complaint of a Citizen, Makes Threats Based on His "Big Pull."

Frank Miller, twenty-eight years old, a dealer in molasses, of 479 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn, was locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station last night on the charge of cruelty to animals. George B. Martini, thirty-five years old, a confectioner, of 61 Court Street, Brooklyn, who was with him at the time, was arrested on the charge of intoxication.

The men had a buggy drawn by a large white horse. They spent several hours in a saloon at the Grand Circle. When they came out the horse did not start quickly enough to please Miller, and he gave the animal a terrific lashing and sawed the reins so that the animal reared and fell. Miller and Martini jumped from the buggy and the former began again to lash the fallen beast. A crowd of citizens gathered, and there were angry protests, but Miller said it was his horse and threatened to punch the first man who interfered.

Walter Breede of 146 West Forty-sixth Street did interfere, however, and, seizing Miller, struggled with him until Policemen John Conran and Frank Kelly of the West Forty-seventh Street Station arrived. They took charge of Miller, and upon Mr. Breede's offer to make a charge, placed him under arrest. On the way down Eighth Avenue to the station Miller protested that he had a "big pull" in Brooklyn; told of his prominence in that borough's politics, and promised his captor that his uniform would be taken from him very quickly.

"You'll fix you. I'm York's friend," he said, referring to President York of the Police Board.

At Forty-ninth Street Miller declined to walk any farther, and insisted that the policeman call an ambulance to take him to the station. As the policeman declined to call a conveyance, Miller said he would have to carry him. He thereupon sat down on the walk. The policeman jerked him to his feet and dragged him the rest of the way.

After reaching the station house Miller telegraphed to friends in Brooklyn, and within a couple of hours they began to arrive with offers to bail him out. Bonds were finally given, and Miller was allowed to go. His maltreated horse in the meantime had been taken to a livery stable.

CUBAN TEACHERS ASK MORE PAY

Assert that They Are Not Sufficiently Recompensed.

HAVANA, Dec. 11.—The teachers of Havana have presented a petition to Gen. Brooke, in the course of which they say:

"It is frequently asserted by Americans that 80 per cent. of the Cubans cannot read, and that for this reason they are not fit to govern themselves. It is, therefore, very important to educate the Cubans; but with the salaries quoted in the recent order it is impossible for the teachers to live. They see, with much mortification, that salaries in other branches of the public service are being raised, while the salaries of teachers are being lowered.

"They ask that the salaries of teachers in Havana be fixed at $125 a month, and that in the other principal towns of the island the compensation be fixed at $100 a month.

"There are not eight teachers who know English. In no country in the world is a public school teacher required to teach other than his or her own language. If English is to be taught in Cuba, the petitioners request that special teachers be provided, and that all teachers be Cubans or Cuban citizens, except, if necessary, those who are to teach English."

Mr. Alexis E. Frye, Superintendent of Cuban Schools, maintains that the Cuban teachers, on the average, receive higher pay than public school teachers in any other country in the world, considering the fact that they are paid throughout the entire twelve months.

NINE HURT IN A COLLISION

Electric Car Wrecks a Horse Car in West Broadway.

SLIPPERY TRACK THE EXCUSE

Injured Passengers Refuse to Lodge a Complaint and the Police Make No Arrests.

There was a collision between a horse and an electric car shortly before 8 o'clock last evening near the corner of West Broadway and North Moore Street. Nine persons in the horse car, which was thrown into the gutter by the force of the collision, were injured, and, after being extricated from the wreck, were taken to the house of Engine Company No. 30, at 7 North Moore Street, and cared for by Surgeon McWhorter of the Hudson Street Hospital. All were able to go home after their wounds had been dressed. The police made no arrests.

Just before the collision, horse car No. 11 of the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery line, drawn by two horses, rounded the curve from Walker Street into West Broadway. Ten passengers were in the car. There is a cross-over track for these cars south of Walker Street. The driver of the car, Bernard McHugh of 241 Clinton Street, evidently thinking that he could easily cross the other tracks before an electric car which was coming north could reach the crossing, kept on, but just as his car had lapped the tracks of the electric road, Sixth Avenue car No. 1,622 hit his car with full force.

Women screamed and men pushed one another in vain efforts to leave the horse car, but they all went over in the crash, and the car was thrown on its side and then rolled over, until part of it lapped the down-town tracks of the electric road. All the glass in the car was broken and its sides were smashed.

Policeman Ferris of the Leonard Street Station heard the cries of the injured passengers, as also did the firemen of Engine No. 10, and they rushed to the scene. Ferris sent in an ambulance, which soon arrived with Surgeon McWhorter in charge. The firemen and others soon picked up the begrimed and blood-stained passengers and carried them into the engine house, which for two hours was turned into a reception hospital. The clothing of the passengers was in shreds, but the surgeon soon found that no one was seriously hurt.

Following is a list of the injured persons: Charles Mamitzer, forty-seven years old, of Jersey City Heights; Louis Grass, aged twenty-five, of 131 South Eleventh Street, Philadelphia; Miss Grace Leeson, eighteen years old, of 90 Rivington Street; James J. Hoey, twenty-seven years old, of 100 East One Hundred and Sixth Street; David Cantor, thirty-three years old, of 135 Gray Street, Jersey City; John Napier, forty years old, of 43 North Moore Street; Samuel Sadulsky, thirty-five years old, of 425 Adams Street, Hoboken; J. Friedland, fifty-six years old, of 481 Avenue C, Bayonne. McHugh, the car driver, was also cut by flying glass, and otherwise injured. The conductor of the horse car, Timothy Reen, of 430 Cherry Street, saved himself by jumping.

The electric car, which was scarcely damaged at all, was in charge of Motorman Frank J. Winant of 161 West Fiftieth Street. He stuck to his post, and was unhurt. He told the police that he had seen the horse car in time to stop and had set his brake, but that the tracks were slippery, and his car kept right on, despite his efforts to stop it. He was not arrested, as no one would make a charge against him.

The electric road was blocked for nearly half an hour. The Metropolitan Street Railway Company, it is said, will institute an investigation to-day.

MENAGE NOT TO BE TRIED.

He Was the President of the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 11.—Louis F. Menage, the fugitive President of the defunct Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company of this city, who returned voluntarily from his hiding place in Mexico a few months ago, after five years' absence, was to-day made a free man. County Attorney Louis A. Reed entered nolles in all of the three indictments for embezzlement that have been hanging over Menage for six years.

The memorandum filed by the County Attorney says that evidence against Menage is the same as that with which futile efforts were made to convict William F. Streetor, the Vice President of the company; that four material witnesses are dead; that others are out of the State; that documentary evidence has been returned to the original holders, and that the trial would cost the county at least $5,000, with no chance of conviction.

CITY CHARTER CHANGES.

The Governor Says Two or Three Matters May Be Acted On at Once.

ALBANY, Dec. 11.—Speaking of the probable appointment by himself of a commission to remodel the charter of New York City, Gov. Roosevelt said to-day that there might be two or three matters that might be acted on at once.

For instance, many people in New York City believed that the building code was too sweeping in its power and that it should be restricted, while others were of the opinion that the powers conferred on the Municipal Assembly were dangerous and should be curtailed. The general remodeling of the charter, the Governor said, should be left to a commission.

A CHILD BEGGARS' COMBINE.

Those in Chicago Assigned Certain Territory to Each Other.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The existence of a beggars' trust, which regulates the selling of chewing gum and matches and the collection of alms in the down-town office buildings in Chicago, was apparently disclosed in the Juvenile Court to-day. Norah Greeley, a twelve-year-old girl, who has for more than a year sold chewing gum and begged in the Masonic Temple, informed Judge Tuthill that she would not dare beg in the City Hall or in any building except her own because "they" would not let her. "They," she said, were the other little girls who begged, and who agreed not to invade one another's territory.

Norah and her little sister Mary, four years old, were brought into court by Officer Goggin of the Visitation and Aid Society, who told the court that for more than a year the parents of the little girl, Thomas and Mary Greeley, otherwise known as Grady or Cooley, had been supported by the profits of her labor.

TO HEAR ROBERTS AGAIN TO-DAY

Utah Man's Witnesses to Receive Traveling Expenses.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Roberts investigating committee was not in session to-day, having adjourned until to-morrow, when Mr. Roberts will be heard further. A member of the committee stated that there was little further doubt a sub-committee, and possibly the full committee, would have to visit Utah and take testimony.

Roberts's witnesses will be summoned with the others, and will receive the same allowances for traveling expenses, &c., as the other witnesses receive.

The Manica Again Sighted.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 11.—The steamer Manica (of London,) from Shields for New York, which was reported disabled in mid-ocean, her thrust shaft having broken, but which was later spoken by the steamer Manhattan, with her damages temporarily repaired and proceeding slowly, was passed Dec. 6 by the steamer Imani, which arrived here to-day. The Manica was spoken in latitude 40.10 north and longitude 51.30 west, and signaled "all well."

GOMPERS ON LABOR ACTIVITY.

Report Read at Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—The nineteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened to-day. In the absence of President Gompers, who on account of his recent bicycle accident is detained in Washington, James Duncan, Second Vice President, presided.

Mr. Duncan read the report of President Gompers, which is mainly devoted to a discussion of matters relating to the Federation. In one chapter of the report, entitled "Industrial Revival," Mr. Gompers says:

"The revival of industry which we have witnessed within this past year is one for general congratulation, and it should be our purpose to endeavor to prolong this era of more general employment and industrial activity. In this effort no power is so potent as organized labor. If we but follow a right and practical course.

"When the present industrial activity first manifested itself, employers generally sought to increase the hours of labor of all; and, had it not been for the determined stand made by our fellow-unionists, as large a number would be unemployed during this period as were unemployed during the period of industrial depression.

"It is beyond question that the wages of the organized workers have been increased, and in many instances the hours of labor either reduced, or, at least, maintained. Practically, the only advantage which has come to unorganized labor from the industrial revival has been longer hours of daily labor, with additional burdens to bear.

"With the workers toiling longer hours of labor than are necessary, without the opportunity of cultivating and increasing their consuming capacity—that is, without increasing their power of consumption nearly commensurate with the wonderful productivity of modern labor, the present industrial activity will be short-lived. Even to-day, when nearly all join in the joyous acclaim of industrial progress and commercial success, we may witness in spite of our cities poverty, misery, and despair. The slums of our great cities stand as an accusing spectre to the maladministration of our economic, political, and social affairs. In the midst of this wonderful era of prosperity, squalor, and degrading environments are the natural results of unnatural and inhuman conditions.

"The trade union movement from time immemorial has devoted its largest efforts toward obtaining humanizing conditions for all. It has not sought to destroy but to build up manhood, character and the highest attainable conditions of society. That it has not made faster progress is due not to us, who have done our duty to our fellow-workers, but to those who have failed to ally themselves in the noble cause."

ACCUSED OF HAVING TWO WIVES.

Norwalk (Conn.) Man Arrested on a Jealous Woman's Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 11.—Henry Garrison is under arrest here charged with bigamy. He is the same man who was accused some months ago of having two wives. Upon the death of his first wife Garrison married his mother-in-law, Mrs. Sarah A. Pope, on Oct. 13, 1898. On July 24, 1899, he married Etta Reynolds, with whom he had lived but a short time. It is said, when the other wife, becoming jealous of his attentions to the last Mrs. Garrison, made a complaint against him, and Garrison left town to escape arrest on a charge of bigamy. He asked the Reynolds woman to join him in New York City. She enticed him to Norwalk, and his arrest followed.

JAMES W. HOUGHTON A JUSTICE.

Gov. Roosevelt Appoints the Saratoga Man to the Supreme Bench.

ALBANY, Dec. 11.—Gov. Roosevelt announces the appointment of James W. Houghton of Saratoga as a Justice of the Supreme Court for the Fourth Judicial District to succeed the late Justice Putnam. Mr. Houghton is now the County Judge of Saratoga county.

The designation of Walter Lloyd Smith as an Associate Justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the Fourth Department has been revoked at his own request, and Gov. Roosevelt has designated him as an Associate Justice of Appellate Division for the Third Department, to take effect Jan. 1 next.

Murderer Burns Indicted.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 11.—The Westchester County Grand Jury met here to-day especially to consider the case of Edgar C. Burns, the young man who shot and killed Station Agent Herbert B. CURRENCY BILL IN DEBATE

Gold Standard Discussed in the House of Representatives.

McCLELLAN IS IN OPPOSITION

New York Representative Calls on All Sound-Money Democrats to Oppose the Republican Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—In the House to-day the Currency bill was discussed at length by representatives of both parties. The debate was opened by Mr. Overstreet, (Rep., Ind.,) who will have charge of the measure on the floor. Speeches were also made by Mr. Maddox, (Dem., Ga.,) Mr. McClellan, (Dem., N. Y.,) Mr. De Armond, (Dem., Mo.,) and Mr. Dolliver, (Rep., Iowa.)

One of the features of the debate was the speech of Mr. McClellan of New York, who for the first time announced his position on the question of currency legislation. There had been some doubt as to his attitude, for while generally recognized as a sound-money man a report had gone abroad that he might find some excuse to oppose the Republican caucus measure. This prediction was verified. He not only declared himself against the bill, but urged all sound-money Democrats to oppose it.

He argued that the measure, if it became a law, would cause an enormous contraction of the currency. He also opposed it for a number of other reasons.

OVERSTREET OPENS DEBATE.

In opening the debate, Mr. Overstreet, after an elaborate exposition of the features of the bill and the method of their operation, which followed the line of his report on the measure, heretofore printed, said in part:

"The proposition to allow National banks to issue circulation to the par value of the bonds deposited for their security is neither new nor partisan. It has been recommended by four Presidents and five Secretaries of the Treasury, and bills containing such provision have been introduced in Congress and supported by members of both political parties. It is entirely consistent with the present banking system. The same reasons which justify the issue of 90 per cent. of the bonds will justify an issue to the par value of the bonds. The only objection advanced, aside from that of demagogic attack, generally, upon banks, is that it permits too large an increase of the volume of circulation and threatens an inflation. But it is unfair to compare the amount possible under the proposed bill with the amount of banknotes now in circulation. The lack of profit upon banknote circulation because of the tax has reduced such circulation far below the amount ever expected, and such reduction can be creditably charged to a contraction which was equally unexpected. The proper comparison is between the amount possible under the present law and the amount possible under the proposed amendment, which would be but a 10 per cent. increase, an amount which can be easily absorbed by the business of the country and utilized in as many different money centres as there are National banks. The repeal of the tax upon National banknotes and the substitution of a tax upon bank franchises, as measured by their capital, surplus, and undivided profits, are proposed in a spirit of fairness and for a just distribution of the burden of the tax. The larger banks will pay the tax in the same degree as the smaller banks, while the amount of revenue will be practically unchanged."

TO FIX THE GOLD STANDARD.

In conclusion Mr. Overstreet said:

"The advocates of currency reform firmly declare that the financial operations of the Government are upon the gold standard, but that the honest fears engendered by doubtful legislation, relative to silver coinage, and the persistent attack upon the standard of value, fully justify the legislation asked for. To firmly fix gold as the standard of value in unequivocal terms, made fully operative by all proper safeguards, is the central idea of the law proposed. It is believed that the country demands it and that our action will be ratified by the people. The supporters of the proposition are not confined to the Republican Party or to the so-called 'money centres.' Democrats of courage and conviction, have nobly dared to break from party lines and suffer, unflinchingly, the sting of the party whip, in honest and patriotic effort to uphold the integrity of the National credit and make secure the foundation of the vast and expanding business of our people. The American yeomanry in the great agricultural fields of the country, are fully awake to the importance of the subject and appreciate the wisdom of the legislation. Nearly all of those who wavered in 1896 corrected their error in 1898.

"While the question is economic and should be separated from partisan debate, yet the Republican Party will not attempt to escape from responsibility for the legislation, believing that it is wise for the country, safe for the people and in perfect harmony with the institutions of the Nation."

In the course of Mr. Overstreet's speech Mr. Shafroth, (Silverite, Col.,) interrupted to ask if the bill would not result in contracting the currency to the extent of the $480,000,000 in silver impounded.

"It would not," replied Mr. Overstreet, "because for every silver dollar which goes into the Treasury a gold dollar will go out into circulation." [Republican applause.]

MR. MADDOX IN REPLY.

Mr. Maddox, (Dem., Ga.,) was the first speaker in opposition to the bill. He said that, if he had analyzed the bill correctly, no measure had been presented to Congress in half a century fraught with so much importance to the country. He referred to former Speaker Reed's New York speech in which he advised the immediate enactment of the gold standard legislation before some branch of the Government got away from the Republican Party.

"The faithful," said he, "understand that this legislation must be enacted at once or not at all."

Mr. Maddox then proceeded with a detailed analysis of the bill. The enactment of gold standard legislation, he declared, had never been an issue before the people. If gold was now the "existing standard," as was contended, it was so by the unlawful usurpation of the executive offices of the Government.

Facility for raiding the Treasury under the bill, he said, had never been hitherto equaled. It would convert every obligation of the Treasury into a gold obligation, and would compel the Government to sell millions of gold to the amount of 25 per cent. of all the outstanding notes of whatever character. He argued that under the bill banks with $1,000,000 capital, now required to deposit bonds equal to a third of their capital in the Treasury, were only required to deposit $50,000 in bonds, enabling the banks, he declared, to contract or expand the currency at will. He took up the Republican platform of 1896 to show that every Republican who now advocated the gold standard was an apostate. He had read at the Clerk's desk the speeches of some of the Republican leaders in 1897, declaring that the Republicans were for international bimetallism.

Mr. Maddox summed up his argument by declaring the measure to be a bill designed to legalize the authority usurped by the Secretary of the Treasury to put the country on a gold basis, to demonetize one-half the final money of redemption, to alter the obligations of the people without their consent into gold obligations, to contract the currency at the will of the banks, and to create a gigantic bank trust for the benefit of a few thousand people.

DOLLIVER FAVORS THE BILL.

At the conclusion of Mr. Maddox's remarks, Mr. Dolliver (Rep., Iowa,) took the floor.

In opening he poked some fun at the Democratic leaders for asking an additional period for incubating speeches on the gold and silver question. There was a time, he said, when he had figures and authorities on the financial question at his finger tips. Now he was called upon to speak with most of his figures at home and his authorities out of reach. Still he recognized the fact that at this stage of the controversy to hold on to one's figures meant to lose one's audience. [Laughter and applause.]

Proceeding, Mr. Dolliver read from the speech of Gov. Altgeld to the effect that the Republican Congress would obey orders and enact gold standard legislation. For himself, he said, he was proud to say that he was obeying orders—the orders of the people of his district—trying to put the laws of the country into harmony with their opinions. The pending bill was a compromise representing the united wisdom of all.

"There is something about the pursuit of the science of money," said he, "that enables every one of its students to comprehend his own ideas without being very hospitable toward the ideas of others." [Laughter.] This was a bill, he continued, to set at rest all doubt as to the standard in this country. It should be presented to the business men of the country as a Christmas gift. Mr. Dolliver went on to say that he did not want his record of past follies to be brought up against him. He had voted for the Sherman act in 1890, an act which he now regarded as a piece of unutterable stupidity.

In 1893, when the act came to be repealed, Mr. Dolliver said he was very much perplexed. He saw Senator Sherman one evening sitting outside his house, like Abraham outside his tent.

"Don't trouble yourself about the failure of your predictions regarding silver," said the Senator. "Every prophecy I made about it has turned out exactly the opposite." [Laughter.]

"Just as yours will now," interjected Mr. Cox, (Dem., Tenn.,) amid renewed laughter.

ACT OF 1893 COMMENDED.

Continuing, Mr. Dolliver commended the act of 1893 as one worthy of the Administration of Grant, and said he believed the country would have been better off if nothing had been done for silver after that act. He believed that the result of the campaign of 1896 settled the silver issue. A proposition which received a black eye in Iowa and Massachusetts at the same time, in his opinion, had no future in the intellectual life of the American people. In 1896 the cry of Bryan, he said, was for more money. Money was scarce. It was hoarded. The day after the election it came out from its hiding.

"Are you willing now," interrupted Mr. Sims, (Dem., Tenn.,) "that the mints should be opened to silver if an international agreement could be obtained?"

"No, Sir," replied Mr. Dolliver; "I have had my last whirl with silver. I have been humbugged for the last time."

Mr. Dolliver added that the cry had been for more money. In three years of Republican administration $400,000,000 had been added to the volume of the currency, more money than could have been coined by the Mints in ten years if the Mints had been opened to silver.

"In other words," said he, "we have done for you in three years more than you could have done for yourselves. Why don't you get out of the road and let the main procession move on?" [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Dolliver recalled Mr. Bryan's prophecy that the gold standard could not be enacted without a universal fall of prices.

"Is there a man in this chamber," he asked, "who will rise in his place and say that Mr. Bryan knew what he was talking about?"

Not a Democrat rose. Mr. Dolliver paused, reiterated his question and then resumed. "It is then confessed that in a question which goes to the heart of the controversy Mr. Bryan lacked wisdom."

He also called attention to Mr. Bryan's prediction that wages would fall and men would be thrown out of employment. Yet at the end of three years of Republican administration under the gold standard there was not an industrious man in the country out of employment. Those three years, he said, had resolved the last fears of the Republican Party as to the wisdom of enacting gold legislation. It could not have been done two years nor one year ago, but today the unanimous voice of the Republican Party was backed up by the experience of the business world.

In concluding, Mr. Dolliver said:

"Here, as the American people stand upon the edge of a new era, we propose to equip our business world with the best tool of exchange known to modern commerce. We propose to send our ships into all parts of the world, as we have raised our flag in the uttermost parts of the earth. And we want it understood in Europe and America, in Africa, in Asia, and in the islands of the sea that there is no longer a debate in the United States as to what the standard dollar of the American people is. [Applause.] We are going to write in the laws of this country what already is the practice of our Government, that every obligation of the United States shall be paid in gold. When a man comes to the counter of our Treasury we are going to lay down two coins before him, the gold dollar and the silver dollar. We are going to say to him, 'There are the standard coins; one of them is as good as the other; gold is the standard and silver is conformable to that standard. And the credit of the United States is out to make one just as good as the other; take your choice,' and for one I believe that when it is in there it will maintain the gold standard and a just equality of all coins of the United States." [Applause on the Republican side.]

OPPOSED BY MR. McCLELLAN.

Mr. McClellan (Dem., N. Y.,) opposed the bill. In the course of his remarks he said:

"I represent a constituency in the City of New York that will probably be as vitally affected by the passage of this bill as will any in the United States. If I am to vote for it I must be convinced not only that it does no harm, but that it does good and that it improves existing conditions. Hastily conceived and crudely drawn, its consequences unweighed and its results unknown, the Republican majority is to be dragooned into voting for this bill in proof of alleged conversion of its leaders from the Republican bimetallism of 1892 to the new doctrine of Republican monometallism of 1896.

BILL'S EFFECT ON BONDS.

"I do not wish it understood that I advocate the present system of banknote currency. The first direct consequence of the enactment of this bill will be a very great rise in the market price of Government bonds. Let me illustrate by one class of bonds. In 1895, when the then President of the United States was negotiating with the so-called 'bond syndicate' for the issue of a million dollar loan, the gentlemen who composed that syndicate agreed to take a 3 per cent. gold bond at par instead of a 4 per cent. coin bond authorized by the act of Jan. 14, 1875, at 104½. In other words, in their opinion, and it is conceded that they are the shrewdest, ablest financiers living, a 4 per cent. coin bond at 104½ is equal in value to a 3 per cent. gold bond at par.

"Now the enactment of the bill before the House will at once make all our coin bonds gold bonds, and according to the theory of the bond syndicate, which I am unwilling to dispute, a 4 per cent. coin bond at 104½ will be equal in value to a 4 per cent. gold bond at 133⅓, but the coin bonds that were issued at 104½ are now worth in the market 134. By this reasoning the substitution of the word "gold" for the word "coin" must increase their market price to 171, an increase of 27 4-5 per cent.

"If this be true in reference to this one issue it will necessarily be true in reference to all our outstanding coin bonds.

"It may be said in answer to this that my figures are exaggerated and that our coin bonds are to-day virtually gold bonds and selling on a gold basis, and that the substitution of the word gold for the word coin will not increase their market value. If this be true, then our credit is not nearly as good as that of Great Britain, a proposition that I fancy no member of this House will care to indorse.

"The average price of British consols during the year 1897 was a trifle under 113. Were the interest increased to 4 per cent. the consol would be worth 36¼, yet the consol is not by any manner of means as desirable a bond, even at the same rate of interest, as our 1923 4 per cents will be when made gold bonds. If our 1925 4 per cents are to-day gold bonds, when reduced to the terms of consols they would be worth only 92, or $210 less bond for bond than consols.

"I pass over the fact that the substitution of the word gold for the word coin will result in presenting an unearned bonus of $90,056,735 to the holders of the loan of 1925 alone. If this bill is of such vital importance to the country, as its supporters half heartedly insist, the mere presentation to the National bond holders of unearned premium at 27 4-5 per cent. should not be allowed to weigh against it.

BANK NOTE ISSUES.

"Another section of this bill permits our National banks to issue bank notes up to the par value of their holdings in United States bonds, instead of up to 90 per cent., as they are at present authorized, and substitutes a franchise tax for the present tax of 1 per cent. on bank note issues. Why? Because it is conceded, and rightly so, that the market price of Government bonds is to-day so high that it is more profitable for our National banks to sell their bond holdings and to reinvest their proceeds in other securities than it is to hold them as collateral for the issue of bank notes up to 90 per cent. of the par value of their holdings.

"This bill proposes to increase the authorized issue of banknotes one-ninth, while at the same time it increases the market value of our bonds one-fourth. If it is unprofitable to-day to issue banknotes, how much more unprofitable will it be after the enactment of this bill?

"Under present conditions for every 4 per cent. bond of the issue of 1925 held by a National bank $900 in banknotes may be issued, which, if loaned at 4 per cent. with the tax of 1 per cent. deducted, means a profit of $27 a year; adding to this $40 interest on the bond, makes a total profit of $67. Were the bond sold at the market price and the proceeds, $1,340, invested at 4 per cent., the profit for the year would be $53.60, or only $13.40 in favor of the banknote issue, scarcely enough to pay for the annoyance of submitting to the law in reference to banknote issues.

"By the proposed plan, for every 4 per cent. bond of the issue of 1925 held by a national bank, $1,000 in banknotes may be issued, which, if loaned at 4 per cent, with no tax deducted, would mean a profit of $40 a year, adding to this $40 interest on the bond would make a profit of $80. Were the bond sold at what would be its market price, the word gold having been substituted for the word coin and the proceeds, $1,710, invested at 4 per cent., the profit for the year would be $68.40, or only $11.60 in favor of the banknote issue and $1.80 less than under existing conditions.

BANKNOTES WOULD DISAPPEAR.

"Instead of increasing the number of banks of issue, this bill, if enacted, will reduce them to the vanishing point, and cause the disappearance of the $243,842,068 in banknotes outstanding Dec. 1, 1899, and the consequent contraction of the currency to that extent.

"During the debate I have heard this remarkable utterance: 'There can be no contraction of the currency under this system for the reason that either the note is in circulation, or, if redeemed, its equivalent is in circulation.'

"This statement is worthy of the ignorance that has inspired the bill. There is in circulation $405,253,656 in Treasury notes and United States notes, which under the terms of this bill must be redeemed in gold, and, once redeemed, not reissued except for gold. For the sake of argument, let us assume that the enactment of this bill will find as much gold in the Treasury as there was Dec. 7, 1899—that is, $230,462,213.43.

"On the 1st of December, 1899, the total circulation per capita in the United States was $25.85, which probably represents the smallest amount of circulation with which business can be carried on without resorting to temporary and clumsy makeshifts, such as Clearing House certificates. As a result of the contraction, which will be caused by this bill, the circulation per capita will be reduced to $19.21, or less than that of almost any other solvent country on earth, with the exception of the United Kingdom, whose banking facilities are far superior to our own, and which possesses an elastic currency, the like of which we have never known.

THE COUNTRY'S DANGER.

"You have claimed that you were the friend of the business man in this country. You have insisted that as a party, your one ambition was to make this country prosperous. Through no effort of yours, the country is prosperous, and now you assume that you were the cause of its prosperity, but you are unwilling to let well enough alone, and propose to improve conditions which you had no part in bringing about.

"Any business man will tell you that one of the chief dangers to the prosperity of this country is the inelasticity of our present monetary system; that under present conditions our currency is not capable of expansion or of contraction to meet the needs of trade. Every man employed in trade realizes that he has constantly hanging over his head, threatening him with bankruptcy the danger of tight money."

"If this is true in the great commercial cities, it is doubly a menace in sections of the country far removed from the money centres. You have the Government in all its branches, you have the power, you profess a philanthropic friendship for the business interests of this country, and yet, instead of trying to remedy the condition of affairs that exists to-day, you propose by this bill to make matters indefinitely worse by withdrawing the only semi-elastic currency we have, by contracting the circulation 25 per cent. and by reducing the per capita to $19.21.

"The enactment of this bill, revolutionizing the financial system of the country from top to bottom, contracting the currency, and reducing the per capita, will be followed by a money famine which must lead to the destruction of confidence and credit and to a commercial panic, the like of which this country has never seen.

DUTY DICTATES OPPOSITION.

"You are willing to risk all this; you are willing to sacrifice that prosperity which you claim has come because of you, and which we claim has come despite you; you are willing to ruin thousands and to plunge hundreds of thousands into poverty, light heartedly, unthinkingly, for the purpose of redeeming a platform promise, for the purpose of a little cheap political advantage.

"The results of the enactment of this bill will be, first, the making of our already inelastic currency still more rigid.

"Second, the increasing of our bonded debt over $265,000,000 and of our annual interest charges nearly $8,000,000.

"Third, the contraction of the currency by over $500,000,000 and the reduction of the per capita circulation to $19.21; and,

"Fourth, substitution for the endless chain of greenbacks, as at present, an endless chain of silver dollars to be redeemed, reissued, and re-redeemed in gold as often as presented.

"With a proper regard to my duty as a Representative from New York, with a conscientious desire to serve the best interests of my country, I cannot bring myself to vote for this bill.

"I have heard it said, Mr. Chairman, that some gentlemen on this side of the House, some sound-money Democrats, intend to vote for this bill, because they are convinced that by so doing they will aid the cause of sound money. I sincerely trust that I have been misinformed.

TO SOUND MONEY DEMOCRATS.

"I had firmly believed until recently that the Democratic Party upon the floor of this House would present a united front in opposition to this bill. I had hoped that those who believed in the free coinage of silver at the fixed ratio of 16 to 1 without the aid or consent of any other nation would have been governed by those who, while believing in bimetallism, doubt the possibility of maintaining the parity of the metals under free coinage,

"Sound-money Democrats, this bill does not aid the cause of sound money. I beg you, I implore you, before you resolve to cast your votes for it, bring to its consideration all the patriotism that is in you; ask yourselves if the passage of this bill will not be the end of all financial legislation, at least during our time; ask yourselves if this bill is not the severest blow that has ever been aimed at a sound financial system. And if, as I believe you will, you decide that this is a bad bill, and that its passage will not be for the best interests of the country, then stand up side by side with the party you all love and to which you all belong, and help to cast an undivided and a united Democratic vote against one of the worst pieces of legislation ever submitted to the United States Congress." [Loud and long-continued applause on the Democratic side.]

FEARS A BANK TRUST.

Mr. De Armond (Dem., Mo.,) followed in opposition to the bill. Replying to Mr. Dolliver, he said the Democrats had not been overborne in 1896 in the conflict of reason, but the Republican Party had won by summoning to their aid the corrupt and tremendous power of money and corporations. He charged the Republicans with deceiving the people in 1896. They were bimetallists then. If they were honest then they must be dishonest now; if honest now dishonest then. The change of the bonds from coin to gold bonds, he said, would make a free gift of $100,000,000 to the bondholders. He declared that after Mr. Dolliver's assertion that every voice in the Republican caucus was for the bill, not one member on the other side could go back to his constituents in the coming Congressional elections and plead as an excuse for voting for the bill that he yielded to the superior wisdom of his colleagues in caucus.

The bill would create a bank trust. He predicted that this measure would overwhelmingly defeat the Republican Party in 1900. When the people's victory was won next Fall, said he in conclusion, it must not be necessary to go to the "vine-clad cottage" at Canton, Ohio, to offer congratulations, but beyond the Mississippi to that modest home in Lincoln, Neb., where resided that great and stanch friend of the people. [Democratic applause.]

Mr. Greene (Penn.) then announced the death of his colleague, the late Representative Ermentrout of Pennsylvania, and at 5:05, as a further mark of respect, the House adjourned.

Established 1823.

WILSON WHISKEY.

That's All!

THE WILSON DISTILLING CO., Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS IN LINE.

Believed that at Least Seven Representatives Will Support the Republican Currency Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The position of the New York Democratic members of the House on the pending financial bill brought about much canvassing to-day, and there was talk that a conference had been held by those who will support the bill. This was denied, however, although there was considerable informal talk among that element favorable to the bill.

Mr. Driggs of Brooklyn openly states that he will vote for the bill, as he says he told his constituents he favored the gold standard and would vote for it.

While the others are not so outspoken, it is understood that Messrs. Clayton and Wilson of Brooklyn, Scudder of Oyster Bay, Levy and Ruppert of New York City, and Underhill of New Rochelle are also disposed to vote for the bill. Some of these gentlemen said to-day that several Democrats outside of the New York delegation were likely to vote for the bill.

MASON DENOUNCES BOER WAR.

Illinois Senator Urges a Resolution of Sympathy with the Transvaal Republic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The announced intention of Mr. Mason, (Rep., Ill.,) to address the Senate to-day on his resolution expressing the sympathy of the Senate with the South African republics in their war with Great Britain, and extending to them the hopes of the Senate for the success of their arms, drew a large audience to the Senate galleries.

While his address at times was vehement—almost passionate—Mr. Mason confined himself during a greater part of the time closely to his manuscript. In opening he said:

"The war between monarchy and republicanism began in earnest July 14, 1776, and no treaty of peace has ever been concluded, nor ever will be, until this question is settled right. The monarchial trust company, though often quarreling among themselves, have always agreed on one thing, that a republic is a mistake."

"But we are told that England was our friend in the war with Spain. How? Her people were our friends because her people are a Christian people; her Government has never been our friend, except for purposes of its own. I have no desire to twist the lion's tail, but truth compels the statement, so far as our interests are concerned, that for the last half century the Government of England and the people of England have been divided.

"You remember last year. The Government did all it could to divide the Union, but the brave, starving weavers refused to resolve against us, saying they would starve before they would say a word for slavery. But even suppose she were to-day our best friend, are we to be silent and unbold a wrong in consideration of that friendship? We Republicans are charged with a secret alliance with England. It cannot be true, and the vote which this or a similar resolution receives will answer the charge."

Mr. Mason maintained that, under the Monroe doctrine and on precedents previously well established, the United States had the same right to extend its sympathy and hopes for success to the Boers in their struggle for liberty as it had to interfere with Spain in its conduct of affairs in Cuba.

He urged that the interest of this country was aroused by the fact that the South African war was a struggle between democracy and royalty—between the divine right of Kings and the divine right of man.

"If we should speak," he declared, "and speak quickly, it would sting the politicians who brought on the war for greed of gold and cheer the poor, brave Dutch defender of his home."

Mr. Mason contended that the question involved in the controversy between Great Britain and the Transvaal, prior to hostilities, was simply one of supremacy in South Africa.

"And I ask," said he, "in common justice, what right has Great Britain to be supreme in South Africa?

"It is a fight to control South Africa, and the only way England could do it was to threaten, bulldoze, browbeat, and interfere with the Dutchman until, out of sheer humiliation and desperation, he was driven to fight."

Referring to Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Mason said:

"Let the distinguished Lilliputian statesman rattling around in Gladstone's shoes, trying to undo his work and break his promises, be assured that he is deceiving no one, except, possibly, himself."

He declared that no nation, except a professed bully, would make the demands upon another that Great Britain made upon the Transvaal Republic, and in closing said:

"I have not sought to excite prejudice by our past differences with England. They are forgotten and forgiven. But when the colors of a republic are struck and we sit silent, it would seem that we are ashamed of the institutions and by our silence give consent to the destruction of self-government in Africa. The Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World in New York Harbor is neither a myth, fiction, nor a lie. We may say without boasting that if self-government is right, we have helped the world. If I am right, this resolution will help. It will say to the world: 'Washington, Monroe, and Webster are dead, but the American policy still lives.' It may sting the oppressor, but it will be a message of affection and hope to the struggling republic."

Mr. Mason addressed the Senate for an hour and twenty-five minutes. He was not once interrupted in the course of his speech.

At its conclusion Mr. Lodge, after expressing the wish that Mr. Mason might have delivered his address in the British Parliament, said there was a wide gulf between private opinion and public official expressions. The Executive Department of the Government, he said, had assumed a neutral attitude toward the South African war. The passage of this resolution by the Senate would change immediately that attitude.

"If we are to depart from the position of neutrality," said Mr. Lodge, "it ought to be a subject of most serious consideration."

He moved, therefore, that the resolution be sent to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and it was so ordered.

Boer Resolution in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Representative Jett to-day introduced in the House a joint resolution expressing sympathy with the Boers. It is almost in the same terms as that introduced in the Senate by Mr. Mason.

PLANS TO CONTROL TRUSTS.

Senator Morgan Introduces a Joint Resolution to Make Trade Combines Illegal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Senator Morgan (Dem., Ala.,) has introduced a joint resolution to prohibit combinations between corporations to control inter-State commerce and transportation. The resolution is as follows.

"That any contract, agreement, or combination between two or more corporations which has for its purpose the control of the price of anything which is the subject of, or enters into inter-State commerce, or the cost of the transportation thereof, so as to increase the same at any place or locality in the United States or to discriminate in favor of or against any class of dealers, traders, or consumers of such articles within the United States is contrary to the public policy of the United States, and every such contract, agreement, or combination is illegal and is prohibited.

"Any person being a member of any corporation, or acting as its agent, officer, or employe, who enters into any such contract, agreement, or combination or knowingly assists in the execution or performance thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable to prosecution for such offense, on information or by indictment, in the district court of the United States in and for the district in which such offense is committed. And on conviction thereof such person shall be fined in a sum not less than $100 and not to exceed $500, and also be imprisoned for a term in the discretion of the court in which such conviction is had, not less than one month and not greater than two years."

Mr. Morgan gave notice of his intention to address the Senate on the resolution at a later date.

Senator Chilton to-day introduced a bill prohibiting the sending of articles, the making of which is controlled by a trust, from one State to another. The bill provides for the punishment of such offenses by imprisonment not to exceed three years.

BYRUM'S CONFIRMATION OPPOSED.

Democratic Senators Resent His Being Credited to Their Party.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Some of the Democratic Senators have intimated to their friends that they will resist the confirmation of William D. Byrum to be a member of the Board of General Appraisers at New York. Mr. Byrum, who was, until 1896, an active Democrat, but who participated in the campaign with the Palmer and Buckner Democrats, is less acceptable to Democrats than a life-long Republican. The argument made against his appointment and confirmation is that the law requiring that all the members of the board shall not be of the same political party is being disregarded in appointing Mr. Byrum as a Democrat.

When the case is taken up in executive session it will be urged against him that he really parted company with Democracy when he bolted the Chicago nominations in 1896; that he has since stumped for a Republican or Republicans in Congressional campaigns, and should be appointed, if at all, as a Republican. The opposition is considered likely to be futile, although a number of Republicans say that it is a pretty large and handsomely paid position to be given a new recruit.

This attempt to dictate to the President whom he may nominate and who should be confirmed does not promise to be successful.

WILL CONTEST WHEELER'S SEAT.

Representative Bailey Will Renew His Fight on the General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The opposition to Gen. Wheeler's taking his seat as a member of the House of Representatives from Alabama is to be renewed by Representative Bailey (Dem., Texas,) whose resolutions last year brought out a report from the House Judiciary Committee that a military and a Congressional office could not be held at the same time.

Gen. Wheeler is now in the Philippines, but it has been understood that he would return to take his seat. The Sergeant at Arms has over $2,000 to the credit of the Alabama member, covering salary from March 4 last to date, but Gen. Wheeler has not asked for the amount, and has expressed an unwillingness to sign the certificate usually required of members in the settlement of their accounts.

Considerable sums are also held for Messrs. Campbell, (Rep., Ill.,) Colson, (Dem., Ky.,) Robbins, (Rep., Penn.,) and Gen. Wheeler, who served in the last Congress and also in the army, and as the accounts of the old Congress are being closed these latter sums were last week turned back into the Treasury.

FIGHT FREEDMEN PENSION BILL.

Senators Declare the Measure to be a Bad One.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Cockrell (Dem., Mo.) directed the attention of the Pension Committee to a bill introduced by request by Mr. Pettus (Dem., Ala.) providing for the payment of a pension to freedmen.

Mr. Gallinger (Rep., N. H.), Chairman of the Committee on Pensions, expressed the opinion that no such measure should have been presented to Congress. He read a certificate of membership in "the ex-slave and pension association" showing that the members were required to pay 25 cents membership fee and 10 cents a month to be used as a fund to secure the passage of the bill.

"In my judgment," said Mr. Gallinger, "this is a bill that ought not to and probably will not receive the favorable consideration of the committee. The promoters of the bill are deluding thousands of poor people and are simply trying to keep this agitation alive for their own benefit."

Mr. Mason (Rep., Ill.), who had introduced the bill in the last Congress, expressed his belief that it was being exploited for a bad purpose.

Mr. Cockrell believed it would not do to let the bill slumber in the committee room. He urged that it be reported back adversely as soon as possible.

After the bill had been adverted to briefly by Mr. Hoar and others it was referred to the Pension Committee.

NEW BILLS IN THE HOUSE.

Various Measures Introduced, Including One for a Pacific Cable.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Representative Payne (Rep., N. Y.), prospective Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, to-day introduced a bill extending the privilege of shipping goods in bond across the country, without reference to the destination of the goods. At present this free bonding privilege is restricted to goods going to the adjacent territory of Canada or Mexico.

Mr. Payne says the effect of this has been to cut off much transcontinental traffic in goods destined for remote points in Asia and elsewhere, which traffic was taken by the Canadian railroads. His bill seeks to open the privilege to all countries alike, on the same terms that Canada and Mexico have enjoyed the system, and Mr. Payne says it is distinctly favorable to American transportation interests. The bill does not change the status relative to the Mexican free zone, that portion of the bill being a repetition of the present law.

Mr. Bellamy (Dem., N. C.,) has introduced a bill repealing Clause 383, Schedule M, pulps, papers, and books of the tariff law of 1897, and providing that no import duty shall be levied on mechanically ground wood pulp, bleached or unbleached. Another section amends Clause 384 and fixes the rates of duty on printing paper, unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for books and newspapers, at three-twentieths up to eight-twentieths of 1 cent per pound, according to value, and 7½ per cent. ad valorem when valued above 2 cents per pound. An additional one-tenth cent per pound is placed on wood pulp from countries paying an export bounty on wood pulp.

Among the other bills introduced in the House to-day were those by Mr. Jones, (Rep., Washington,) for a cable to the Philippines, to cost not to exceed $9,000,000, and the creation of a cable commission; by Mr. Bull, (Rep., R. I.,) limiting the cost of Congressional funerals to $1,000 and an escort of not exceeding five members; by Mr. Russell, (Rep., Conn.,) providing that the names of States shall be given only to battleships and first-class cruisers; by Mr. Lorimer, (Rep., Ill.,) for postal savings banks; by Mr. Richardson, (Dem., Tenn.,) for a National military park at the battlefield of Stone River, Tenn.; by Mr. Grout, (Rep., Vt.,) extending and making flexible National bank currency.

THE NEW POST OFFICE.

Bill to be Introduced in Congress at Once—Madison Square Garden Offered to the Postal Authorities.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Postmaster Van Cott of New York City was in conference here to-day with the postal officials and with Senator Platt in regard to the proposed new Post Office building in New York.

The Madison Square Garden and the old Metropolitan Railway Company's stables on Sixth Avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, have been offered to the authorities.

A bill appropriating a lump sum of $2,500,000 for the new building and other postal needs will be completed to-morrow, and probably immediately introduced in the Senate by Mr. Platt and in the House by Mr. Cummings. This sum is to cover all improvements in the service now contemplated including cost of additional letter carriers and clerks, added pneumatic tube service, and letter box posts throughout the city. Postmaster Van Cott says it is possible there will be about one hundred each of additional clerks and carriers.

It is expected that the new building will be in the neighborhood of the Grand Central Station.

This is not the first time that the Madison Square Garden block has been offered to the Government as a Post Office site. When in 1896 the question of having an up-town office was agitated, and when the corporation which built the present Garden was just organizing, the site was offered to Postmaster Van Cott, and through him to Postmaster General Wanamaker. Nothing came of the matter, however, and the work of putting up the new Madison Square Garden began early in 1890.

As originally made up, the corporation had as its more prominent members J. Pierpont Morgan, James T. Woodward, Darius O. Mills, Charles Lanier, Charles Crocker, Adrian Iselin, and Cornelius Fellowes. The company was incorporated under a special act of the Legislature, and was authorized to issue capital stock to the amount of $5,000,000. The stock actually issued, as appears in an early prospectus, was $1,500,000, while the bonded indebtedness was $1,250,000.

When the Garden was being erected in 1890 a conservative estimate placed the value of the property at $2,750,000, but the fixed charges and carrying expenses were necessarily so great that much doubt was expressed as to the success of the venture. Time has justified this doubt, and it is an open secret that to its owners, from a financial view point, the Garden has never been the complete success that was originally expected. There has been talk of selling it from time to time, but its special use and its great value have combined to make it practically unmarketable.

The old Sixth Avenue car stable property, covering the block front on the east side of Sixth Avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, is held by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. It originally extended about 400 feet on Forty-third Street and 325 feet on Forty-fourth Street, but these distances are somewhat less at present on account of two good-sized plots having been taken off the east end as sites for the Bar Association's building and an apartment house.

RECIPROCITY WITH ARGENTINE.

The Senate Allows the Publication of the List of Reductions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Senate, in executive session to-day, removed the injunction of secrecy from the commercial treaties negotiated between the United States and other countries last Summer, and which, with one exception, were sent out in Washington dispatches Saturday night. The exception was the treaty with the Argentine Republic. This treaty provides for the reduction of 20 per cent. on articles of Argentine origin which may be imported into the United States, as follows:

On sugar, the reduction to be on the rates fixed by Article 209 of the Tariff act of 1897. Such sugars are also to be exempt from the requirements of Article 3 of that act, provided they are shown to have not paid any internal tax nor received any bounty.

On hides, on the rates prescribed by Article 437 of the Tariff act of 1897, but the concession is not to be construed as impairing the regulations to prevent the introduction of infectious diseases.

On wool, on the rates prescribed by Articles 257, 258, and 259 of the act of 1897.

In return, Argentine agrees to the following tariff reductions upon articles from the United States:

Fifty per cent. on canned salmon, canned lobsters, canned shrimps, canned corn, succotash, canned tomatoes, canned apples, and other fruits, (except peaches, pears, quinces, apricots, and cherries,) windmills, and dried or evaporated fruits, and paraffine wax.

Twenty per cent. on bacon, oatmeal, cracked wheat, hominy, corn grits, cornstarch, maizena, (and other cereal foods,) sail twine and cotton rope.

Fifteen per cent. on white pine, spruce pine, Oregon pine, yellow pine, oak, and ash lumber, undressed.

Six and a quarter per cent. on cottonseed oil.

It is provided that no lower duties shall be granted by either country on the articles in question than those granted by the United States to Argentine and by Argentine to the United States. Ratifications are to be exchanged seven months from date.

The treaty negotiations were conducted by United States Minister Buchanan at Buenos Ayres.

Arizona Men to Work for Statehood.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Gov. Murphy and twenty-nine of the leading citizens of Arizona are coming to Washington to aid in the passage of a bill admitting that Territory as a State of the Union.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

Senator Perkins has introduced a bill to amend the bankruptcy law.

Senator Gear yesterday reintroduced the anti-scalping bill of last Congress.

It is practically decided that the holiday recess of Congress will be from Thursday, Dec. 21, to Wednesday, Jan. 3.

Senator MacComber of North Dakota introduced bills yesterday providing for commissions to investigate trade relations with China and Japan, with a view of extending commerce in those countries.

Prof. Langley of the Smithsonian Institution has asked that Congress provide means for observing the total eclipse of the sun, May 28, 1900. He says it is only once in a lifetime that the path of such an eclipse passes so near Washington.

In the Senate yesterday Mr. Hoar (Rep., Mass.) offered a joint resolution providing for the submission to the State Legislatures of a constitutional amendment providing that the terms of the President of the United States and the Fifty-sixth Congress shall not expire until the last Wednesday in April, 1901, and that thereafter the terms of the President and Congress shall expire on the last Wednesday in April instead of on March 4.

Secretary Hay has written Speaker Henderson concerning the status of the Virginius Fund, payable to the survivors of the Virginius affair. There appears to be a deficiency of $2,280, according to the report of an expert accountant, and suit for the amount has been begun against the former disbursing agent of the Department, Mr. Fischbein. The Department neither affirms nor denies the existence of a deficiency, beyond the statement of the expert, and submits the matter for the consideration of Congress.

The Wanamaker Store.

A Careful, Bountiful, Economical New York Christmas Store

SALESPEOPLE should ask you twice for the name and address, or read it to you as they have caught it—we must be very careful to have all the Santa Claus work done with precision—and we never had so much of it to do. You'll help us this far, we know.

It's fine, surely, to choose Christmas gifts from such a store-ful. Only the most modern of modern storekeeping has made this variety possible. Think of having direct importations from twenty countries spread before you. There isn't another store anywhere with such stocks of goods—we are as alone in this bountifulness as though we had a patent on it.

Here's a very true story: A buyer from our staff was secured by another store—many believe they could raise a Wanamaker plant with our gardeners—he was used to big stocks and started to gather them. Trouble came—he was told that such extravagance wouldn't do. Discouraged, he quit. Yet this store isn't extravagant—it is simply bountiful. Quality and reliability considered, Wanamaker prices are decidedly the lowest.

To-morrow morning we will place on view in the Tissot Gallery the original of the wonderful composite Madonna, produced by Joseph Gray Kitchell, of Indianapolis. It is the composite of two hundred and seventy-one of the art-world's conception of the Mother of the Savior, the effect being a face of rare, strange beauty. How could painters of many times have produced faces of their ideal that in the merciless camera would blend into one more intensely beautiful than any one of them? But come see the original—or one of the two; for the Congressional Library has one—several newspapers have published cuts of this picture.

Rugs, Robes and Carpets

Anybody might know that Christmas is near by the way the carpet store is setting aside packages and rolls to remain as great mysteries for a fortnight to come. Sensible gifts, surely—the carpets for giving are made up rug-fashion, as a rule, so the detail of fitting and measuring is skipped. Prices run this way—

Axminster Carpets, $1 to $2 a yard. Body Brussels, $1 to $1.35 a yard.
Velvet Carpets, 90c to $1.50 a yard. Tapestry Brussels, 55c to 85c a yard.

Oriental Rugs have a store to themselves next to the carpets. We've more than ever, and they average higher in elegance. Trouble is that Oriental rugs as a rule are bought in groups—and the Unspeakable Turk who is the world's rug merchant, sees that his riff-raff is not left with him. For the first time our traveler, by fortuitous circumstances as well as good management, was able to select his stock last summer. For once he repealed the law of averages. If you are a student of this queer old art—a translater of the poems writ in rugs, come. We'll be glad to have you enjoy the collection—no matter whether you buy or do not buy.

Fur Rugs are luxurious, the finer sorts, for the whole skin of such beasts as lions, tigers and bears are utilized—the heads mounted by taxidermists. There are inexpensive ones, too—goatskins, for instance, in all sorts of colorings.

If he drives, why not give him a Fur Robe? Wolf, ocelot and lynx skins make the lighter-color robes. $50.

There are other fur robes at $7.50 to $50—those at lower prices are the foreign goatskins worked to simulate marten and grizzly. Black cub bears' skins are soft and rather fine.

But can't you come and see them all? Third floor.

Silk Mufflers We gathered a great lot of Silk Mufflers for men's wear, over in London and Berlin—London's are finest—and all are fine for gifts. Brightness without garishness is the rule—and we have the several University colors; these $2.25.

The others are $1, $1.50, $2 and up to $10. All have the earmarks of elegance. Men's Store, Ninth street.

A Sale of Dressing Table Articles Couldn't be more opportune. There's many a pretty little present in this collection. Sterling silver, every piece. And the designs are new, too. Best of all—the prices. Not an article in the lot worth less than half a dollar, many worth a full dollar. Choice among these at

Twenty-five Cents

Tooth brushes, nail brushes and files, cuticle knives, button hooks, shoe-lifts, baby combs, darners and pen-knives. Some have large elaborate handles, some set with jewels, some with beaded edges.

OTHER ATTRACTIVE OFFERINGS

At 25c—Tooth and nail brush bottles—glass with sterling silver tops.

At $4.50—Three-piece quadruple toilet sets—comb, brush, mirror. Fifth floor.

Antique Clocks Our Paris office is the Mecca of those having extraordinary things to sell—for no other general store in the world has need for so much rare goods. For three years an expert turned his attention to clocks, and the collection now here is notable. The time-pieces are of the periods of Louis XIV, Louis XV and Louis XVI, and of the Empire—clocks made between 1643 and 1814.

Only a few. The prices run from $12 to $200. Basement.

Women's Jackets Seventy-one of them—closing out certain good lots that have been $18.75, $20 and $25. The price to-day is fifteen dollars

There are black, tan, castor and navy blue—but, of course, one needs to come early to get a share of such a lot. All silk or satin lined. Second floor.

Christmas Gifts In the Art Needlework Store and the Notion Store, along Tenth street side, there are lots of cute and givable things.

Pin cushions—pretty ones, mostly our own make, 40c to $6.75.
Sachets—to hold handkerchiefs, veils, gloves or laces. Some imported, some we made. 35c to $12.
Needle-books, some of the finest with scissors, bodkin and crochet hook besides, 10c and up to $8.
Work boxes—wood, leather, leatherette, and some from Japan that it isn't so easy to classify. 45c to $19.
Main floor, Tenth street.

Ruby Lamp Globes There may be said to be a rage for lamp globes in rich ruby red. And they're scarce. But in the face of that we've a hundred and fifty to sell at little above half price—

10-in. Globes, $1.75 instead of $3.
12-in. Globes, $2.75 instead of $4.
Lamp Store, Basement.

Half Hour Exhibitions ON THIRD FLOOR

Many of the world's great paintings are shown by the aid of a new projecting machine perfected by Mr. H. Halsey-Stirling, the art critic. Mr. Halsey-Stirling calls these exhibitions — four of which are given each day—"Half Hours at the National Gallery, London." A special gallery on the third floor holds delighted audiences at each entertainment—10.30 and 11.30 A. M., 3 and 4.30 P. M.

Calendars The demand for really meritorious art Calendars does not lessen—why, people are even content to pay for them far more than their worth. A few years ago we got the idea of having a line made especially for us—to put a good deal of money into the scheme and depend on large sales to justify the little prices. It won.

We get out entirely new ones each year—thirty-eight styles this time—and we think you save more than half, or, what's the same, a 25c calendar is equal to the other publishers' best at 50c or more.

A catalogue of them sent free to any address.
The Book Store, Ninth street.

Holiday Sofa Pillows Sofa pillows are made both pretty and comfortable now-a-days. That's why their popularity keeps growing. These are most decorative—make our Upholstery Store look like a studio; and the big piles are so inviting that you feel like falling upon them. No wonder people buy ten or twelve pillows at once. $1.50 to $18.25. Kinds?—

Leather, burnt in conventional patterns, heraldic or Shakesperean designs.
Satin damask bound in cord. Silk Velour, Velvet Tapestry, Bokhara Embroidered Tapestry.
Oriental Pillows in the Oriental corner.
Watteau Panels, machine and hand embroidered; some hand painted.
Cretonne filled with down.
Upholstery Store, Third floor.

Jabots Over five hundred, and no two alike—an accident and a bargain in one—25c instead of 50c. Each neatly boxed.
Christmas Store, Fifth floor.

12,000 Handkerchiefs at Half Prices

Here's as good news as we ever printed: A handkerchief importer lost courage because the demand is largest for handkerchiefs with narrow hem, and he sold us his wide-hem stock at exactly half price—and they are ready for you this morning. All for Women; all the handkerchiefs of pure linen of our standard; neatly hemstitched.

$1.50 kind at 75c. a doz. $2.50 and $3 kinds at $1.25 a doz.
$2 kind at $1 a doz. $3.50 and $4.20 kinds at $1.50 a doz.
$5 and $6 kinds at $2.50 a doz.

Sold only in dozen and half dozen lots. Packed in neat boxes.
Broadway.

More Room for the Half-Price Shoes

More than three thousand people bought shoes in the Fifth-floor Bargain Store on Saturday—hadn't finished yesterday's selling when this was written, but although we gave more space yesterday, the store wasn't big enough. Still more room to-day, and this is the new arrangement of the stock—

Men's and Children's Shoes, Ninth street side.

Women's Shoes, Tenth street side.

Express elevators and every aid to comfortable buying. We won't have scrambling—any lady or gentleman can buy goods in any nook of this store with self-respect and without discomfort.

We will not sell these shoes to dealers—one reason why manufacturers ask our co-operation in adjusting their stocks is that it prevents breaks in the general market prices. "When Wanamaker makes a shoe sale," said one, "other folks simply look on—the lots melt away in a few days; everybody is helped and ruling prices are saved."

New Shoes in Good Styles at half to a third less than to-day's values—that is the story in a nutshell.

For Women—

Fur-trimmed Romeo Slippers, red and black—all sizes, $1 instead of $1.50.
Home-comfort Shoes, $1.
Kidskin Shoes, welted and stitched; good weight, good style, $1.85 instead of $3.
Calfskin Shoes, $2.35 instead of $3.50.

And with the women's shoes—these gift-things for men—

Men's Slippers, tan and black, 90c and $1.25.

For Men—

$3.50 and $4 Russet Shoes at $1.75.
$4 black Shoes at $2.30. Patent leather, single soles; kidskin in Winter weight.
$3 black calfskin and satin-finish oil tanned Shoes, lace, double and single soles, $1.80.

For Children—

Boys' Shoes, with heels, 11 to 5½, at $1.50. With spring heels, 9 to 13½, at 80c, $1 and $1.25.
Girls' Shoes, spring heels, 50c, 75c and $1—depends on size.

HOSPITAL LIKE TENEMENT

Dr. Dudley of Harlem Institution Denounces Its Condition.

WARDS "VERITABLE HORRORS"

Fifty Thousand Treated on Vermin-Infected Pier—Harlem Board of Commerce Acts.

Dr. Dudley of the house staff of the Harlem Hospital appeared at the monthly meeting of the Harlem Board of Commerce last night and before a large and interested audience made a strong appeal for a new hospital and denounced the conditions prevailing in the present institution.

The meeting was held in the board's headquarters, 50 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. President William A. Martin presided. He introduced Dr. Dudley as the first speaker.

Dr. Dudley reminded the members of the board that he had appeared before them just one year previously for the same purpose. "Since then conditions in the Harlem Hospital have grown steadily worse," he said, "until we have to-day a state of affairs which is disgraceful to this city. The hospital is as crowded at times as the lowest tenement, and it is next to impossible to get anything but dire results.

"We are expected to care for people with the same facilities provided in 1887, notwithstanding the addition to the district's population in the interim of over a quarter of a million of inhabitants. It is not unusual for us to have from two to six patients sleeping on canvas stretchers on the floor. I have seen white boys and negro lads in the same bed. There are no lying-in accommodations, and at times the wards are veritable horrors.

"We frequently have to transfer desperate cases to Bellevue or the Charity Hospital, and it is next to impossible to get many of the patients to consent to go to the latter place. They prefer to die in their squalid homes rather than share in what they believe is the odium of treatment in the charity hospital.

"We are compelled to treat fifty thousand or more patients annually in the miserable outhouse on the pier. I have seen hysterical women awaiting care there while great ugly wharf rats played in and out of holes and crevices.

"When finally we get something done, we must build not for five or ten years, but for the next half century. Any less provision will be a waste of funds."

C. F. Koch said it seemed impossible for the Twelfth Ward to get anything from the present administration.

"The reason might as well be stated plainly," he said. "It is because we are in a Republican district."

William Sherer of the Clearing House Association and President of the Harlem Club said it was high time for the citizens of Harlem to take action.

"We ought not to submit to these outrageous conditions another day without a protest," he said. "We ought to call a mass meeting. The treatment described by Dr. Dudley would be cruel if inflicted on animals."

The Rev. Dr. George R. Vandewater agreed with all that had been said, but reminded the members of the board that nothing new had been disclosed. He was inclined to lay the blame on Mayor Van Wyck and his administration.

Dr. D. D. Clark presented a resolution expressing the board's opinion that the Legislature ought to authorize the issue of $500,000 or more of bonds for the immediate construction of a new hospital.

Dr. Clark's resolution was passed unanimously after a little discussion as to whether $1,000,000 ought not to be asked.

The board's Committee on Resolutions was instructed to prepare a bill and have it introduced at the coming session of the Legislature to the end described.

BROOKLYN WATER SUPPLY.

Politicians Owning Suffolk County Rights May Make an Offer—The Situation Serious.

The shortage in the Brooklyn water supply, which, according to Commissioner Dalton, is a serious matter, will result, it was said yesterday, in an offer from a private company to furnish an abundance of water from the Suffolk County watershed. It was developed in the discussion of the Ramapo contract that a number of Brooklyn politicians had acquired rights in Suffolk County, and that they were prepared, if opportunity offered, to sink wells and pump water to the Brooklyn supply pipes and reservoirs. Under a State law the city cannot take possession of the watershed in Suffolk County by condemnation, and the men who control the supply have been sufficiently powerful at Albany to ward off legislation which was designed to repeal this law.

Reports made on an increased supply for Brooklyn before consolidation proved that there was an abundance of water in Suffolk County, and that it would be a comparatively cheap matter to pump the water from the farthest point in the watershed to the distributing reservoirs. One engineer, after a close investigation, reported that water could be obtained in this way at a rate of $20 per million gallons, inclusive of the cost of construction and maintenance of the works. Most of this watershed, it is now asserted, has been taken up under options by politicians who hope to be able to indnce the administration to enter into a contract with them.

Commissioner Dalton yesterday denied knowledge of the existence of a company or syndicate which controls the Suffolk County watershed. He believes that with the projected improvements in the city's supply Brooklyn will have an adequate amount of water to meet all requirements. These improvements will take several years to complete, however, and the danger is in a protracted dry season within the next few years.

The water supply situation in Brooklyn has become so serious that Deputy Commissioner James Moffett will send notices to-day to local householders warning them against waste of water. Mr. Moffett said yesterday that every available man in the department was being employed in the search for and the stoppage of waste.

It is admitted at the Department of Water Supply that a water famine is imminent and that the authorities are greatly concerned over the situation. At the present time there is but a three days' supply in the big Ridgewood reservoir, and should a break occur in the conduit which brings water to this distributing point from Hempstead, Brooklyn would be in a very bad fix. If the break in the conduit could not be repaired within three days there would be no water for fire-fighting purposes, for factories, or for household use. This is a possibility which is being viewed with a great deal of nervousness.

The situation, it is said, would be somewhat relieved by a heavy rainfall, but the water supply officials are not hopeful of much of a downpour this month. Permanent relief, it is said, can be obtained only by building the proposed extension to the Millburn conduit. The cost of extending this conduit and constructing the necessary storage reservoirs, it is said, would be about $10,000,000.

ELOPED WITH MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Deportation to End Romance of a Man from Posen.

John Balle, twenty-seven years old, of Tarnowitz, Posen, arrived here in the steerage of the steamship St. Louis on Saturday. With him, booked as his wife, was a woman at least twenty years his senior. They told the immigration officers yesterday that they were going to Milwaukee, where John had a cousin.

The disparity of their ages aroused suspicion. An examination elicited the information that the two had eloped, and that the woman was the young man's mother-in-law. John had left a wife and four children. He kept a bakery in Tarnowitz, and as his wife was but fourteen years old when he married her, the mother-in-law, Mrs. Sophia Brussig, ran the home and looked after the finances. They will be deported.

Drank Disinfectant for Whisky.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 11.—Col. James Graham and William P. Cunneen, two prominent politicians of St. Mary's, drank from a bottle containing a disinfectant yesterday, believing it to be whisky, and both are seriously ill and may die. Col. Graham had bought a bottle of disinfectant and a bottle of whisky, and mixed the bottles by mistake. Graham was Lieutenant Colonel of the Twenty-second Kansas Regiment during the Spanish War.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD SAILINGS

Company's Traffic Arrangements for Next Year Announced.

Gustav H. Schwab, manager of the North German Lloyd Steamship Line, yesterday announced the following traffic arrangements made by his company for the coming year: The usual regular weekly service on Tuesdays and the Thursday service, consisting of large twin screw passenger steamers, will be continued. To accommodate the exposition traffic the company will start steamers from here on Saturdays in June, July, August, and September.

Several of these steamers have been chartered for the members of the Christian Endeavor Society going to Europe next year. The steamers on the special exposition service will be the Aller, Trave, and Saale. They will sail for Cherbourg and Southampton, Southampton being the terminal point. They will leave Southampton on Tuesday, returning to New York by way of Cherbourg. The capacity of the steamers during the Summer will be 5,000 first cabin and 2,000 second cabin passengers. The rates for passage have been but slightly advanced over those of the present year.

PASTOR ACCUSED OF SLANDER.

Brooklyn Magistrate Declined to Interfere in a Church Quarrel.

The Rev. E. H. Clare, pastor of the Calvary English Lutheran Church, in Rochester Avenue, Brooklyn, was charged with slander in the Gates Avenue Police Court yesterday by Cord Wilkins of 1,371 Park Place, a member of his church. Wilkins complained that the minister had called him "a hypocrite and a bum." Wilkins said that he then decided to leave the church and go to another one, but the pastor refused him a letter of recommendation.

Mr. Clare told Magistrate Worth that he was willing to give Wilkins a letter of dismissal to another church, but drew the line at a letter of recommendation. The Magistrate declined to interfere in the trouble, and Wilkins left court vowing that he would bring suit for damages.

GILL-MARTIN GETS $10,000.

Verdict for the Artist in His Suit Against Patrick McInerney.

Joseph Palmerston Gill-Martin, the artist who sued Patrick McInerney, the Brooklyn dry goods merchant, for $100,000 damages for alienating the affections of his wife, Maria Josephine Gill-Martin, obtained a verdict of $10,000 yesterday from the jury which heard the testimony before Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court. Francis W. Pollock, counsel for the defendant, moved to have the verdict set aside on the ground that it was excessive, but his motion was denied.

Mr. Pollock then asked for a stay of sixty days in order to prepare an appeal case. Mr. Hummel, counsel for the plaintiff, objected on the ground that the defendant had transferred most of his property to his son, and that a stay of sixty days would enable him to place all of his property out of reach. Mr. Pollock denied the statements of Mr. Hummel, but admitted that Mr. McInerney had transferred his dry goods business to his son. Justice Fitzgerald finally granted a stay of thirty days for Mr. Pollock to prepare an appeal, and allowed Mr. Hummel a counsel fee of $250.

FIRE WAGON IN COLLISION.

Hits a Lexington Avenue Cable Car—Its Occupants Bruised.

A Fire Department repair wagon, driven by Joseph Durr, crashed into a Lexington Avenue cable car about noon yesterday at Sixty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue. Several men narrowly escaped serious injuries.

The wagon was going at high speed along Sixty-eighth Street, when its pole struck the rear of a north-bound car. The pole was snapped in two. The broken end attached to the wagon swung against the horses' legs, and the frightened animals ran down Lexington Avenue toward Sixty-seventh Street.

There is an incline at that point, and the wagon was gaining an uncontrollable momentum, when Durr managed to turn the horses to the east on Sixty-seventh Street. Durr was thrown out, and the reins were wrapped about his body; but he managed to get loose before being dragged. The wagon was overturned, and several men who were in it were tossed into the street and badly bruised. The team was stopped at Third Avenue, and policemen from the East Sixty-seventh Street Station rendered assistance.

Women on a Train for Niagara Falls Telegraphed for Their Diamonds.

Two young women, who were stylishly dressed but could not speak or understand English very well, appeared at the Wagner car ticket window in the Grand Central Station Sunday night and asked for tickets to Niagara Falls. One of them carried a dog, and the other a papier mache telescope case. With some difficulty the ticket agent made them understand that dogs are not allowed in Wagner coaches without permits. Finally one of the women displayed a permit to put the dog in the baggage car. A porter was called to take the dog to the baggage car, and he also took the case, intending to put it in the coach with the women and then put the dog in the car ahead, but as the party reached the train the conductor called "all aboard."

The porter put the case down, thinking that the women would take it up, and rushed to get the dog in the baggage car. The women did not pick up the case, and did not discover that they had lost it until they reached the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station. Then they opened a continuous telegraphic correspondence with the Grand Central station master, telling him to forward the case, and informing him that it contained diamonds. When he found the case it was opened, and a jewel box was found inside. The case was then sealed and forwarded to the women, who were still telegraphing at nearly every stop made by the train.

Birthday of a Three Wars' Soldier.

Private "Pat" Ginley, a soldier of three wars and threescore battles, celebrated his seventieth birthday anniversary yesterday at the Custom House, where he is employed as the messenger of Deputy Collector Phelps of the Law Division. Ginley hails from County Mayo, Ireland. He served in the English Army through the Crimean war, participated in quelling the Indian mutiny, was with the "Fighting Sixty-ninth" in our civil war, and for gallant conduct received the thanks of Congress, a Medal of Honor, and commendations by Gens. Grant and Hancock. President Lincoln commissioned him a First Lieutenant in the regular artillery, a promotion which Ginley modestly declined. Ginley lives at 154 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street with his family.

Police Justice Weds at Midnight.

FREEPORT, L. I., Dec. 11.—Residents of this place were much interested to-day in the announcement that Police Justice Archer B. Wallace had been married to Miss Nettie Denton, daughter of Dr. John H. B. Denton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. T. Ketchum. The hour, it is said, was 12 o'clock last night. Justice Wallace is a son of ex-Assemblyman George Wallace. He served through the Spanish-American War.

JUSTICE BOOKSTAVER'S ERROR.

The Omission to File His Oath as a Lawyer Corrected.

Justice Bookstaver, whose term as a Justice of the Supreme Court will expire Dec. 31, neglected to file his oath as an attorney, as required by a recent statute, prior to July 1 last. Having discovered his error, he applied yesterday to Justice Beach for permission to comply with the law.

Justice Beach granted the application and made an order directing that the oath should be accepted as of the date of June 30. He also made an order absolving Justice Bookstaver from the penalties prescribed by the law for failure to file the oath within the time fixed by the act.

Hyomei Dyspepsia Cure Treats the Disease Itself

NOT THE SYMPTOMS

Which are Flatulency, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Constipation, Nervousness and Biliousness.

Since it was found that Dyspepsia was a germ disease, that food was not digested in the stomach at all, that flatulency, sour stomach, indigestion, constipation, nervousness, etc., are but the symptoms of the disease, and not the disease itself, rapid progress has been made in treating dyspeptics. Heretofore all dyspepsia cures have been gotten out with the idea of assisting the stomach to digest the food or to cure the symptoms; no wonder they failed to afford anything but temporary relief, and even this relief due to some cathartic which carried off the germs in large quantities, leaving the stomach and bowels partially free for a few days, or until the germs left had multiplied in sufficient quantities to produce the same old symptoms.

HYOMEI DYSPEPSIA CURE

Is the only one containing a germicide which kills the bacilli causing the disease; and as this germicide is accompanied with remedies to relieve the symptoms (each being given separately) this cure does cure completely. The fact that it is the only one ever guaranteed should be sufficient proof of its superiority over every other treatment. RULES ON NAVAL PRIZES

Supreme Court Decides Claims Growing Out of Spanish War.

BUENA VENTURA IS EXEMPTED

Pedro and Guido, However, Declared to be Legitimate Spoils of War—Dissenting Opinions Given.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The United States Supreme Court to-day decided in the naval prize money case growing out of the capture of the Spanish steamer Buena Ventura during the war with Spain that the condemnation of the vessel was contrary to the terms of the President's proclamation, and ordered the proceeds of the sale of the vessel be turned over to the owners. In the cases of the vessels Pedro and Guido, also owned by Spaniards, the condemnation was affirmed.

The opinion was handed down by Justice Peckham, and turned upon the construction of the clause of the President's message of the 26th of April, 1898, exempting Spanish vessels in American ports from the operation of the proclamation of the war until the 21st day of May following. It was shown that the Ventura had left an American port on the Gulf of Mexico on the 19th of April, seven days before the Presidential proclamation was issued, and that it was captured on the 26th of that month, or the same day on which the proclamation appeared.

The decision turned upon the point as to whether the President's exemption order applied to Spanish vessels which had left American ports for ports in a neutral country prior to the issuance of the proclamation.

Justice Peckham's opinion held that it did apply to vessels under this condition, and that on this acount the Ventura, though owned by a Spanish house, was exempt. He said in this connection that the policy of the United States always had been one of liberality in such cases, and that there was no reason for a change of policy at this time. He therefore held that the owners were entitled to the proceeds of the sale of the vessel. Justices Gray and McKenna dissented from the opinion.

The Chief Justice delivered the opinion of the court in the cases of the Pedro and the Guido, and while the condemnation of these vessels was affirmed, there were dissents in both instances. Four of the nine members of the court united in a dissenting opinion in the Pedro case. This dissenting opinion was handed down by Justice White, and was concurred in by Justices Brewer, Shiras, and Peckham.

The Chief Justice in his opinion in this case stated the facts to be that the Pedro had left Liverpool in March with a cargo for Cuban ports with the intention of afterward proceeding to the United States for a cargo of lumber for her return voyage. She reached Havana on April 17, and on the 22d took her departure for Santiago de Cuba and was captured the same day by the cruiser New York and duly condemned. In passing upon the merits of the case the Chief Justice held that war had been practically declared on the 21st, and that the officers of the vessel must have known this fact. He dwelt upon the fact that the vessel was proceeding from a port of the enemy to another port of the enemy when overtaken and contended that the case did not come under any of the exemptions of the President's message.

Justice White in his dissenting opinion called attention to the fact that the Pedro had been for nine years engaged in a regular line of business between Antwerp and the United States via Cuba, and said that the landing of the light cargo she carried to Havana was only an incident, as it was not nearly so important as the cargo of lumber which was to be carried from the United States on the return. He also urged that Havana Harbor was not blockaded when the Pedro left that port.

The Guido case turned upon a similar state of affairs to that prevailing in the Pedro case, and was also decided against the Spanish owners. In this case Justices Shiras, White and Peckham dissented.

Buena Ventura Now a Coal Barge.

The Buena Ventura was the first vessel captured during the war. She belonged to Larrinaga & Co. of Liverpool, and flew the Spanish flag. Her agents here were J. M. Ceballos & Co. When captured she was laden with lumber. After she was condemned she was purchased by L. Luckenbach of this city, and has since been used as a collier and for coast towing, plying most of the time between Boston and Norfolk. Mr. Luckenbach said yesterday that the court's decision did not, of course, affect his title to the vessel in any way. Sold, as she was, at forced sale, the Buena Ventura brought a very small price—only $13,000. She is a vessel of 1,500 tons. Mr. Ceballos said that, until the matter had been further considered, he could not say what the owners would do.

LOS ABRA CLAIM FRAUDULENT.

Supreme Court Decides the Famous Silver Mining Suit Against the Mexican Republic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The United States Supreme Court to-day affirmed the opinion of the Court of Claims in the case of the claim of the Los Abra Silver Mining Company against the Republic of Mexico, holding that claim to be fraudulent and unfounded. The claim was for nearly $4,000,000.

The opinion was handed down by Justice Harlan, who went fully into its history. He said that the claim, as first presented to the American-Mexican commission in 1870, was for $1,950,000, but that it was afterward enlarged to $3,962,000. It was based upon the allegation that damage to this amount had been done to the Los Abra Company by Mexican authorities, while the company was operating in the Mexican State of Durango. The commission, through its umpire, Sir Edward Thornton, had allowed $683,041. After a part of the money allowed had been paid to the United States for the Los Abra Company, the Mexican Government brought to the attention of the State Department new evidence, representing the claim to be fraudulent.

After various other proceedings, Congress had in 1892 passed an act authorizing an investigation of the case by the Court of Claims, the act specifically directing the court to ascertain whether the claim was fraudulent and supported by false testimony. The Court of Claims found that the claim was based upon fraud.

This decision was affirmed by Justice Harlan's opinion of to-day. He said that the evidence showed that the whole story of loss on account of the misconduct of the Mexican authorities was improbable and unfounded and that the company, while bankrupt, was not so because of the acts of the Mexican authorities. The effect of the opinion is to bar any further payment to the Los Abra claimants.

In passing upon the case the Chief Justice incidentally decided that the signature of the President attached to a bill during a recess of Congress, if attached within the Constitutional ten days, renders an act so signed as valid as if Congress were in session.

Died on First Wife's Grave.

Andreas Englert, sixty years old, a former well-to-do smoked fish dealer in Brooklyn, killed himself some time on Sunday night with carbolic acid on the grave of his first wife, Marie K. Englert, in the Holy Trinity Cemetery. His body was found yesterday lying across the mound. Englert's first wife died in 1881, and his second, who is buried in another plot in the same cemetery, died last year. Englert amassed a fortune in business, but according to friends he lost most of it in bad investments. He had been living with a son at 213 Jay Street, Brooklyn.

Witness Held for Perjury.

Michael di Marsco appeared as a witness yesterday in General Sessions against John McKenna, under indictment for fraud on di Marsco's complaint. He was arrested on the charge of perjury at the conclusion of his testimony. Di Marsco before the Grand Jury swore that McKenna had received $20 from him under the promise of securing him work in the Street Cleaning Department. The promise was unfulfilled. In court Di Marsco said that he had never seen McKenna before. Judge Newburger ordered that he be committed.

Judge McCarthy Ill.

City Court Judge McCarthy was confined to his home yesterday suffering from a slight cold. It was said last night he would be in court to-day.

American Company Said to Have Paid $1,500,000 for a Factory.

Announcement was made in Wall Street yesterday that the cigar factory of Kerbs, Wertheim & Schiffer, at 1,018 Second Avenue, this city, had been bought by the American Tobacco Company, for a price approximating $1,500,000. It has been an open secret for several months that the American Tobacco Company contemplated adding the manufacture of cigars to its other industries.

Neither Edward A. Kerbs nor Walter A. Schiffer of the firm reported to have sold its plant would talk on the subject last night, but neither would deny that the deal had been consummated. George Arents, Treasurer of the American Tobacco Company, declined to discuss the subject.

DEFENSE OF COL. GARDINER.

Persisten Rumor that William M. K. Olcott Will Conduct It.

Ever since a committee of the City Club filed charges against District Attorney Gardiner, the political gossips have connected the names of ex-Gov. Frank S. Black and his partners, ex-Judge William M. K. Olcott and Abraham Gruber, the Republican leader of the Twenty-first Assembly District, with his defense. On several occasions both Mr. Olcott and Mr. Gruber have denied that they would appear for the accused official, but yesterday the rumor was revived in a new form, and with such detail that those who pretended to know the facts declared positively that Mr. Olcott, at least, would certainly defend Col. Gardiner. The name of Col. Franklin Bartlett was associated with that of Mr. Olcott, but its use was apparently unauthorized, for Col. Bartlett, at the Union Club last night, denied that he had been requested to take any part in the defense.

When asked whether or not he had been selected to appear on behalf of Col. Gardiner Mr. Olcott replied: "I have nothing to say on the subject. I will neither deny nor affirm the truth of the rumor that I have been retained, nor will I say whether or not any advances in that direction have been made to me. It is an entirely personal matter."

Col. Gardiner was not at his apartments in the Waldorf-Astoria last night when a reporter called, and it was said at the Democratic Club that he had not been there.

SIX of the REASONS

why the CENTURY Dictionary & Cyclopedia & Atlas should be FIRST on your list of Christmas Purchases

1. BECAUSE it is the most useful present you can give to your own self and every reading member of your household.

To the Husband in his Business—For it is consulted daily as the acknowledged authority on matters of trade and commerce by thousands of business men, bankers, lawyers, everybody.

To the Wife in her Home—with its quick, clear answers to the thousand and one questions that come up constantly.

To the Mother, with the health cares of her children.—Your family physician owns a set with hardly a doubt, for it is the best medical work of reference ever compiled, yet losing no technical authority through its simple, easily understood explanations.

To the Students—All of them—the soon-to-be musicians or the porers over mathematics, the searchers in literature, past and present; the many-tongued linguists, the aspiring artists and architects—no less than the child at school whose daily lessons seems to him quite as complex as the more advanced studies of his elder brothers and sisters. For the Century is equally as perfect in its help to the college professor as to the boy at grammar school. Both use it to-day, every day—to consult its marvellous astronomical charts, its thousands of botanical engravings, its wonderful modern maps, which are histories and encyclopedias in themselves, and through all the realms of the birds and beasts and fishes.

To the Reading Folks—With its clear, concise treatment of each word, giving as it does its derivation, its word-history, its differing forms in every language, ancient, medieval, and modern (if it has lived so long), every shade of its every meaning, and examples from the literature of all ages to show how each of the master writers used the word or its sister synonym (there are 300,000 quotations of this sort in the Century—just ten times as many as in any other work).

Too, its complete biographies of all the writers, old and new, with the dates of issuance of all their books or play or poems; its countless characters from fiction, descriptions of famous places, and places that you don't think are famous, but that you turn doubtfully to its pages for. They are all there, with hardly a miss in a month of its daily using.

2. BECAUSE you can buy these volumes (a complete set) at HALF PRICE.
3. BECAUSE you can pay that half price in the easiest of monthly installments (only 10c. a day).
4. BECAUSE you need pay only $1.00 down, which means your Christmas money is thus left almost intact, while you have secured the most sumptuous of gifts to present to—somebody.
5. BECAUSE if you don't put it FIRST on your list it will most likely be no Christmas gift at all, for we have only half as many promised from the binders before the holidays to supply the present rate of applications for the sets. These volumes are bound by the most expert handworkers. Machinery does not know such goodness. The very few binders in this country capable of producing the standard of quality insisted upon by The Century Co., publishers of this work, have been exerted to their utmost efforts in their attempt to supply quickly enough the sets demanded for Christmas giving by the members of the Wanamaker Century Dictionary Club. It is not as though the volumes were all boxed ready for shipment. We get a few—too few—each day. Already the cloth sets are all gone.
6. BECAUSE we could go on almost indefinitely giving plain, common-sense reasons why this Christmas sale of The Century at the Wanamaker Store is the one great opportunity for you and for every one who reads or writes or thinks in our language—but you don't need any more reasons, do you? and the reading might make you late in ordering.

To-day please—

the coupon above, and

—a Merry Christmas!

TIRE OF THE GREATER CITY.

Queens Residents Want a Town of Rockaway—Taxes Doubled.

Assemblyman Doughty will, it is said, introduce, by request, a bill at the coming session of the Legislature to have the old lines of the former Town of Hempstead restored. This would mean that Far Rockaway, Edgemere, Arverne, and Rockaway Beach would be taken out of the city and added to Nassau. The sentiment to return to a rural form of government is very strong in the district, and delegations from the several villages will appear before the Legislature to urge the passage of the bill.

The population of the territory which wishes to get out of the city is 8,000, and it is proposed to erect a town to be known as the Town of Rockaway in preference to joining the existing town of Hempstead, which adjoins. The Summer population is about 50,000.

The taxes have been doubled under city government.

$25,000 FOR TUSKEGEE SCHOOL.

Booker T. Washington Receives a Check from a Woman in Ohio.

Booker T. Washington, who is in the city raising an endowment fund for the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute yesterday received a check for $25,000 from a woman in Ohio, it being the conditional subscription made through Grover Cleveland.

The fund now amounts to $86,000, all of which has been raised since the meeting held in the interest of the school on Dec. 4 in Madison Square Garden.

Brooklyn Man Died at Sea.

William M. Ladler, twenty-seven years old, of 170 Hall Street, Brooklyn, a passenger on the Clyde Line steamship Algonquin, which arrived from Jacksonville Sunday evening, died of consumption at sea on Saturday. The body was brought into port. Mr. Ladler had gone to Florida for his health, but getting worse, started to return home. The Coroner yesterday gave a permit for the removal of the body.

STATE HEALTH BOARD SCANDAL.

Governor May Be Asked to Consider the Conduct of Two Members.

According to reports current in Republican political circles Gov. Roosevelt may be asked to punish Owen Cassidy of Montour Falls, Schuyler County, and Baxter T. Smelser of Watkins, who are members of the State Board of Health. It is charged by State Senator C. T. Willis and Fremont Cole, ex-Speaker of the Assembly, that Messrs. Cassidy and Smelser used their official positions to visit punishment on persons who did not think as they did in political matters.

The cases that may be presented to the attention of the Governor are those of Mark Shannon & Co., ice dealers at Penn Yan, and E. C. Gabriel, a milk dealer at Watkins. It is asserted that Smelser and Cassidy announced that the water in Lake Keuka, which supplies Penn Yan, was impure and disease breeding. Shannon & Co. cut ice from this lake and were ordered to stop selling their stock. They did no business for some time, and then ex-Assemblyman Everett Brown was sent to Albany. On his return, it is claimed, the announcement was made that the Keuka Lake water and ice were all right. At the same time the embargo on Gabriel's milk was raised.

Senator Willis declined to discuss the matter yesterday, beyond saying that he expected to see the Governor very shortly, after which he might have something to say.

Friends of Messrs. Smelser and Cassidy ridiculed the charges, and say that Messrs. Willis and Cole are angry because the former bolted the nomination of Mr. Nye, the Republican candidate for the Assembly, and supported Dr. J. F. Barnes, who was elected, and is mentioned as the probable Democratic leader on the floor of the Assembly.

B. B. Odell, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, said last night that he had heard of the trouble, but it had not been brought officially to his attention.

BROOKLYN WOMAN A SUICIDE.

Emily Goodison Drank Carbolic Acid in Prospect Park.

Emily Goodison took a dose of carbolic acid in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, and died from its effects an hour later in the Seney Hospital. Miss Goodison was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Goodison, and resided with her parents and four brothers, at 202 Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn. Morris B. Roy of 356 State Street found her dying on a knoll in the park. Her father said that she had been suffering from extreme nervousness for several months.

In Miss Goodison's pocket were found two poems, clipped from a newspaper, both of which were in a melancholy strain.

Miss Goodison had a sweetheart in the little Connecticut town where the family formerly lived. She was not engaged to him. Her family declare that despondency over her illness explains her act.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Rain; high southeasterly shifting to southwesterly winds.

The depression which was noted Sunday night in the West Gulf States has developed into a dangerous storm, which was central last night in Northern Illinois, and the pressure was low generally east of the Rocky Mountains, except on the Middle and Northern Atlantic Coast.

General rains have continued from the Mississippi River eastward, and they have changed to snow in the Lower Missouri Valley and eastern portion of the middle slope. In the extreme West and Southwest the weather has been generally fair, while in the Northwest there were local snows.

Temperatures continue higher east of the Mississippi River, although they have commenced to fall from the Middle Gulf States northward. In the Mississippi Valley and Northwest the fall in temperature ranges from 6 to 20 degrees. In Colorado and Wyoming there has been a rise of 6 to 24 degrees.

In the Pacific Coast and plateau regions rains and snows continued in the middle and northern portions, with little change in temperature.

The storm will evidently move Northeastward during to-day, causing dangerous southerly gales on the lower lakes and westerly to northerly gales on the upper lakes. Rain will continue to-day in the Atlantic States, Ohio Valley, and lower lake region, probably turning into snow in the two latter districts. In the upper lake region and Middle Mississippi Valley snow is indicated to-day. It will also snow in the extreme Northwest. To-morrow snow flurries are likely along the lakes and snow in Northern New York and Northern New England.

It will be much colder to-day from the Mississippi Valley eastward, except near the Atlantic Coast, where it will be colder to-night and to-morrow. High southerly winds will prevail along the Atlantic Coast to-day, shifting to westerly to-morrow, except on the South Coast, where they will shift during to-day.

Storm signals are displayed on the Great Lakes, except Michigan, and on the Atlantic Coast from Wilmington to Eastport. The display of storm signals was discontinued for the season on Lake Huron yesterday, and will be discontinued on Lakes Erie and Ontario after to-morrow. The display of storm signals will be discontinued on Lake Superior with the closing of the locks at Sault Ste. Marie.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau is as follows:

MOCRATIC SUPPORT OF THE CURRENCY BILL.

most interesting event in the history of the Democratic Party is determination of several of the New Democrats in the House to vote for Republican currency measure. It is ically the first open breaking away Bryanism of Democrats who are ely and professionally engaged in s and the public service. Gold crats who are not in office and have ed and no desire to cater to any or to please any boss find it very to plant their feet upon the rock single gold standard and proclaim principles aloud. It is far less easy en who have ambitions for a long in politics to announce their disaction with the principles of their party and their intention to support embodying the policy of their oppo-

They have manly, honest, and highly creditact. A right action is self-justifyIt is needless to look beyond the inal judgment and conscience for its and its reward. It is not necessary the voice of the boss should be heard ng the Democratic Congressmen the Brooklyn and New York districts hey would serve their country and party best by refusing to be dumb- cattle in the Bryanite herd, by their support to an honest and measure of reform, and by letting ublic know of their intention. E REPULSE OF GEN. GATACRE.

not a good showing for the Britmy, it is not a good showing for civilization in consequence, which st been made by, or more properly . GATACRE. That officer thought to brilliant stroke by surprising an hed camp of Boers, and he has led in making only what the call a "stroke missed." It seems kely that he was deliberately mishis guides. But that does not help s at all. On the contrary, that matters worse. Because it tends w that the hostility against the of the whole white population in atre of operations is controlled by but the fear of immediate death. is one of the serious aspects of itish campaign. In South Africa, the whole, the population of Dutch and Dutch sympathies probably outnumbers the population of British descent and sympathies. But, what is more to the purpose, the Anglicized population is confined to the towns, while the Dutch population prevails throughout the rural regions. Literally, the farmers, or "Boers," are of Dutch descent, and will do as much toward thwarting the British plans as they dare to do, not being at all ashamed of deceiving the enemy, but expecting that their deception will be counted to them for righteousness.

The results have been very serious. The Boers of Cape Colony, it is expected by the English press, will be bolder hereafter than they have been heretofore in giving practical expression to their sympathy with the Boers of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. It is quite possible that all the young men of Dutch descent in the Cape Colony who are capable of bearing arms, and who could be spared, have already gone to the defense of their brethren of the threatened republics, and gone with the godspeed of their families. The excess of the Boers reported in arms over the arms-bearing population of the two republics can scarcely be accounted for on any other supposition. But that is not the sole mischief. Doubtless the guides who have misled Gen. GATACRE are already local heroes, or will be so shortly. They are not in the least ashamed of themselves. Quite the contrary. And every prudent British commander will henceforth be very shy of trusting to the information about the country which is given to him by the inhabitants, that is to say, by the only persons who are capable of giving him local information.

The immediate military results of this reverse are serious enough. The ultimate and moral results are quite beyond calculation, though they seem to justify the gloomy tone of the British press. It is not disputed that the Boers have captured some 600 British troops. It is alleged that this capture brings their total of prisoners during the campaign up to 2,500. These men are as much deducted from the effective total of the British force as if they had been killed in action. And it is coming to be seen that the British total, without any abatements at all, is dangerously insufficient to the successful conduct of the British campaign. This is, of course, a very serious showing. It will not at all shake the resolution of the British people. That people has been tried too often to allow anybody to say that it is discouraged by defeat. But the fact is that the whole available fighting force of the British Army is in South Africa already, and that the question from what source it is to be reinforced is a very serious question. As the British public comes to comprehend the full significance of the situation it is not to be expected that the statesmen immediately responsible for the situation will get themselves beloved. The person most responsible for the situation is undoubtedly the "pushful" Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, whose "new diplomacy" has proceeded upon the assumption that the Boers were obliged to come to his terms, and that, if it came to the use of force, they could not oppose any serious resistance. It seems that their resistance is very serious indeed, and that, for the moment, it is not the little republics but the mighty empire which is in a desperate situation. When this is understood in England, it seems likely that a necessary result of the understanding will be a sudden and decisive drop in the popularity of the British statesman who has resorted to bullying and hectoring, relying upon his irresistible strength, in place of civil negotiation, and who finds that the strength at his immediate command is far from being so irresistible as he had supposed.

BRYAN AND THE SOUTH.

Mr. BRYAN ought to make known to the country his attitude toward the isthmian canal project, especially to the people of the South, to whom the building of the canal is a matter of vital importance for the development of their industries and trade.

Does he favor or does he oppose the union of the two oceans by a canal that would shorten by 10,000 miles the voyage from New York to San Francisco and would create a water route between New Orleans and the future great cotton markets in the Far East shorter than the Suez route?

President MCKINLEY promises that the work of the Isthmian Canal Commission shall be actively prosecuted and a report made at the earliest possible date. The commission is to find and indicate the best route, whether it be that of the Nicaragua company or of the Panama company or elsewhere. "The great importance of this work cannot be too often or too strongly pressed upon the attention of Congress," says the President in his message. In his last previous message he dwelt at greater length and with weightier emphasis upon the necessity of building the canal. "The reasons then presented for early action are even stronger now," he says.

They are stronger. The country is going ahead, not backward, Mr. BRYAN. Which way are you going?

The President is going ahead. His face is turned forward, not back. How many citizens of this Republic can recall a President's message previous to this one that contained not one word about a protective tariff? For a quarter of a century protection has been the foundation article of the Republican creed. President MCKINLEY, whose name has been a synonym for the party doctrine of high and higher protection, makes no mention of it in his message, but he does declare that it is "our plain duty to abolish all customs tariffs between the United States and Puerto Rico and give her products free access to our markets." The Philippines must, of course, be treated in the same way. This is free trade with our new possessions, the only possible economic relation we could maintain with them that would not be absurd. The suggestion of free trade with Puerto Rico and the deliberate exclusion of all mention of McKinleyism from the message of WILLIAM MCKINLEY are symptoms of a keen desire to get away from the dead policies of the past and embrace the living opportunities of the present and future. It is the highest consistency, a mark of successful statesmanship, to see and follow the path that leads straight on, no matter what old trodden paths that lead to no new field have to be abandoned in taking it.

President MCKINLEY shows that he is aware that something has happened in the last two years. He is disposed to take fortune at its flood. When last heard from W. J. BRYAN was trying to sweep back the flood. He is the enemy of expansion, either in territory or business. In his view opportunity is a snare and advancement a crime.

If he has shaped out a harmonious and consistent policy, he must be opposed to an interoceanic canal. What is the use of a canal unless there are to be trade for the ships that would use it and markets for their cargoes? Mr. BRYAN insists that there must be no increased trade, no new markets. If he were made President, therefore, we cannot doubt that he would disband the canal commission and pronounce the canal project outlawed.

By applying his free-silver principles he would paralyze industry. His anti-trust crusade is intended to put a stop to business unless it be conducted on the cross-roads plan. His opposition to the holding of our new possessions is calculated to exclude us from the great new markets now opening and keep our foreign commerce where it is. Five-cent cotton for the South is what BRYAN is aiming at.

The sooner the voters of the Southern States perceive the drift of Bryanism and its sure consequences to them, the better for their welfare. Their continued support of a man whose principles are hostile to their interests and would ruin them if carried out in the National policy can be accounted for only by the theory of their blindness to the real nature and meaning of his teachings.

BRIDGES AND TUNNELS.

We are very glad to see that our neighbor The World is bringing its powerful influence to bear in favor of "holding up" the Mayor and Board of Estimate in their headlong career. It joins us in trying to prevent them from carrying out their plan of rushing through the project of building two bridges, at a cost of thirty millions, without stopping to inquire whether the objects of the bridge building cannot be attained at a much less cost.

There is one respect in which the eligibility of tunnels, in comparison with bridges, has not received enough attention, and that is the superiority of the accommodations they promise to other communications than those which are concerned with the transit of passengers or even of freight. It is not without significance that the only tunnel now in operation under the East River is primarily a tunnel for the conveyance of a gas main. The tunnels contemplated by the Controller, though primarily for the conveyance of passengers, might readily be adapted to accommodate not only gas mains and electric wires for all purposes, but also, in case of necessity, water mains, such as it seems to be agreed must ultimately be carried across the river. It is worthy of note that the new subway at the Bank of England, in London, is planned to take in the whole subterranean connections of the city, and to make connections subterranean which heretofore have been carried on above ground.

The World does not scruple to impute improper motives to the Mayor, and to charge that his refusal to investigate the subject is to be explained only by the fact that "CROKER & Co. are allied with bridge builders, not with tunnel builders." We have already, for our own part, disclaimed any such belief. But the Mayor must see that the hypothesis of our neighbor is that which every disinterested citizen must naturally form of his action in refusing to find out what there is to be said for tunnels against bridges, as a means of meeting the needs of the city. No public motive for his obstinacy appearing, or being imaginable, the natural inference is that he has some private motive. That is not an imputation under which the Mayor can like to rest. It is not one under which he can afford to rest, either individually or as a representative of "the organization." He can escape from it by acquiescing in the impartial investigation of the question, which, as we understand it, is all that the Controller asks. But we do not see how he can escape it short of such an acquiescence.

THE CURRENCY DEBATE.

The most remarkable thing about the currency debate that began in the House yesterday is that it does not create a ripple of excitement in the public mind, not even in Wall Street, where minds are always keenly plotting for excuses for excitement. The debate will develop no new views, and the resulting action is already determined by the unanimous vote of the Republican caucus. The only thing not known beforehand is the number of Democrats that will finally be recorded for the bill.

The simple truth is that the House is but registering with formal authority the policy developed by the course of events and dictated by the predominant opinion and sentiment of the whole country. The changes of the past three years have made it impossible that this country should do business on any but the gold standard, and the people know it. When trade, industry, and production were stagnant and when the chief concern of the average man was how he was to earn a living for his family or to pay his debts, he was ready and eager to discuss novelties in the standard of value which might make easier these two important processes. But when business is active and the average man is "making money" he wants that money of the best, and is not worried over the appreciation of the metal of which it consists. His healthy appetite and vigorous digestion destroy all interest in nostrums, however ingeniously they may be presented.

This state of mind is most actively shown among those engaged in large transactions, for whom the past few years has afforded many a lesson. They have learned, in the phrase of Dr. EVERETT, to "look up and not down, out and not in." In every line of affairs they have come in contact with the forces that work not only here, but throughout the world. They have been seeking the world's markets, studying the conditions that prevail in the world's trade, and they have had it fairly driven in on their minds that the very first essential for such trade is the soundest and most stable standard of value. To talk to them now about the advantages to the debtor class of a depreciated standard like silver is useless. They are no longer a debtor class. They are or are seeking to be creditors of debtors or buyers in every quarter of the globe. The money they spend at home or receive from abroad must be the same at all times and everywhere as nearly as is possible. They and the country have outgrown the deceptions and allurements of silver.

The Senate is not ready to respond so promptly or completely to the situation. It has ideas of its own, as it always has, especially as to details. In this case, it has the notion of grafting on the House bill, or at least on the gold standard provisions, a scheme for refunding the bulk of the bonded debt, apparently for the purpose of securing a mass of 2 per cent. bonds on which the National banks can base their note issues. The scheme does not meet with much favor in the business circles most interested in it. It will be noted that it relates solely to the part of the House plan dealing with the banks. It is fair to assume that without this disturbing feature the gold standard provisions could be enacted with little difficulty. If this shall prove to be the case, we believe that it would be in every way wise to drop all attempts at legislation as to the bank issues and secure the best possible plan for the establishment and maintenance of the gold standard. At best the banking plan is but scratching the surface of the problem presented. It would be far better to secure the essential thing and let the banking measure wait.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Complaint is made by one of our readers because hyphenated proper names occasionally appear in our columns. "This," says the critic, "is snobbery of the most contemptible sort." What is—the hyphenation of names by the owners thereof, or our tacit admission that said owners have a right to call themselves whatever they choose? That is a distinction of some importance. Our private, personal opinion is that this use of the hyphen does sometimes indicate a snobbish tendency, but often it is a mere matter of custom or convenience, and therefore innocent or even commendable. Whatever the facts in a given case may be, however, it is hardly our duty to discover them, or to establish one list of people to whom we will grant the little mark and another of those from whom we will sternly withhold it. Within the limitations fixed by law and propriety, names can be chosen and manipulated according to individual fancies and tastes, and we hear no call either to advise or to coerce anybody in a matter so distinctly none of our affair. The height of our ambition, as regards names, is to print them correctly, and by correctly we mean not in accordance with our own ideas, but with those of the persons mentioned. If our correspondent knew how difficult is the attainment even of this modest desire, he would not be bothering himself or us about the snobbery of hyphens.

—It is pleasing to see that the New York State Fish, Game, and Forest League has turned its attention to danger which threatens every hunter—and everybody else who goes out into the real country—from the careless use of guns that can kill at enormous distances. There have been almost innumerable accidents of late, many of them ending fatally, and the league does well to urge the passage of laws to punish the reckless shooters severely. Hitherto they have incurred nothing except the necessity of making useless excuses, and that is not enough.

—Among the letters published in the last number of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW was one from the venerable JAMES D. PORTER, ex-Governor of Tennessee and ex-Assistant Secretary of State under Mr. BAYARD—to mention only two of our correspondent's many holds upon the memories of his countrymen. The ex-Governor told how he, too, had once made the same mistake that Ambassador CHOATE did in a recent speech, and ascribed to the Bible the familiar saying about the proximity of cleanliness to godliness. He also told how he was gently called to account therefor by a distinguished clergyman, but he did not express any opinion as to whence the phrase originally came. The problem is a difficult one. The form "Cleanliness is next to godliness" has usually been credited to JOHN WESLEY, who used it in a sermon on dress, but when the sermon was published the words appeared in quotation marks, and where he got them has never been settled. In the second book of BACON'S "Advancement of Learning," as the much knowing BARTLETT reveals, it is remarked that "Cleanliness of body was ever deemed to proceed from a due reverence to GOD," but the connection between that and WESLEY'S well-balanced proposition is the reverse of close. The idea is obviously of Oriental inspiration, however it may be as to its expression, and the chances are that it is Semitic as well as Oriental. The beauties of cleanliness were of late recognition in the Western World, and even yet our suddenly beloved cousins in England consider the daily bath so little a matter of course that they talk about it almost as much as about the weather.

—Practice, and nothing else, makes artillerymen skillful, and without skillful artillerymen big cannon at the approaches to this or any other port would be of a value considerably less than their enormous cost. As the truth of these statements is not and cannot be denied, the fact that a pilot boat cruising off Sandy Hook on Saturday was struck and rather thoroughly wrecked by a shell from Fort Hancock must not be made the basis of a demand that the use of great guns in this immediate neighborhood cease at once and forever. It is, however, good proof, and not the first, that the officers in charge of this admirable phase of defensive activity are not as careful as they might be, and as they should be. The hitting of a pilot boat put only a few lives in peril, but last Summer crowded excursion steamers repeatedly had what, to their passengers at least, looked like exceedingly narrow escapes. At Fort Schuyler the firing went on daily for weeks at a time, and the Captains of the Glen Island boats were overheard more than once giving expression to their relief after they had passed beyond range of the targets. Unless a new system of practice is invented and adopted—the restriction of it, say, to certain announced hours in the early morning—there is sure to be a terrible accident some day, and when that happens the excellent intentions of our devoted defenders will hardly be accepted as adequate excuses by the bereaved relatives of two or three hundred victims.

—Though the friends of Admiral SAMPSON see only a combination of ignorance and insolence in the determination of the people of the United States to credit Admiral SCHLEY with the winning of the battle of Santiago, they cannot pretend to ignore said determination, and as they are continually trying to change it, their experiences are frequently unpleasant. Note, for example, what happened in Philadelphia last week to the Rev. A. L. ROYCE, Chaplain of the cruiser New York, while he was addressing the Pennsylvania Railroad Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. We quote from The Philadelphia Record: "The Chaplain is a strong supporter of Admiral SAMPSON in the dispute which has raged over the respective merits of that officer and Admiral SCHLEY, and in his talk he took occasion to speak disparagingly of the latter commander's part in the naval battle off Santiago de Cuba. 'The Brooklyn,' he said, 'was hit more times than any other ship in the navy,' a remark which brought forth applause, to the Chaplain's apparent annoyance. 'But,' he continued, 'that was because she was big and couldn't get out of the way.' This remark was followed by lively hissing, which was repeated when the Chaplain stated that Admiral SCHLEY was usually found to be far from any place of danger. The sympathies of the audience were evidently with SCHLEY, and the Chaplain's statements were regarded as very ill-timed."

DESERTED THE DEMOCRATS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the possible nomination of William J. Bryan by the Democratic Party in 1900 as their candidate for the Presidency, the writer, long a Democrat, begs to give his views. His first vote was cast in 1860 for Abraham Lincoln. From that time onward he voted the Democratic ticket at each Presidential election down to 1896. At this last election he voted for Mr. McKinley, his first Republican vote since 1860, feeling that he could put up with excessive protective tariffs and other Republican notions that he doesn't believe in, rather than swallow Bryan, free silver, Populism, income taxes, and other Democratic heresies that have no place in the original Democratic Party.

Now, if he should live fifty or one hundred years to come, will he ever vote the Democratic ticket until it is purged from free-silver and Populist heresies, for whatever burdens he is called upon to endure as a taxpayer and citizen because of Republican doctrines of high protection, militarism, and expansion, or trusts and monopolies run rampant, these ills are but feathers compared to those to which we would be subjected if dominated by that charlatan Bryan and his hungry and devilish cohorts.

Now, if the opinion of the writer were unique it would be of small moment; but convinced as he is that it is substantially the view, as it will be practicably the action, of tens of hundreds of thousands of gold Democrats in the coming campaign of 1900, he has thought it best to publish it through your columns.

The Democratic Party has been forgiven many of its blunders in the past, but it is now moribund, and it deserves to die, and it will die. AN OLD NEW YORKER.

Supplement to "John's Way."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under "Current Literature" in Sunday's TIMES I find a poem "John's Way," which is very good in a way, but I think it lacks one stanza which I would add, thus:

But when he sees a weaker man
Who has a farm John wants, why then
He'll fight and take it if he can.
He's doing that to-day.
And always has whene'er he could.
On some pretense of doing good—
Good unto John being understood—
For that's John's way.

AN ASTONISHMENT.

From The Washington Star.

There's a mighty curious feller who is livin' out our way,
He never seems as anxious as the rest to have his say,
He listens to an argument as quiet as kin be
An' never makes an effort to break in an' referee.
An' once upon a time—as folks is talkin' 'bout it yet—
We asked him his opinion so's to help decide a bet.
It was on a general topic that excited high and low.
This feller thought a minute. Then he said he didn't know.
We'd heard a lot o' people who had struggled to explain
Each query. It 'ud give you palpitation of the brain
To hear the way they figured. An' their words were of such length
That tryin' to remember them was jes' a waste of strength.
But the wisest of them never, with their great displays of wit
Within my recollection made the memorable hit
That he scored when, after thinkin' very carefully an' slow,
He faced the situation 'an' confessed he didn't know.

GERMANS ASK FOR A NAVY

Prince Hohenlohe and Count von Buelow Say It Is Necessary.

DECLARE THEY WANT PEACE

But the Warships Are Needed as Defense—Loans Will Be Made to Defray Their Cost.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—In the Reichstag today Prince Hohenlohe, the Imperial Chancellor, announced that the Federal Government had come to the conclusion that the present navy was insufficient for the country's needs, and that estimates for doubling the present number of warships would be submitted.

He added that the period within which the increase of the navy would be effected was not to be fixed by law, the number of new ships to be provided for annually in the estimates being decided in accordance with budgetary requirements.

"In this matter," he continued, "the federated Governments are acting on the supposition that in accordance with the general principles governing the financing of estimates the additional vessels will be paid for by loans."

Count von Buelow, in supporting the proposed increase in the navy, said:

"The President of the United States in his message expressed himself concerning the good relations between the United States and ourselves with a warmth that fills us with sincere satisfaction, and, as far as Great Britain is concerned, we are willing and ready to live in peace and concord with her on the basis of full reciprocity and reciprocal consideration."

Count von Buelow also justified the increase in the navy from a political point of view, and declared that the German policy had always maintained an even course between neglecting and overdoing transoceanic interests.

Alluding to the warlike changes and revolutions of the past few years, he said:

"I cannot yet believe a new partition of the earth is immediate. We wish to interfere with no foreign power, but neither do we wish to let our feet be trodden upon by a foreign power, nor let ourselves be pushed aside either politically or economically. We cannot but be mixed up with the future, the prospects of which have been considerably modified during the last two years, because we have now interests in all parts of the world. The powerful vitality of the German people has involved us in the world's administration and drawn us into the world's policy.

"In the presence of a Greater Britain and a Nouvelle France, we have claims to a Greater Germany, not in the sense of conquest, but in the sense of a peaceful extension of our trade and points of support. We cannot, will not, suffer that a people shall pass to the order of the day over the heads of the German people. [Cheers from the Rightists and laughter from the Leftists.]

"We have always, hitherto, come to an easy and willing understanding with France, in isolated colonial conventions. In this respect, also, we have found friendly obligingness in the case of Russia, to which we have fully and wholly responded.

"But just because the external position is now favorable we must use it to insure ourselves for the future. I wish, we all wish, that our future may be peaceful. Whether it will be so no one can say.

"We must be secured against surprise, not only on land, but at sea. We must create and possess a fleet strong enough to exclude attack by any power, and I emphasize attack, for in the absolute peacefulness of our policy it can never be other than a question of defense.

"German foreign policy is neither covetous, restless, nor fanciful. The fancifulness of our plans is the invention of the foreign press, and not sanctioned by the German press or officially. Like all nations with maritime interests, we are compelled by necessity to have coal supplies and obtain naval bases. This manifested itself in the Hispano-American war, which taught us many striking lessons.

"While pursuing this practical policy toward our transoceanic colonies we must not forget that our centre is Europe. We do not neglect our duty in providing security for our position, which rests on the Dreibund."

As an instance of the necessity of a navy, Count von Buelow cited the present conditions in Venezuela, where, he said, "very considerable German interests are seriously jeopardized, and to which country we are able only to send two or three old training ships."

Continuing, Count von Buelow said: "In the coming century the German people must be either the hammer or the anvil. In the name of our country's best interests I entreat your favorable reception of the Navy bill."

Baron von Thielmann, the Secretary of the Treasury, described the financial position of the empire as favorable, and said the interest on the navy loan would be guaranteed by the imperial revenues.

The Reichstag presented a highly impressive spectacle to-day during the debate. In the Court box sat Prince Radziwill, with instructions to make a personal report to the Kaiser. The Bundesrath table was crowded.

Count von Buelow's speech provoked approval and disapproval, almost equally emphatic. The disapproval came from the Radicals. When he declared that Germany did not desire to pursue an aggressive pyrotechnical course, but was equally determined not to be pushed aside politically or commercially by other powers and never to allow an important international question to be settled without consulting her, there was an outbreak of spontaneous applause.

Prince Hohenlohe, whose weak voice was scarcely audible; Admiral Tirpitz, and Baron von Thielmann were heard in silence. The session was brief, because the House desired to see the speeches in print before considering the proposals.

After the adjournment it was said in the lobby that the Emperor had given strict orders for the dissolution of the Reichstag should the Cabinet consider it unlikely that the bill would pass.

Prince von Hohenlohe's announcement regarding the enlargement of the German Navy has been eagerly looked for in Germany and throughout Europe. It has been known for some time that all the energies of the Emperor and his Ministers would be devoted to securing legislation providing for a greatly increased number of ships, the Canal bill, and the measure known as the "Force bill" being put in the background.

It is doubtful, however, whether any persons outside of the Kaiser's immediate advisers expected proposals looking to such an immense increase as is now asked for. Inspired articles have been appearing in great profusion lately, in which attention has been called to the likelihood of Germany's warships soon being necessary. The talk of an alliance between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan has been given as one reason for this, while Dr. Adolf Wagner, in Die Woche, declared that the "arrogance of the Yankees" might lead to hostilities at any time.

At the beginning of the present year, after the final acceptance of the last Naval Defence act, the German fleet, including available vessels then built and those under way or to be built, was to be formed as follows: One flagship, (battleship;) two squadrons, each of 8 battleships; two divisions, each of 4 coast defence ships; 6 large and 10 small cruisers for the home squadron; 3 large and 10 small cruisers for foreign service, and in reserve 3 battleships, 3 large cruisers, and 3 small cruisers. These figures are exclusive of torpedo boats and destroyers, training ships, special service vessels, and gunboats.

This establishment was to be completed in six years. The doubling of the navy now asked by the Emperor and his Ministers will give Germany a navy almost equal to that of France, and considerably more powerful than that of Russia, which is third in the order of naval powers. Great Britain, however, will still retain her supremacy in the size of her fleet, the vessels now being built for her being about as many as those which have just been asked for by the Emperor.

FRENCH CONSPIRACY CASES.

Count de Dion Is Ejected from Court and a Defendant Imprisoned.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Senate, sitting as a High Court, to-day resumed the hearing of witnesses in the case of the Auteuil disturbances. Count de Dion insisted upon making a speech before taking the oath, to which M. Fallières, President of the court, objected. The Count was finally ejected amid an uproar.

MM. Cailly and du Bic, two of the prisoners, were particularly noisy and vituperated M. Fallières. The Public Prosecutor demanded their expulsion, and the sitting was suspended.

On resuming the hearing M. Fallières read a decision sentencing M. Cailly to three months' imprisonment and excluding him from the court until the speeches begin, excluding M. Bruenet from the court for a week, and excluding M. du Bic for two days.

BARON PENZANCE IS DEAD.

Was a Famous British Barrister—Left No Heir to His Title.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Baron Penzance, James Plaisted Wilde, is dead.

The Right Hon. James Plaisted Wilde, Privy Councilor, first Baron Penzance, was one of the famous British lawyers of this century, and until the last he frequently took an active part in legal proceedings in the House of Lords.

Lord Penzance was born July 12, 1816, in London. He was the fourth son of Edward Archer Wilde. His uncle was the famous Lord High Chancellor, Thomas Wilde, who as a member of the Inner Temple in 1829, Truro in 1850. Lord Penzance was educated at Winchester School and at Trinity College Cambridge, and was called to the bar was a member of the Inner Temple in 1839. The year after he was called to the bar he was made Junior Counsel to Excise and Customs, which position he held until 1860. In 1852 he was made a Queen's Counsel; in 1860 counsel to the Duchy of Lancaster, and in 1869 a Baron of the Exchequer. Three years later he succeeded Sir Cresswell Cresswell as Judge of the Court of Probate and Divorce, one of the most important Judgeships in England.

In 1869 he was raised to the peerage, and in 1872 resigned his Judgeship on account of ill-health. In 1875, however, he was appointed Dean of Arches and Judge of the Provincial Courts of Canterbury and York. He also attended the House of Lords frequently as a member of the Final Court of Appeal. He was made a Privy Councilor in 1886.

Lord Penzance, besides his judicial duties, took an active part in public life, and had also a high reputation as a scholar. He was a member of many important commissions, including that appointed to consider the feasibility of forming a digest of the common law, and the Judication and Marriage Law Commissions. He was one of the most vigorous opponents of the plan for the fusion of law and equity which resulted in the destruction of the old common-law courts. He was mainly instrumental in defeating the bill introduced by the late Lord Cairns for abolishing the judicial functions of the House of Lords.

Lord Penzance married in 1880 Lady Mary Pleydell-Bouverie, third daughter of the third Earl of Radnor. He leaves no children, and there is no heir to the title.

INTERNATIONAL ATHLETICS.

Yale-Harvard Team Will Challenge English College Men.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—It is said that, possibly, the proposed Harvard-Yale-Oxford-Cambridge Easter return athletic meeting in the United States will not be brought off, in which case the Oxford-Cambridge team will have to go to America in July, unless the Harvard-Yale team accept the suggestion that they visit England again and then go to Paris.

Nothing is known at either Oxford or Cambridge University in regard to the published statement that the University of Pennsylvania team will meet the team of the English universities while on their way to Paris. The Oxford-Cambridge team has decided not to go to Paris.

Inquiries made at Cambridge, Mass., show that the Harvard people think the proposed meet is in return for the visit the Americans made to England in July of the present year. Harvard, it was learned, had not done much toward getting the Oxford and Cambridge athletes over, but Yale was said to have been active in the movement. Nothing could be ascertained in regard to the Harvard men going to England.

In an interview at New Haven with Manager Dana of the Yale team, on the subject, he said:

"It is the intention of the Yale-Harvard team to challenge the Englishmen. Negotiations have been opened, but no formal challenge has yet been sent. The time and place have not been decided upon. No suggestion about a visit to Paris has been made so far."

SANTOS SHIPS STILL HELD.

Health Board Postpones Action—Plague Steamer Gets Clearance Papers—Police Watching Lighters.

The Board of Health did not render a decision yesterday as promised regarding the Santos coffee steamers detained in quarantine. The meeting which was to have been held in the morning was postponed to this morning, because of the absence of Dr. Doty, the Health Officer of the Port, in Washington.

The mate of the J. W. Taylor yesterday visited the Custom House and secured clearance papers for Queenstown, for which port the vessel will sail in a day or two.

The John C. Seager Company secured yesterday at the Custom House a general order for the steamer Roman Prince, which arrived with coffee from Santos the week before last. In ordinary circumstances this should land the cargo at the Erie Basin; but President Murphy of the Board of Health was notified, and he will act on the order to-day.

Stevedores are still at work discharging the coffee from the damaged steamship Lassell. The vessel floats at high tide.

The released lighters, with the Taylor's cargo, are anchored off Robbins Reef, under guard of the police. The Hoboken authorities have been somewhat concerned about the coffee on these lighters, having received word that an attempt would be made to land it in Hoboken. The police of that city are therefore keeping a sharp lookout.

The Brazilian Minister at Washington received the following cable dispatch, from his Government yesterday, a copy of which he telegraphed to Consul General Xavier, in this city: "Santos in good condition. Plague has visibly vanished since middle of November. Only two new cases reported this month."

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 11.—It is settled definitely that the coffee-laden steamer Roman Prince, at the New York Quarantine Station, will not come to Boston, as the Washington authorities have refused to let her clear the port with her load for another American port.

It is said that one or two of the other coffee steamers which are in New York Harbor, and which have not entered at the Custom House, may come to Boston.

YALE SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED.

Allan H. Richardson and Robert V. Spencer the Recipients.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 11.—It was announced at Yale University to-day that the Thomas Glasby Waterman scholarship had been awarded to Allan Harvey Richardson, 1901, of Waterbury, N. Y., and the Scott Hurtt scholarship to Robert Vaughn Spencer of Jasper, N. Y.

The Thomas Glasby Waterman fund of $40,000 was received in 1890 from the estate of Thomas G. Waterman, Yale, '86. The income is given to not more than three scholars, of manly character and limited means, who have distinguished themselves in their studies.

The Scott Hurtt scholarship was established in 1889 in memory of Burgess Scott Hurtt, of the class of 1878, by his classmates and friends. The income of a fund of $5,000 is assigned to a member of the sophomore class, who is selected by the Faculty on the ground of approved scholarship.

The President Invited to Albany.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Secretary Root called on the President to-day in company with W. B. Logan of the New York Bar Association, and invited the President to attend the annual dinner of the association, to be given at Albany on Jan. 17. The President was unable to state definitely whether he would be able to attend, but said he would do so if his public duties would permit.

Danish West Indies Not for Sale.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The State Department authorizes a contradiction of the report that the Government of Denmark has offered the Danish West Indies for sale. No communication on this subject has passed between the two Governments since the failure of the negotiations on that subject several years ago.

Mr. Platt Summoned to Toledo.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Senator Platt of New York has been summoned to Toledo, Ohio, as a witness in an important suit in which the United States Express Company is interested.

THE IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

Recht auf Sich Selbst" Favorably Received.

Recht auf Sich Selbst," (The Right Individual,) the first of two new which Manager Conried of the Irving Theatre offers to his patrons this week, was favorably received last night. The piece is by Prince Frederick von Wrede, who became popular in society last Summer at Newport.

The story is the effort of a woman to escape false arrest and imprisonment. Later in life she marries and sees before her a happy life. Her photograph is seen by a friend of her husband, who recognizes it as that of a woman who ten years before had been arrested for a crime. The husband innocently suggests a change of air and scene for her.

She, however, thinking that he is about to put her aside, attempts to commit suicide, but is prevented by the man whose gossiping propensities have threatened to darken her life again. Martha Schiffel, Wilhelmine Schluter, Fritz Ritztgrath, and Klein-Roden carried off the acting honors of the evening.

"Il Trovatore" at the American.

The Castle Square Opera Company appeared last evening in "Il Trovatore" at the American Theatre before the usual large audience of regular patrons. The opera, which was one of the first of a repertoire which will be presented this week, was produced elaborately in regard to scenery, costumes, and effects. From a musical standpoint the opera was creditably given. Joseph F. Sheehan sang the rôle of Manrico and Miss Grace Golden that of Leonora. Miss Bernice Holmes was Azucena, William Mertens, Count di Luna, and E. N. Knight Ferrando.

"The Girl I Left Behind Me."

The play chosen for production this week at the Murray Hill Theatre by the Donnelly Stock Company is Franklin Fyles and David Belasco's drama "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The performance last night both in acting and in mounting was admirable, and was thoroughly appreciated by a large audience.

Miss Hannah May Ingham was Kate Kennion, William Redmund Gen. Kennion, and Walter Allen Major Burleigh. To Ralph Stuart, Miss Grace Huntington, and Miss Dorothy Donnelly credit is due for good work.

Next week's attraction will be John M. Morton's "Carmen," adapted from Merimée's novel of the same name.

Theatres and Music Halls.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE.—Manager Wallick has decided to give four farewell souvenir performances of "The Dairy Farm" during the final week of the play, beginning Dec. 18.

EDEN MUSEE.—New moving pictures of scenes in South Africa were shown last evening. Several series of other pictures were also shown. New wax groups for the Christmas celebration are being prepared.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE:—A present day English melodrama known as "Sporting Life" is the attraction offered by Mr. Pitou to his patrons this week. The piece is well staged, and the cast includes many old favorites of the melodrama.

DEWEY THEATRE.—Two large audiences yesterday welcomed Harry Williams's specialty company, which includes Ezra Kendall, the Waterbury brothers, and Tenney, Williams and Tucker, Grapevine and Chance, Clarice Vance, the O'Brien trio, and the three Polos.

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—Lee Hung Fee, a Chinese magician, is the leading feature this week. His numerous magical feats are liberally applauded. The Bijou Midwinter Circus entered upon the second week of its successful engagement, and the other features were equally popular.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—No new novelties were added to the burlesque "Round New York in Eighty Minutes" this week. "Jess" Dandy continued to make things lively with his original parodies, and "Dick" Bernard, Kittie Mitchell, Etta Butler, and Marguerite Sylva won much applause.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—In the programme yesterday, which contained many excellent features, were Alcide Capitaine, a gymnast; John C. Fox and Katie Allen and company in their farce called "The Irish Dentist"; De Haven and Maie, Raymon Moore, the kalatechnescope, with new pictures; West and Williams, Freese Brothers, and the musical Ravens.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—"Hotty Dotty," the new burlesque, entered upon the second week last night considerably strengthened and improved. All of the leading vaudeville artists have been retained, including Smith and Cook, Maud Nugent, Carrie Scott, Lottie Fremont, Robert Garnella, Sam J. Ryan, May Shirk, Joe and Nellie Doner, Georgie Mack, and Reynolds and Betts.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair" began the second week of her engagament yesterday and she continues to draw houses with test the capacity of the theatre. The Cragg family went through wonderful acrobatic feats. The other part of the bill included Mlle. Marzella and her trained cockatoos, the Guitanos, Falk and Semon, Duncan and Anna Kennick.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—An amusing vaudeville bill is to be found at Mr. Proctor's downtown theatre this week, the successful features consisting of Miss Gertrude Mansfield and Caryl Wilbur in their comedietta "Color Blind"; Watson, Hutchings, and Edwards in the farce entitled "The Dramatic Agent"; Vernon, a ventriloquist; Doherty's Poodles, Guilbert, Miss May Cooke, Aiden and Hill, and many others.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—Weber's Olympia company, an organization combining vaudeville and operatic burlesque, made its first appearance in this city last night. The company is headed by the Manhattan comedy four, Anna Suits and company in a sketch entitled "Living Posters," and Howard and Grant. Others in the bill were Hayes and Bandy, Anderson and Engleton, Russell and Tillyne, and Ruby Marion.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—Denman Thompson and "The Old Homestead" returned to Harlem last night for a week's engagement. A good-sized audience cordially greeted them. Mr. Thompson's famous production does not apparently suffer through time, and still preserves its charming atmosphere of simplicity and truth. Scenically and in its cast the piece is the same as presented at the Academy of Music earlier in the season.

THE ZANGWILL PLAY IN LONDON.

"Children of the Ghetto" Is Not Enthusiastically Received.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—I. Zangwill's "Children of the Ghetto," already seen in the United States, was presented this evening at the Adelphi Theatre, under the management of Liebler & Co.

The play was pleasantly but not enthusiastically received. Mr. Zangwill appeared in response to calls for the author, but did not speak. There were some unfavorable cries. Messrs. Lackaye and Edeson and Miss Rosabel Morrison were the most applauded of the cast.

The Bostonians in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The Bostonians presented their opera, "The Smugglers of Badayez," to-night at the Columbia Theatre. The audience liked it well enough to call for encores, which strung the performance out considerably. Barnaby and Macdonald made hits, but they were obliged to let the honors of the night go to Miss Bertram and John Dunsmure, who as the Captain of the Guard presented a fine appearance and sang magnificently. Frothingham Fitzgerald and Josephine Bartlett were also in the cast. Jesse Bartlett Davis heard the opera from a box.

Victoria to Have a New Play.

"The Rogers Brothers in Wall Street" will terminate their engagement at Hammerstein's Victoria Saturday evening, Dec. 30, and will be followed by the first production in this city of Klaw & Erlanger's play, "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," with Jerome Sykes and Miss Edna Wallace Hopper in the leading rôles.

Columbia Sophomores in Comedy.

The sophomore class of Columbia University gave its first performance of Arthur Sherley's comedy, "The Gay Mr. Vane," at the Carnegie Lyceum, last night. It was well received. The house was crowded. The play will be given to-night and to-morrow night, with a matinée to-morrow afternoon.

New Cars for Upper Broadway Line.

Superintendent Robertson of the Third Avenue Railroad Company said yesterday afternoon that to-morrow or Thursday trolley cars will be run over the upper Broadway line, between Fort Lee Ferry and Fifty-ninth Street. The line from Seventy-first Street up was opened on Sunday.

The Fight Against the Power House.

Several of the citizens who have begun a campaign against the power house of the Third Avenue Railroad Company at One Hundred and Thirtieth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, which they declare to be a nuisance, secured in the Harlem Police Court yesterday a summons for President Albert J. Elias of the company, returnable Thursday morning.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Yesterday seemed paradoxically like the return of Spring, and the avenue presented a curious sight with promenaders and even people driving without wraps and some in costumes that were reminiscent if not of the Summer, at least of the early Autumn. The day was really too warm for comfort to New Yorkers, who have become used of late to colder weather, and it was decidedly enervating. This was shown by the languid interest evinced in the few social happenings of the day and the evident discomfort of the audiences at the second musical morning and the first of The Strollers' performances last evening, both of which were held in the Astoria ballroom.

Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield has taken the house 253 West Seventy-third Street for the Winter months. Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord have leased Mr. Henry A. Barclay's residence at 603 Madison Avenue for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Barclay and family are now at the Hotel St. Marc, but will probably go South later. Mr. and Mrs. Anson G. Phelps have leased the residence of Mrs. Wesley Watson, 51 East Thirty-fourth Street, for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Watson, who now reside in London, but come to New York every Autumn for a few months' visit, will sail to-morrow on the Oceanic on their return, which will enable them to spend Christmas at their new house on Cadogan Square, London. Mrs. William H. Taller, Mrs. Watson's sister, gave a small reception at her residence, 14 East Seventy-second Street, yesterday afternoon as a farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Watson. There were only about twenty-five people present, all intimate friends of Mrs. Watson.

The Oceanic will to-morrow take out an unusually large list of passengers for this time of year. This is due not only to the popularity of the ship, but to the fact that she is sure to land her passengers in good time for Christmas in England. The Lucania, which sails on Saturday, will, however, really be what is called the Christmas ship this year, and she will carry not only a large number of passengers who expect to reach home Christmas Eve, but an enormous mail. On the Oceanic there will sail in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, and Miss Alice Ward, a sister of Mr. Reginald Ward, who returns to spend Christmas in London with her brother after a visit of some two months to her parents in Boston; Mr. and Mrs. M. Alexander and Miss Alexander, Mrs. J. A. Bostwick, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Byron, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cochrane, Mrs. Herbert F. Colton, Lieut. Cecil H. Dean, Mrs. John W. Ehninger, Robert Noyes Fairbanks, C. H. Godfrey, E. D. Godfrey, Mr. and Mrs. James Hamilton, Mrs. James Hamilton, Mrs. F. de Kennedy, Henry P. McCready, Mrs. Samuel Neuhaus, Mrs. Gilbert Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Redmond, Mrs. William R. Stewart and two daughters, Mrs. John J. Townsend and Miss Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Walker, A. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Wheelock, and H. P. Winslow.

To-day will bring the weddings of Mr. Arthur Coppell and Miss Mary S. Bowers, which will be celebrated in Grace Church at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and of Mr. Charles Van Rensselaer of Orange, N. J., and this city and Miss Caroline Elizabeth Fitz Gerald, which will be celebrated at noon in St. Paul's Church at Brookline, Mass. The attendants at the wedding of Miss Bowers and Mr. Coppell will be Miss Martha Dandridge Bowers, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor and Miss Josephine Roe, Miss Rita Gray, Miss Edith Coppell, and Miss Florence Coppell, sisters of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. Miss Martha Bowers, the maid of honor, will wear a gown of white Liberty satin trimmed with lace, and the bridesmaids will all be dressed alike in white crêpe de chine gowns with black picture hats adorned with bunches of pink roses at the back. They will carry bouquets of bridesmaids' roses. The bride's gown will be of white satin trimmed with point lace, and her tulle veil will be fastened with diamond ornaments. Mr. Allan Wardner will be Mr. Coppell's best man, and among his ushers will be Messrs. Henry M. and Spottswood D. Bowers, brothers of the bride; W. Meredith, W. A. W. Stewart, Henry S. Kip, Edward Burke, and Henry Wardner. The decorations at the church will be palms, white roses, and white carnations. There will be a reception after the ceremony at the residence of Mr. Bowers, 7 West Twenty-first Street. The house decorations are to be palms, white roses, and pink flowers.

A number of New Yorkers will go on to the wedding of Mr. Charles A. Van Rensselaer and Miss Caroline Fitz Gerald, which, as said above, will be celebrated in St. Paul's Church in Brookline at noon to-day. The bride will have only one attendant, Miss Nathalie Chauncey of this city. The best man will be Mr. Philip Lydig, a cousin of the bridegroom, and the ushers will be Messrs. Harold and Stephen Fitz Gerald of Brookline, brothers of the bride, and Charles Beeckman, Stuyvesant Pillot, Walter C. Taylor, and Samuel Bettle of this city.

On Friday next Mrs. George P. Slade of 62 East Sixty-sixth Street will give a dinner for her niece Miss Cornelia Helen Merrill, who made her début last Saturday. The guests besides Miss Merrill are to be the Misses Angelica Church, Elsie de Peyster, Edith Jay, Dorothy Higginson, Ruth Cox, Louise Aldrich, and the Messrs. de Peyster, Goadby, Patterson, George Theron, and Arthur J. Slade, Seymour Perkins, and Capt. William Cameron, Troop A. After the dinner the young people, who are members of Mrs. Church's dancing class, will attend this season's first dance of that class, at Sherry's.

Miss Alice Rutherford, daughter of Mrs. George Crocker, will give to-day at the residence of her mother, 1 East Sixty-fourth Street, a girls' luncheon of fourteen covers. Mrs. Alfred Pell will give a reception to introduce her daughter, Miss Frances Pell, at her residence, 39 West Thirty-eighth Street, on Thursday afternoon next.

At the coming-out reception to be given Miss Isabel Fowler Wilson next Saturday by her mother, Mrs. Thomas Powell Fowler, at her residence, 39 East Sixty-eighth Street, Miss Edith Talcott, Miss De La Vergne, Miss Marguerite Quackenbush, Miss Aurelia Roe, and Miss Elsie Todd will assist in receiving. Miss Emily Hoagland was to have been one of those receiving, but her father's recent death prevents.

Mrs. Harta Read of Ottawa, Canada, formerly Mrs. Grosvenor P. Lowery of this city, is visiting friends here. Mrs. Read has not been often seen in New York since her marriage to Mr. Read three years ago. Mr. William Goadby Loew, who married Miss "Queenie" Baker last year, is now in Ireland, where he went some weeks ago on a shooting expedition.

Judge John Clinton Gray and Mrs. Gray will entertain at dinner at their Albany residence on Dec. 13 Miss Learned and her fiancé, Gen. Patterson, U. S. A. Mrs. Dean Sage and Mrs. John De Witt Peltz will also give dinners in their honor. Mrs. Alton B. Parker will give two dinners, one on Dec. 14 to Gov. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, and a second on Dec. 21 to Justice and Charles Patterson and Mrs. Patterson. Mr. and Mrs. William Bayard Van Rensselaer will give a dinner on Dec. 12 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Rathbone.

Mr. Walter Watson, Jr., of 52 West Fifty-second Street will give the second and last reception this afternoon, and Mr. Amedee de Pau Moran of 17 West Fifty-sixth Street will give a reception at his residence this afternoon to introduce his daughter, Miss Maria L. Moran.

The Trave, which sails for Southampton and Bremen to-day, has booked, among other passengers, E. M. Rathbone, Daniel Frohman, and George Woodward Smith. Among the passengers by the St. Louis, which arrived Saturday, and whose names have not already been published in this column, were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Graves, Mrs. William D. Harper, Miss Violet Harper, Mrs. M. J. Morrison, Augustus Jay, Mrs. Robert N. Kelly, Mrs. Redmond, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wood and Miss Wood, and Count Raoul d'Oyley and Countess d'Oyley. The Lucania, which also arrived Saturday, brought, among other passengers not heretofore noted, Lady Bowyer, Walter Phelps Dodge, Miss Kobbe, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lesher, Miss E. Van Rennselaer, and Mr. and Mrs. N. L. McCready. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which is to sail from Cherbourg to-morrow, is said to be bringing, among others, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins and Mrs. H. Victor Newcomb. The return of Mrs. Newcomb will be a surprise to her many friends, as when she sailed late in October last it was understood that it was her intention to remain abroad all Winter with her daughter, Mrs. Reginald Ward. Mrs. Ward had left Paris when her mother reached there, and had gone with her friends, Mr. Nathaniel Ingraham and Miss Ingraham of this city, to Italy, and Mrs. Newcomb journeyed there to meet the party.

The Directors of the Daughters of the Cincinnati held a meeting yesterday morning at the residence of Mrs. George P. Slade, 62 East Sixty-sixth Street. This society will give a reception on Thursday at Delmonico's, it being the centenary of the death of Washington. The society numbers about seventy-five women, among whom are representatives of the Livingston, Schuyler, Van Courtlandt, and other old New York families. Each member is allowed only a single ticket, which she can send out for this reception, so that the gathering at the reception will probably number not over 150.

The hunting season is in all its glory in France. At the different châteaux there have been shooting parties, and the Grand Dukes Alexis and Vladimir have been honored guests at numerous country places. Fifteen couples were out the first day of the fox-hunting season at Pau. Among those who were riding were Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes-Morgan, Miss Potter, Mr. Frank Lawson, and the Count R. d'Astorg. Among those who drove to the hunt were Mr. and Mrs. Ogden, Mrs. Potter, Mr. Newton King, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Livingston. Besides the regular fox hunting there have been drag hunts, numerous hunt breakfasts, and dances at the Country Club.

At Cannes it is expected that there will be an excellent golfing season. The golf club has been enlarged, and, in fact, rebuilt, and the links have been much improved. Among the first arrivals at the villas have been Mrs. R. Winslow, Lady Lister-Kaye, and Mr. A. Tennent. The hotels are filling slowly, but as yet there are very few Americans among the arrivals. Mrs. George B. McClellan, the widow of the American General, is at Nice, but intends to pass the Winter at the Hotel Victoria, Grasse. The Marquise de Mores will occupy her villa at Cannes after Christmas.

The Baroness Fava, wife of the Italian Minister at Washington, still remains at the Hotel Cambridge, in this city. She has been very ill with a severe attack of bronchitis, and is improving slowly. She has been confined for nearly four weeks to her apartments.

Among the late arrivals of Americans in Paris are Mrs. Fitz Hugh Whitehouse and Miss Whitehouse and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Potter. Mr. John La Farge was at the Elysée Hotel, where he remained until after the wedding of his niece, Miss Aimee Lawrence and Mr. Douglas Walter Campbell. Mrs. Walden Pell, who is the doyenne of the American colony in Paris, is quite ill, and at her advanced age there are serious fears as to the result of the illness. Mrs. D. Archie Pell and Miss Pell have just arrived in Paris.

Mr. William K. Vanderbilt arrived at Hot Springs, Ark., in his private car last Saturday evening. This is the second time Mr. Vanderbilt has visited the Springs. He will leave Hot Springs in his private car for this city next Sunday evening. Miss Helen Gould has returned to the city and opened her home, 579 Fifth Avenue, for the Winter months.

Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer gave her first reception at her Philadelphia residence yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Van Rensselaer was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Mrs. George W. C. Drexel, and Miss Minnie Drexel Fell. A reception was given yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Acorn Club, Philadelphia, by Mrs. Clifford Lewis, to introduce her daughter, Miss Eleanor Lewis. Miss Lewis was assisted in receiving by Miss Katherine Madeleine Smith, Miss Edith Meade, Miss Annie Hays, Miss Mary Norris, Miss Louise Weightman, Miss Ethel Wister, Miss Violett Whelen, Miss Ellen Drexel Paul, Mrs. I. Minis Hays, Mrs. John H. Easley, Mrs. Frederick Thurston Mason, Miss Elise Willing Baird, Miss Sarah Hays, Miss Rita Robb, Miss Elizabeth Shippen Greene, and Miss Cozens.

Mr. Bagby's second "musical morning" of the present season at the Astoria yesterday was largely attended. Mme. Schumann-Heink sang Rossi's aria "Aus Mitrane," Mendelssohn's "Fruhlingslied," and "Das erste veilchen," Rubinstein's "Die Waldhexe," and songs by Schubert, Mehrkens, Tschaikowsky, Franz and Meyer Hellmund, and the Kaltenborn String Quartet played selections from Dvorak, Boccherini, Moszkowski, Saro, and Kiengel, while Herr Kaltenborn rendered Wagner's "Traume" and "Albumblatt." Among those present were Mesdames George B. De Forest, Goodhue Livingston, Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Gouverneur Kortright, Lewis Cass Ledyard, John J. Mason, William Barclay Parsons, Arthur Mason Jones, James Hude Beekman, Charles S. Stickney, Joseph Stickney, Barton Harrison, James W. Gerard, Arthur Murray Dodge, Arthur N. Welman, Frederick Pearson, Samuel Thomas, Trenor L. Park, Ferdinand Wilmerding, Oliver Harriman, Jr., E. C. Brookes, Frederic R. Coudert, Olivet Gould Jennings, Marion Story, Charles S. Abercrombie, Timothy L. Woodruff, David H. Greer, W. Rathbone Bacon, H. E. Buckl, Frederick Roosevelt, David Wolfe Bishop, George G. De Witt, and Miss De Forest and Miss Callender. Mme. Nevada and Mr. David Bispham will sing at the third musicale next Monday morning.

THE STROLLERS' PERFORMANCE

The Strollers last evening gave the first performance of "The Lady from Chicago," described as a "musical comedy," the book by Edward Fales Coward, Louis Fitzgerald, Jr., J. Cheever Goodwin, Rupert Hughes, Robert C. Sands, and James Barnes, and the lyrics by Richard Henry Warren, Henry K. Hadley, William F. Peters, and Melville Ellis, to a large and distinctively fashionable audience. The performance was in aid of the building fund of the club, and the club's friends were out in force to applaud and to enjoy themselves.

With so many writers and such an array of diverse musical talent, another performance would probably not have been successful, but the authors of a very clever little skit seemed to have acted in absolute harmony, and the result was an amusing entertainment with catchy music and clever dialogue. There was sufficient plot to the skit to make it interesting and quite a field for the specialties of the various amateurs. The performance began very late, and it was not over at midnight. There were the usual encores and rather long waits, which always are typical of amateur performances.

The story of "The Lady from Chicago" has already been given. Mrs. Zigger and her son and daughters come to New York to make an assault on society. In the Pullman car en route they meet Mr. Livingston, a New Yorker, who promises to introduce them to his smart friends in the metropolis. Instead he hires a company of soubrettes out of a job and persuades his club friends to join them and to these he presents Mrs. Zigger and her interesting family.

In the second act, in this company, "the lady from Chicago" is taken to see the sights of the town in the manner of the usual Casino review, and the third act culminates in a ball at the Astoria, which was intended to be a satire on the one of Bradley Martin fame.

All the difficulties of a first night's performance were perhaps a bit accentuated, and at times the performance lacked go. With what the profession calls "ginger," which will be probably infused in the performance during the rest of the week, "The Lady from Chicago" will take rank with some of the best burlesque productions.

The reading of a letter from the Duke of Manchester stating that he had received a cablegram from his mother and that Lady Alice Montagu, his sister, was much worse, and that he was unable to appear, caused something of a disappointment to the audience. Mr. Morris Underhill took the part of Mr. Van Rensselaer, which the Duke was to have played.

The burden of the performance fell upon Miss Carrie Perkins, who took the leading rôle of Mrs. Xenophon Ypsilanti Zigger. Miss Perkins sang and danced with the same verve which made her famous in the old Adonis days, and Edward Fales Coward, as Mr. Livingston, was constantly on the stage. Otho Aveling, as Auditorium Lakefront Zigger, danced gracefully, and William E. Doyle, Jr., as Rastus, gave a clever clog dance. In the third act Miss Emily Key Hoffman and Louis Fitzgerald, Jr., danced delightfully, and won many encores. In the chorus were the Messrs. L. Gerald Benkard, James Hanford Brookfield, Henry A. Barclay, Jr., Walter Fanman Hyatt, Robert S. Webb, Herbert N. Rawlins, E. Vail Stebbins, and Elijah Woodward.

The auditorium was a brilliant sight, and resembled much a fashionable night at the opera. Among the audience were Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry and the Misses Gerry, Miss Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wetherbee, Mrs. Frederic Neilson, Mrs. Gouverneur Kortright, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. Edmond T. Bayliss, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord, Mrs. George De Forest, Mrs. Duncan Elliot, Mrs. Clement C. Moore, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Col. and Mrs. William Jay, Mrs. Frederic Kernochan, the Misses Kernochan, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., Mrs. Joseph Decker, Mrs. Sanford Bissell, Miss Daisy Post, Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Leggett, Miss Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. T. Huger Pratt, Miss Wright, Count Mucelli, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clinch Smith, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Miss Wells, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Breese, Miss Breese, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oelrichs, Miss Oelrichs, Mr. and Mrs. Montant, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McVickar, Mr. and Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, Mr. and Mrs. Lorillard Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryce, Miss Bryce, Mrs. George Crocker, the Misses Rutherford, Gen. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, the Misses Fitzgerald, the Misses Morton, Valentine Hall, Leonard Jacob, Jr., Phillip Lydig, Horace Brooker, Bustead Bayne, William Cutting, Jr., Thomas Cushing, Stanford White, Herbert Satterlee, Albert Morris Bagby, J. Greenleaf Sykes, and Frank L. Polk.

The following was the programme:

Holt—Northrop.

Miss Mabel Agnes Northrop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Northrop of 202 West Seventy-eighth Street, was married last evening to Mr. Joseph Holt. The ceremony was performed at Sherry's at 9:30 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Brown, rector of St. Thomas's Church. The bride had one attendant, Miss Marie Hubbard of Brooklyn, who was the maid of honor. The best man was Col. Jacob Ruppert, Jr., and the ushers were Robert C. Cammerer, Anton C. G. Hugel, Conrad L. Peters, and Frederick Ketz. A reception followed the ceremony.

COMMANDER E. P. WOOD DEAD.

He Was in Charge of the Petrel During the Battle of Manila Bay—Health Broken by Stay in Tropics.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Commander E. P. Wood, U. S. N., died from typhoid fever at his residence in this city this morning. He was in command of the gunboat Petrel at the battle of Manila Bay.

There will be a full naval funeral at Annapolis on Wednesday afternoon. A battalion of cadets will participate, and services will be held at the chapel of the Naval Academy. The pallbearers will be selected from among naval officers who were intimate friends of Commander Wood. Admiral Dewey will attend the funeral.

Edward Parker Wood was appointed to the Naval Academy at Annapolis from Ohio, Sept. 20, 1863, and was graduated in 1867. His first assignment was to special service aboard the Minnesota, and he received at the end of a year his commission as Ensign. He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in 1867.

Commissioned Lieutenant Commander in September, 1880, Wood superintended the construction of the gunboat Concord, to the command of which he was assigned in February, 1891. In May, 1893, he was transferred to the Bureau of Navigation, where he remained until 1896. He was assigned to the Asiatic Station, in command of the Petrel in December of the latter year, and in July, 1897, was promoted to the rank of Commander.

E ASTORIA LAND GRANT.

nor to Consider Mr. Whalen's ter—Members of State Land Board Defend Their Action.

ALBANY, Dec. 11.—Gov. Roosevelt said that he was in receipt of Corporation Counsel Whalen's letter requesting him to sign any patent issued by the State Land Board to the Astoria Light, Heat and Power Company for a grant of sixteen and one-half acres of land under water in Astoria, Queens County, and that he would give his most careful consideration and do justice out equally to all.

Some members of the State Land Board stated that a great many misstatements had been made in the published reports of the proceedings of the meeting at which the application for the Astoria Company was granted. From a semi-official source it was stated that the board granted no more rights to the Astoria Company for any tunnel under the East River. Its grant was limited to a trifle over sixteen acres of land and land under shoal water in Berrian's Creek and Berrian's Island. It obtained for this land $3,506, or over $200 an acre, the amount being fixed upon by a report of the State Appraiser.

The evidence before the board showed that the Astoria Company had paid $1,000 more for the uplands, of which it owned three acres, and it would cost about $1,000 an acre to reclaim the land under water by bulkheading and filling in, which would make the actual cost of the land granted more than the price paid for the uplands already owned. In addition to that, under the restrictions attached to the grant, none of the land granted becomes the property of the company until it has been improved in accordance with the express purposes of the company, and until the work is undertaken within five years the grant becomes null and void. The price charged per acre in this case is four times more than five times as much as was charged for a grant of about fifty acres of land in Jamaica Bay last October, to which no objection was made by the Corporation Counsel or by the Dock Commissioners of New York City.

The Dock Commissioners of New York city on several occasions claimed that the State has no power to make any grants of land within the limits of the city, except with the consent of the Commissioners. This Summer the board appointed a special committee to consider this claim, and an opinion was obtained from Attorney General Davies, in which he cited the opinion of the Court of Appeals in the Whittemore case. From this opinion the powers of the Dock Commission in the matter of grants of land under water appeared to be similar to the powers of cities upon legislation affecting them. A bill may be disapproved by the Governor of the city, but the Legislature may not be stopped from passing the bill over the Mayor's veto.

It was upon the opinion of the Attorney General that the board has continued to make grants of land under water in New York City, and the first test case to be brought upon this general principle is that of the Astoria grant.

TEN BY COPPERHEAD SNAKE.

Victim, John Sonwell, an Actor, Now in Bellevue Hospital.

John Sonwell, an actor of 211 East Fourteenth Street, brought a copperhead snake into his city from Georgia recently, and kept it in his room in a valise. He and his wife were packing up to go to Boston yesterday, and, forgetting about the reptile, the actor put his hand in the valise.

The snake bit him in the index finger of the left hand, and he rushed hatless and coatless to Bellevue Hospital, where a powerful dose of whisky was given to him and a bichloride of potash injected into the wound. The physicians have hopes of saving his life.

From a Democratic source came yesterday a report that the expenses of the recently ended Mazet investigation would amount to fully $100,000. The original appropriation was $50,000. Yesterday's report was to the effect that the coming Legislature would be asked to appropriate another $50,000 to pay the bills of the committee, of which Mr. Moss was to receive $25,000 as a fee.

Mr. Moss was seen last night at his home, 308 East One Hundred and Twentieth Street. He denied that the expenses of the investigation would amount to $100,000. "We have kept within the appropriation," said he. "So far as I am concerned, I have not thought of my own compensation. I will leave that to the Legislature, but it is foolish to talk of the expenses reaching $100,000."

Election in Boston To-day.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—After a preliminary contest in some respects unique in the city's history the campaign for the political control of Boston closed to-night with both sides apparently confident of victory to-morrow. The Democrats, despite the defection of one of their leaders, claim the city for Gen. Collins by 7,500, while the Republicans are not so extravagant, placing the probable lead of their nominee for Mayor, Thomas N. Hart, at 5,000. This year, for the first time, thirteen Aldermen will be elected by districts. Under the recent act of the Legislature framed for the purpose of preventing a tie in the board. Seventy-five members of the Common Council will also be voted for.

City Club's Watch on Legislation.

Close watch will be kept by the City Club on all legislation at Albany during the coming legislative session. A special committee has been appointed for this purpose, and it will be represented by a lawyer, whose duty it will be to examine carefully all bills which are introduced in both houses. The committee consists of Horace E. Deming, F. J. Goodnow, L. L. Delafield, Nelson S. Spencer, William Allare Shortt, Charles C. Nadal, Charles H. Strong, Frederick H. Allen, Arthur H. Ely, Joseph G. Deane, William Travers Jerome, and Lester W. Clark. A circular appeal for funds to carry on this work was sent out last night.

BILLIARD TOURNEYS' PROGRESS.

Smith, Kellogg, Threshie, and Keeney Win Their Games.

The final series of games for the Class B amateur championship at billiards began yesterday at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Four of the six players who remain in the tournament are thought to have excellent chances for the final honors, with the odds slightly in favor of Threshie and Smith.

Smith defeated Hendrick in the first evening game by a score of 300 to 258, his average being 4 14-74, and his highest run 44. Hendrick averaged 8 39-73, his best run being 25.

In the final game Kellogg defeated Cutler by a score of 300 to 261. Kellogg made an average of 6 42-43 and a run of 47. Cutler averaged 6 3-43 and made a high run of 48.

Threshie defeated Hevner in the afternoon game, scoring 300 to Hevner's 211, and making an average of 5 40-52, his highest break being for 41. Hevner, whose average was 4 7-51, made a run of 21.

The game between Townsend and Stark in the Intercity and Interclub Tournament scheduled for last night at Daly's Academy was postponed until to-night, and the contest which should have been played in the afternoon was played in the evening, when Keeney defeated Arnold by 280 to 197. The former made an average of 6 16-44, his best break being 34. Arnold averaged 4 17-45, and his highest run was 18.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BASEBALL.

Club Owners Here for Annual Meeting —Talk of Circuit Reduction.

The annual meeting of the National League and American Association of Baseball Clubs will open at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this morning. Every club will be represented by one or more delegates, the Louisville Club having five. Andrew Freedman, President of the New York Club, is also expected to be present for the first time in several years.

The fight this year will be an effort to reduce the League circuit from twelve to eight clubs. Cleveland, Louisville, Washington, and Baltimore are not included on the new slate. There is a ten-year agreement, which expires next year, which provides that the circuit consist of twelve clubs. To reduce the circuit before then requires a unanimous vote. Harry Von Der Horst, a leading stockholder in the Baltimore and Brooklyn Clubs, yesterday declared that the Baltimore and Brooklyn Clubs had decided to vote against any reduction in the circuit, and that even if it was made the Baltimore Club was not for sale.

Mr. Von Der Horst's statement was rather startling to the other club owners, who were ready to contribute to a fund to buy out the four clubs. Followers of Andrew Freedman and J. T. Brush insist that the only way to abolish the so-called syndicate baseball is to reduce the circuit, and that two of the four clubs booked to be dropped are in this class.

When "Barney" Dreyfuss of Louisville obtained control of the Pittsburg Club several days ago it was said that it was another syndicate. Mr. Dreyfuss yesterday said that he no longer had any interest in the Louisville Club.

James Hart of Chicago suggests that the new Western Association take in Louisville and Cleveland and the Eastern League take up the franchises of Baltimore and Washington. The various club owners held conferences yesterday concerning a reduced circuit. Andrew Freedman conferred with A. H. Soden of Boston and with John T. Brush.

The Brooklyn Club held its annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday, and re-elected the following officers: President—Charles H. Ebbets; Vice President and Treasurer—F. A. Abell; Secretary—Harry Von Der Horst; Manager—Edward Hanlon. The officers and A. C. Wall comprise the Board of Directors.

Jockey "Ross McCartney" Dead.

RAHWAY, N. J., Dec. 11.—Matthew Mindrane, a jockey, known in the West as "Ross McCartney," died here yesterday at the home of his father. He was thirty-one years of age, and had been a jockey half his life. He owned several horses.

Nephew of Levi Z. Leiter Dead.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—T. Benton Leiter, a nephew of Levi Z. Leiter, the Chicago millionaire, died at Mount Hope Retreat, to-day. For a number of years he was engaged in business in Chicago and in gold mining in the West with his uncle, and amassed a fortune, but lost the greater part of it in speculating. Recently his health gave way and a general collapse followed. Mr. Leiter was thirty-five years old. He leaves a widow, who is an actress, now in New York. The body will be taken to Hagerstown, Md., for interment.

Court Decision Saves City $40,000.

WHITE PLAINS, Dec. 11.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has handed down a decision in the case of Joseph Benedict, who claimed $60,000 for lands taken by the City of New York from him for the building of the Eighth Cornell Dam, in which it holds that lands taken on appraisal must be valued at the date of the filing of the oaths of the Commissioners of Appraisal rather than upon the date of the filing of maps showing proposed improvement. In this case the city saves $40,000 by the decision.

Like the Lies from the Philippines.

From London Truth.

Surely The Times can hardly imagine that it will make the war popular by publishing letters like this "from an officer":

"Our squadrons got right in among them in the twilight, and the most excellent pig-sticking ensued for about ten minutes, the bag being about sixty. One of our men, seeing two Boers riding away on one horse, stuck his lance through the two, killing both with one thrust. Had it not been getting dark, we should have killed many more."

This "pig-sticking" is thus described by one of the war correspondents:

"The Dragoon Guards got at them and three times went through them. A Corporal who was there tells me the Boers fell off their horses and rolled among the rocks, hiding their heads in their arms and calling for mercy—calling to be shot—anything to escape the stabs of those terrible lances through their backs and bowels. But not many escaped. We just gave them a good dig as they lay. Next day most of our lances were bloody."

PRESBYTERY'S LIVELY DAY

Warszawiak Case Referred to the General Assembly Again.

MAY BE NO McGIFFERT TRIAL

Dr. Evans Moves Members to Tears and Stops Action on West Presbyterian Church Matters.

The New York Presbytery again discussed the Warszawiak and McGiffert cases yesterday, with other matters of importance. It was admitted by those ministers who are disinclined to secrecy that the meeting was quite as animated as any that has preceded it within the last few months. One member of the Presbytery went so far as to say that the controversial spirit aroused reminded him of a political caucus where two factions were pulling in different directions.

The Presbytery suspended action in the Warszawiak matter, under stress of protest from members of the Fifth Avenue Church Session, and threw the case back into the hands of the General Assembly.

The question of what to do with Prof. McGiffert was long debated on the report of the special committee, and the resolutions of the Rev. Drs. Van Dyke, Brown, and Johnston, and the committee not having time yesterday to reach a conclusion decided to hold an adjourned meeting next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

An attempt to appoint a committee to make further inquiries in regard to the differences in the West Presbyterian Church, which it was reported had long ago been settled and which in effect meant reopening the old troubles of the pastor, the Rev. Anthony H. Evans, provoked a spirited controversy, but in the end Dr. Evans triumphed.

In the Warszawiak case Moderator Duffield at the last meeting was empowered to appoint a commission to consider the matter. But this was not done, as Dr. Duffield could find no one willing to serve on it. The debate yesterday was precipitated by the Rev. Dr. Booth, acting moderator of the Fifth Avenue Church Session, and Elder William Campbell. They appeared in strong protest with the complaint that the action of the Presbytery in authorizing a commission to review the case was a reflection upon the majority of the Session. They declared they would appeal from any action that might be taken to the General Assembly. Dr. Booth strongly resented the criticisms that had been made on his rulings and declared that his name had been brought into the reopened case without warrant. Dr. Booth, it was said, became angry. The result was that the resolution providing for review of the complaint and appeals from the action of the majority of the Church Session was rescinded. Dr. Booth and Mr. Campbell were in a measure mollified.

The case will now go from the Synod to the General Assembly for more adjudication. The Presbytery is relieved of it, but at the same time Mr. Warszawiak's status is a matter of speculation. His counsel, the Rev. Dr. Patterson, says he is a member of the Fifth Avenue Church in good standing. One of the prominent members of the Presbytery gave an opposite view, saying: "Warszawiak is still a suspended member, as he always was."

The pamphlet giving a comprehensive outline of the McGiffert matter ordered printed for distribution among the members of the Presbytery at the last meeting, was given out yesterday. Its contents include the report of the special committee. The two last clauses of the report show a modification of views in the last few months among the members of the Presbytery. They are as follows:

We express our great regret that Dr. McGiffert refuses to change his views, or withdraw from our communion.

That in view of the fact that this matter is "important, difficult, and of peculiar delicacy," respecting which the Presbytery is "greatly divided," and believing that an ecclesiastical trial at this juncture would be a serious detriment to the Church in this city, we overture the next General Assembly, in the exercise of its constitutional authority, to deal directly with this matter as in its judgment may seem best, so as to secure an early and final disposition of it.

From the little that could be learned yesterday, it is believed that in the interests of peace and harmony the whole matter will be dropped.

The resolution to appoint a committee to look "after the affairs of the West Church," it was said, was offered by the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke. This was supported by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Hoadley, who is reported to have said that he did not like to bear down too hard on a young man, but inasmuch as the West Presbyterian Church had lost many of its powerful members, he thought it was now a matter for the Presbytery to look into. This brought Mr. Smedley of the West Church Session to his feet at once in defense of Mr. Evans. Then the Rev. Mr. Evans spoke in his own behalf. He said he knew not rich or poor in his ministration.

"He made a strong speech," said a member of the Session afterward, "and I must say that it affected many of us to tears. But the best of all was that the Presbytery voted the resolution down almost unanimously."

Mr. Evans was seen at his residence last night, but declined to state any of the particulars of the afternoon meeting of the Presbytery.

SUPPOSED MURDER AT FISHKILL.

It Was at First Thought John Brennan Was Killed by a Train.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Dec. 11.—It now appears as though John Brennan, whose body was found lying alongside the New York Central Railroad tracks at Fishkill on Saturday morning, was murdered, and not struck by a train. Brennan was sixty years of age and an old resident of Fishkill. He worked on a farm, and drew some money on Friday night from his employer. This was the last seen of him until he was found unconscious, with his skull crushed back of the right ear and a slight contusion on the body. He died at the General Hospital on Saturday night, without recovering consciousness.

Opinion at first was that a train killed Brennan, but his widow contends that he was murdered. She visited Coroner Bevier to-day, and made a statement to the effect that her husband had been threatened several times by certain parties against whom he held incriminating evidence for past crimes. She claims that she heard a scream on Friday night, and is sure it was her husband's voice, but she did not dare to investigate.

The injuries to the dead man do not support the theory that he was struck by a train. The skull had been crushed downward, as if struck from above, and if he were hit by a train he would probably have received more extensive injuries. Furthermore, the body lay close to the track.

The matter is being investigated by the Coroner, who will give the case to the Police Department.

Heresy About Egypt.

From London Truth.

We have had a glorious victory in the Soudan. We have slain the Khalifa, and, apparently, many thousands of his followers, and we have had only two or three of our men killed. The Khalifa never commended himself to me as a ruler. He was fanatical and cruel. But the victory reads more like a battue of rabbits than a battle.

Since we took Fashoda there has been one Englishman there. He has now left it, broken in health. At Khartoum we have established at a cost of £100,000 a school where little Arab lads are taught a few English swear words to qualify them to act as donkey boys. We hold the river and two or three miles on each side. Beyond that is the desert. The products of this happy land are a few elephants' teeth and a little gum arabic. Commercially it is valueless. How, then, are we gainers by occupying it? Its conquest and its occupation were as foolish as is the magpie in stealing some article that catches its fancy, but which is of no use to it.

SHOT STRUCK PILOT BOAT

Shell Fired from Sandy Hook Hit and Damaged the Bennett.

ORDNANCE PRACTICE DANGERS

Similar Mishap in 1898 Knocked a Hole in a Schooner—Other Narrow Escapes Reported.

Several of the Sandy Hook pilots were receiving the congratulations of their friends yesterday on a narrow escape from disaster. They had come near being hit by an eight-inch dummy shell fired from the ordnance proving grounds at Sandy Hook on Saturday. The story did not come out until yesterday morning, when the pilot boat James Gordon Bennett of the New Jersey Pilots' Association came up from the Hook to undergo repairs. Though the men escaped the Bennett had been struck, but fortunately above the deck.

The Bennett was on station at 11:45 A. M. Saturday, cruising to the eastward and speeding along at a good gait under the influence of a northerly wind. There were aboard Pilots Hopkins, Mix, Hall, Bird, and Lennon, the boat keeper, a steward, and a crew of four men. The Bennett was about a mile south of the Scotland Lightship and between four and five miles from the point of the Hook. Mr. Mix was on watch, and one of the crew was at the wheel, while all of the other pilots were below. Some of the crew were on the deck forward and others were below.

Suddenly there was heard a vicious screeching noise, then a crashing forward on the starboard side, and then a plunging splash in the water, not more than fifteen feet to leeward. The shell, which had been fired in a southeasterly direction from the Hook, had hit the water some distance astern of the pilot boat and ricocheted, being deflected several degrees from its course, and had jumped over the craft from port to starboard between the masts, being on the decline of its trajectory when it encountered a staysail block, which it annihilated; striking next a stanchion, which it cleaved in twain; going through the bulwark, and knocking out one of the chain plates of the starboard fore shrouds. The peak halyard had been made fast to a cleat on the stanchion, and when that went the peak of the gaff fell.

The pilots are an agile lot, and those below displayed their agility to such advantage when they first heard that screeching sound that they reached the deck almost before the helmsman had recovered his breath.

It did not take long to draw out from the range of fire, at least the line of the last shot, and soon afterward temporary repairs had been made and the boat remained on duty until she had put all of her pilots aboard incoming vessels. That work finished, yesterday morning she came up the bay and went to Poillon's yard in South Brooklyn, where she was built some eight years ago, and then the news came out.

"Had that shot gone a few feet one way or the other," said one of the pilots, "some of us would have shared the fate of those Spaniards, who will never again tell what they are going to do with the American Navy."

Meantime the pilots feel somewhat sore at the army for "practicing" on them, as one of them put it, and they think that the Proving Ground officers might train their guns a little more down the coast. They had heard shots during the morning, but they had evidently been directed down the beach along the stretch of the Hook. It was the first shot fired seaward, they said, that came so near doing them mischief.

The officers at the proving ground were surprised when they heard that the Bennett had been struck. They had taken the usual observation before firing seaward, and had been careful to aim well off from any sail or steamer seen. They had not the slightest idea that a deflected shot had found an unintended mark, and were inclined to doubt the accuracy of the story until assured that the boat had reached the city for repairs.

A ten-inch shell from the proving ground on July 9, 1902, struck the schooner Henry A. Tilton under the counter. The crew, fearing that she was going to sink, abandoned her and were taken by a private launch into Sandy Hook, where they surprised the officers by telling them that their vessel had been struck.

The schooner, which had been bound out for Philadelphia in ballast, was towed into port by a tug. There was a hole in her stern as big as a barrel, but a bulkhead had saved her. The officers accounted for the accident by saying that the shot had been deflected from its course by contact with a dune.

An agitation was begun by maritime interests to have the proving ground removed, but nothing came of it. On several other occasions vessels have reported shells passing near to them.

BUNKO GAME'S VICTIM.

"Honest" John French, ex-Alderman and Wealthy Retired Builder of Brooklyn, Loses $5,000.

The detectives of the Brooklyn bureau are seeking three adroit confidence men who have in their possession $5,000 which until Friday last formed part of the bank account of "Honest" John French, ex-Alderman, one of the borough's best-known and most-respected citizens. Mr. French is about eighty years old.

Last Friday he left his home, at 469 Clinton Avenue, for a walk. He had reached Fulton Street and Vanderbilt Avenue, when he was accosted by a well-dressed young man, who grasped him by the hand and said:

"Why, how are you, Alderman? I am glad to se you about again."

Mr. French has been somewhat indisposed for several months. He did not know the stranger.

"Le me see," he said. "What is your name?"

"Why don't you know me? I'm young Pratt, son of Mr. Pratt—Standard Oil Pratt, you know," this last with an engaging smile.

The Pratt family were old neighbors of Mr. French, and he expressed pleasure in the meeting.

The young man impressed Mr. French very favorably. He brought up the subject of books, in which Mr. French is much interested, and said that he was about to purchase a new and very desirable work. He thought Mr. French would like a copy and he would try to procure one for him. Mr. French accepted the offer, and the young man conducted him to the upper floor of a house in Fulton Street, near Vanderbilt Avenue. There they were met by two men, who gave the bogus Mr. Pratt a hearty greeting. The latter introduced Mr. French, and then the four fell to discussing books.

Presently the subject of literature was dropped and Mr. "Pratt's" friends began to play what they explained was a simple game of chance. Mr. "Pratt" took a hand, and Mr. French was asked to join them. He refused at first, but as Mr. "Pratt" urged him he consented, as alleged.

In a few minutes, it is said, Mr. French was informed that he had won $1,000. One of the men gave him a check for that amount.

Mr. French and Mr. "Pratt" then left the room and walked down town. On the way the young man talked enthusiastically of the new game, and it is alleged that he prevailed upon Mr. French to draw $5,000 from the Mechanics' Bank to invest in it. They then returned to the house in Fulton Street. The police say the game was resumed. Mr. French's $5,000 and the check which he had received were soon in the hands of the swindlers.

Mr. French spoke of his loss, and yesterday the matter was reported to the police.

Mr. French has been prominent in public and business life in Brooklyn for over half a century, and is active in church and charitable circles. He is a builder, now retired, and many of the best known structures in Brooklyn were constructed by him.

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The Knickerbocker Athletic Club had out its best team in the National League of Clubs tournament ball last night, and were victorious in two games. The Knickerbockers won the first game of the night rather easily from the Lotus team. The second game between the Lotus and Riverdale bowlers was close throughout. The score at the end of the eighth frame was a tie. In the ninth frame the Lotus team gained an advantage of about twenty pins through consecutive strikes made by W. Gordon. In the final frame poor "planing" on spares and a difficult spare which Reham missed enabled the Riverdales to win out by four pins. W. Gordon's score of 243 in this game was a notable feature. He made six consecutive strikes. The Knickerbockers won easily from the Riverdales in the third game. Scores:

M. Sherman read a paper on "The nd Science of Capital Punishment otricity" before the Society of Medrisprudence at its annual meeting Academy of Medicine last night. herman held that the present method cuting murderers in this State was to produce great physical suffering man thereby put to death.

iew was that the condemned man a perspiration when the current is on, and that this condition results turning of his body into a voltaic e outer portion of which must be ghly dried up before the inner porpenetrated by the deadly current, heat being generated meanwhile.

Sherman quoted a celebrated French on signs of death, which cited the "a man's heart action being suspendr minutes by an electric shock without ollowing, and another of a man and surviving a shock of 200,000 volts. d, in part:

Sherman adverted to the fact that in of execution in this State the current d to be turned on from two to four o kill the subject. He continued:

PLAN TO GET THE CONVENTION.

Philadelphians Arrive in Washington Prepared to Argue with Republican Leaders—Fear Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The preliminary skirmishing for the contest for the honor of entertaining the next Republican National Convention was begun to-day, when the advance guard of the Philadelphia delegation, which is to work in behalf of that city, arrived at the National capital and took quarters at the Arlington Hotel, where the National Committee will meet next Friday. They engaged an advantageous room on the ground floor, and set in operation the machinery for conducting a lively campaign for securing the convention.

The Philadelphia citizens who arrived today include the following: W. S. P. Shields, Chairman; Henry Brooks, Penrose O. McClain, Major A. T. Innis, J. F. McLaughlin, Frank Anderson, L. E. Seaber, and Robert M. McWade. Chairman Shields believes that if there is any contest at all as to the place for holding the next convention it is between Philadelphia and Chicago, with the chances largely in favor of the Quaker City. Philadelphia is entitled to the convention, he says, and her citizens have raised $100,000 as a campaign fund to be offered the National Committee.

The committee proposes to carry on a vigorous and practical campaign in the interests of securing the convention, and will make an effort to have the selection of Philadelphia decided upon before the greater committee of one hundred, which is scheduled to come about Thursday, arrives in the city.

HOTEL MEN SUBSCRIBE $20,000.

Will Give More to Bring the Republican Convention Here.

A meeting of the City Hotel Keepers' Association was held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria. The possibility of the holding of the Republican National Convention in this city was discussed at length. All present expressed approval of the effort to bring it here, and in less than an hour more than $20,000 was subscribed to the fund for that purpose.

George C. Boldt of the Waldorf-Astoria last night expressed the opinion that the hotel keepers would largely increase this sum before the end of the week.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY DINNER

President Raymond Speaks of the Growth of the Institution.

The Wesleyan University Club of New York held its thirty-first annual dinner last evening at the Aldine Association's rooms in the Constable Building. About seventy-five alumni and guests were seated at the tables. Among those present were Controller Bird S. Coler, President Bradford P. Raymond of Wesleyan University, Stephen H. Olin, Judge William Kellogg of Yonkers, Magistrate Charles E. Teale, and Prof. Petty of the New York Law School.

President Raymond in an after-dinner talk said that the university had had a good year. He spoke hopefully of the development of the "commons" system, which enables those who otherwise could not afford it to enter college. He said the university expected within a couple of years to have a new administration building to cost from $125,000 to $150,000. He spoke of the need of a Chair of Sociology, and said the United States, like England and Germany, must have a governing class in municipal, State, and National politics, not based on blood or on money, but on brains and moral character.

Controller Coler spoke on various problems of municipal government.

WHITE HOUSE RECEPTIONS.

Army Will Still Precede Navy Officers Despite Dewey's Rank.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Col. Bingham, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, and who in that capacity directs the official receptions at the White House, is nearly ready to announce the number and dates of the receptions and dinners to be given by the President and Mrs. McKinley at the Executive Mansion. It is expected that the programme will be published by Dec. 15. It has been prepared and is before the President. In all respects it adheres closely to the general plan carried out last Winter. The State dinners and receptions will be held on Wednesdays.

It is positively stated that no change is to be made in the order of reception of the army, navy, and Marine Corps in consequence of the fact that Admiral Dewey, the head of the navy, is superior in relative rank to Major Gen. Miles, commanding the army. An examination of the records discloses the fact that from 1886 down to the present time the three military branches of the Government, namely, the army, navy, and Marine Corps, have been invariably received by the President on New Year's Day in the order given.

That order of precedence is due to the fact that the three military departments were organized in the order named. In addition to being much older than the other two services, the army is numerically much larger than both the others combined. The individual rank of officers of the three departments has never heretofore been considered a factor in determining the relative position of the organizations, and it has happened more than once that the officer at the head of the naval line was superior in relative rank to the officer at the head of the army line.

Arrangements for the reception on New Year's Day are precisely similar to those of last year, and consequently there will be no change in the general order of the reception of the people in official and private life. As usual, the members of the Cabinet and their families will be first received, followed in order by the Diplomatic Corps, the Supreme Court, Senators and Representatives, army, navy, and Marine Corps, various organizations, including the veterans of the Mexican war and the war of the rebellion, the Oldest Inhabitants' Association, &c., and the public generally.

THE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION.

Programme of Annual Meeting at Cornell Dec. 27, 28, and 29.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 11.—The twelfth annual meeting of the American Economic Association will be held at Cornell University Dec. 27, 28, and 29. At the opening session on Wednesday morning, Dec. 27, President J. G. Schurman of Cornell will deliver an address of welcome, which will be followed by the annual address of the President of the association, Arthur T. Hadley, President of Yale University, whose subject will be "Economic Theory and Political Morality." This will be followed by a discussion by Profs. J. R. Commons, L. M. Keasbey, E. R. A. Seligman, and others.

At the Wednesday afternoon session the following papers will be read: "Senior's Theory of Monopolies," Prof. Richard T. Ely, University of Wisconsin; "The Place of the Speculator in Distribution," Prof. H. C. Emery, Bowdoin College; "Taxation as a Partial Substitute for Borrowing to Cover Permanent Municipal Improvements," Prof. E. D. Durand, Stanford University.

The subject at the session of Thursday morning will be "Combinations or Trusts." The following papers will be read and will serve as a basis for general discussion: "Financiering of Trusts," Charles S. Fairchild; "The Influence of Trusts in the Development of Undertaking Genius," Prof. Sidney Sherwood, Johns Hopkins University; "Some Tendencies in Recent Combinations which May Become Dangerous," James Brooks Dill.

At the Thursday afternoon session the subject will be "Railway Economics," which will be introduced by the following papers: "Railroad Relief and Beneficiary Associations," W. H. Baldwin, Jr., President of the Long Island Railroad; "Railway Charters," Dr. B. H. Meyer, University of Wisconsin; "Difficulties in Adjusting Rates," Martin A. Knapp, Chairman of the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

At the concluding session on Friday morning there will be papers on "The Consumers' Label and the Sweat Shop," by John Graham Brooks, and "Plans for the Twelfth Census," by Prof. Walter F. Willcox, Chief Statistician. These will be followed by the report of the Committee on Colonial Finance, composed of Prof. J. W. Jenks, C. S. Hamlin, Albert Shaw, and Prof. E. R. A. Seligman.

The members of the association and the ladies accompanying them will be received on Wednesday evening by President and Mrs. Schurman.

THE ATTACK ON LINGAYAN

Successful Combination of Land and Sea Forces.

AMERICAN TROOPS' BRAVERY

Jumped Out of Boats and Dashed Over the Insurgents' Trenches—The Place Quickly Taken.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

LINGAYAN BAY, P. I., Nov. 7.—The possibilities of a thoroughly successful combination of manoeuvres between army and navy were again proved to-day, when the two branches of the service met before the trenches of the insurgents at the head of Lingayan Gulf and worked harmoniously and effectually to a finish in such a way as to reflect great credit upon themselves.

The long-deferred and much-discussed expedition to the northward of Manila Bay, for the command of which Gen. Wheaton was called in from the firing line, was at last brought to definite shape by the arrival of additional troops from San Francisco. A column counting 2,500 men, organized, provisioned, and equipped for several weeks, was embarked aboard the large transport Sheridan, the chartered steamer Francisco Reyes, and the horse transport Aztec, and, with one or two smaller vessels to tow cascoes for ferrying men and material to the beach, left Manila yesterday morning for the 210-mile sea trip to this place. In order to make the disembarkation safe for the troops, the services of the navy were called upon, and a small squadron was ordered to assemble, under command of Commander Knox, whose pennant flew from the masthead of the Princeton. The other vessels of the flotilla were the Bennington, Commander Arnold; the Helena, Commander Moore; the Manila, Lieut. Commander Nazro; the Callao, Lieut. Commander Tappan, and the Samar, Ensign H. C. Mustin.

Lingayan Gulf is of importance, as it is the nearest safe western point to the China and Japan ports from which smuggling vessels with contraband of war for the insurgents can come and find access by rail to Aguinaldo's troops about Manila. The navy has for months sealed up the entrance, so that lately the blockade runners have been forced elsewhere, but the northern section of the Dagupan-Manila Railway has been controlled by the insurgents, and it was beyond the power of the warships to interfere with this kind of transportation. To protect the possible landing places at the head of the bay numerous earthworks and carefully constructed trenches had been from time to time thrown up, and manned by various detachments from the insurgent army.

Gen. Wheaton determined not to depend on the railway for his line of communication after landing, as much trouble had been had all along through interference with railway traffic at the Manila end of the line. Gen. Lawton has apparently reached the same conclusion, for he, too, is taking several days' rations along with him, and depending more or less upon the country for his support. In consequence of this determination on the part of Gen. Wheaton, it became necessary to attack the trenches at the extreme southeastern corner of the bay, and there this noon the warships repaired as soon as the army contingent was made out entering the bay.

The ships were all cleared for action, and the ever vexed question of how to dispose of the boats and keep their flying splinters from doing damage to the gun crews and sharpshooters about the decks was in this case easily settled, as their services were required for transporting the men and material from the transports to the shore after the navy boys had gotten in their work on the defenses commanding the beach and its approaches. Each vessel sent her steam launch and available pulling boats to the Sheridan, where they were quickly loaded with soldiers, in full readiness to make a dash for the shore as soon as the way was cleared for them.

About three-quarters of a mile from the beach line, and as close to it as the depth of water permitted, the ships took up their positions—the Helena ahead, then the Princeton, Bennington, and Manila, about three ships' lengths apart, with the little gunboats on either flank, ready to move here and there and elsewhere as their services were most needed. At this easy range the batteries of the various ships opened fire, knocking off the tops of the trenches and tearing great gaps in the surrounding groves. Very little reply was made by the insurgents, who had no doubt been taken by surprise by the entire want of "mañana" in the movements of Gen. Wheaton, whose plans from beginning to end were carried out with remarkable celerity and exactness. After an hour or more of furious firing and no reply from the shore, Commodore Knox hoisted the signal to cease firing, in order to prevent hitting our own troops, then advanced pretty well toward the shore.

As the boats approached, the Callao and Samar took up positions that would enfilade the trenches, and kept up a crisscross fire that must have bothered the people in the trenches immensely, and which probably interfered more or less with their getting a good aim at the boats all strung along the beach. Profiting by former lessons the insurgents, like "Brer Rabbit," lay low while the big guns were knocking the tops off their trenches, but when Jackie stopped firing and the soldier boy began to take a hand, the Mausers and Remingtons cut up the air in fine shape. All to no advantage, however, as without waiting for the boats to ground, hundreds of our men jumped out and with glorious bravery dashed over the trenches, firing as they went, and sending the colored chaps flying before them.

As the troops gathered on the beach, they were at once controlled by the beach master, formed into companies, and pushed to the front on the double. Long before the last detachment had arrived our boys had reached the surrounding villages, whose inhabitants were fleeing in wild terror over the bridge toward Dagupan.

Darkness had ong ago come on, and the actual casualties could not be ascertained. A few men had been hit while disembarking, and comparatively slight damage had been done to the boats.

To-day the horses, provisions, ammunition, and material are being landed, and the advance to the southward is already an accomplished thing. Soon Aguinaldo will have to take to the mountains and Northern Luzon, which means guerrilla warfare for a short while.

ELIZABETH MAN'S DEATH.

McCormick Stricken in Small Hotel—His Brother's Fate.

William J. McCormick, fifty-four years old, died suddenly yesterday morning in a "Raines Law" hotel at 146 Avenue C. Heart disease caused his death. His roommate, John Sauer, gave his home as Elizabeth, N. J.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 11.—William McCormick, who was found dead in his room in Manhattan this morning, was a brother of Judge Thomas F. McCormick, who committed suicide because of financial troubles.

William McCormick disappeared after his brother's death. Before leaving this city he disposed of his interest in property in Broad Street here to Foster Callaghan for $5,000, and this has led to much litigation between Callaghan and the National State Bank, which held McCormick's indorsements for $4,200 in notes discounted by his brother. It was alleged by the bank that the sale of the property to Callaghan was meant to defraud the bank.

McCormick was wealthy.

AIR BAGS TO RAISE A SHIP.

Capt. F. C. Miller Working on the Macedonian, Sunk Off Seabright.

An attempt which is being made to raise the German ship Macedonian, which was sunk off Seabright last June in collision with the Old Dominion Line steamship Hamilton, is attracting interest in maritime circles because the vessel was abandoned by the underwriters, as she was in deep water, where the long work which would attend ordinary wrecking would be hampered by the swell off shore.

The work is being done as a speculation by Capt. Frederick C. Miller, Frank A. Newcomb of Flatbush being in partnership with him in the venture. Capt. Miller was formerly in the Red D Line service, and during the war commanded a dispatch boat. As the Macedonian, which was under charter to the Ward Line, was a new vessel, the venture promises to be a profitable one, if successful.

Capt. Miller is using the method employed by Lieut. Hobson in the work on the Maria Teresa off the Cuban coast. It consists simply in the use of rubber bags, which are placed within the vessel and then inflated through tubes running up to floats, on which are air pumps. An attempt to bring the vessel to the surface will be made to-day.

SAY SCHEME BEATS MILLER'S.

Authorities Accuse Newark Man of Working Four Alleged Swindles.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—Osmer W. Roper of 9 South Seventeenth Street was arrested to-day and held by United States Commissioner Whitehead under $3,000 bail, charged with using the mails for swindling purposes. A hearing was set for Thursday. It is charged that he worked four alleged swindling corporations at one time—the Realty Corporation Company of New Jersey, the Realty Loan and Trust Fund Company, the Realty Loan and Title Company, and the Four Per Cent. Mortgage Company. His offices were in the Globe Building.

His scheme, it is alleged, was to send out circulars setting forth that money was plentiful in Newark, and that 4 per cent. loans could be obtained on almost any kind of property with easy interest and sure renewals. It is said that he charged his patrons various fees, but did not secure the promised loans.

The officials allege that Roper has dupes all over the country, and that the amount of business he has done annually for three years exceeds the business done by Miller, the Brooklyn financier. He employed a large force of clerks.

Princeton Athletes Must Study.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 11.—Capts. Hillebrand and Cregan of the Princeton University baseball and track teams, respectively, called a meeting to-day of all the candidates for the teams. Prof. H. B. Fine, Chairman of the Athletic Committee, told the candidates that, should any of them have a single condition in March, he would not be allowed to continue training or become a member of either team. Forty-five men registered as candidates for the baseball team, and about forty for the track team.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS

A. C. Comin & Co. have been appointed Indianapolis agents of the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company.

The Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation of London has been authorized to transact a general casualty and accident business in New Jersey.

Private dispatches from St. Louis absolutely deny the recent rumor that the Covenant Mutual Life Insurance Company of that city contemplates reinsurance.

It was rumored yesterday that President John T. Stone of the Maryland Casualty Company is about to assume the Presidency of the Fidelity Fire Insurance Company of Baltimore.

Superintendent Van Cleave of the Illinois Insurance Department has authorized the Toilers' Fraternity of Pontiac and the Bohemian-American Order of Foresters of Chicago to transact a mutual fraternal life insurance business in that State.

The recent effort to establish fixed fire insurance dwelling house rates for Suffolk County was reported yesterday to have failed, through lack of support on the part of Eastern union companies, the local agents having made no provision for an agreement relative to commissions.

The Chicago Fire Underwriters' Association has authorized a form of policy for products in cars (not in a building) on tracks at the Union Stock Yards, at a rate of $1.50 per $100 of insurance, with 80 per cent. coinsurance clause, or $1.25 when full insurance is carried. A ruling was also issued to the effect that it is a violation of rules to insure machinery or other contents of a packing house for a period of three years at less than three annual rates.

Several large local fire insurance companies are criticising the rates of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange on manufacturing risks and wholesale drug houses. An official of one New York company stated yesterday that his company had declined fully 50 per cent. of that kind of risks, because of the extremely low rates, and added that the difficulty probably arises from the enforcement of the 30 per cent. reduction order, regardless of the merits of the individual hazards.

The fire insurance companies writing railroad insurance report a bad condition of business for 1899. One underwriter declared yesterday that the losses of the Railroad Insurance Syndicate of this city and the Western Railway Syndicate of Chicago will alone exceed the aggregate premium income, no allowance being made for the expense of obtaining the business. The Western combination is believed to be the heavier loser, because of severe losses sustained on the Northern Pacific and other trunk line schedules.

The Brokerage Committee of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange has revoked the brokerage certificate of S. Joseph. At the meeting of the committee on Friday action will be taken on the proposed extension of outstanding certificates. The recommendation of Manager Hess, to be received at that time, will probably not call for an extension of more than thirty days, at the expiration of which period all certificates to be renewed will be reissued, upon the payment of a license fee of $2.50, in accordance with the action of the Exchange on Dec. 7.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

PURDY & WYATT.—Schedules of Purdy & Wyatt, managers of the Hotel Metropole, at Broadway and Forty-second Street, show liabilities $18,300, nominal assets $6,711, actual assets $5,111.

HARRIS & STAHL.—Judge O'Dwyer of the City Court has appointed Charles J. Hardy receiver in supplementary proceedings for Harris & Stahl, formerly dealers in druggists' labels at 84 Elm Street, on the application of Jacob Levy, a judgment creditor. The receiver was authorized to sell two patents issued June 28, 1898.

WILLIAM F. ELLIS.—Judgment for $5,115 was entered yesterday against William F. Ellis in favor of Joseph D. Lowe on an attachment obtained on Oct. 30 for balance due on two notes made by Mr. Ellis in Boston in 1893 for $6,000. The summons was served on Mr. Ellis at the Tombs on Oct. 31 by Deputy Sheriff Strauss.

PENA BROTHERS.—Pena Brothers, exporters of hardware at 90 Chambers Street, made an assignment yesterday to John Melvin without preference. The partners are Mario F. de la Pena, residing at 2,494 Eighth Avenue, and Marino S. de la Pena, who is at present in Havana. The deed was signed by Mario F. de la Pena only for the firm. They have been in business since Feb. 1, 1894, and had previously been employed in the hardware trade here. Their trade was principally with Mexico, Central America, and Cuba. Mr. Pena said yesterday that he could give no particulars of assets and liabilities at present, but was sure the liabilities were less than $10,000, partly due in this city and partly abroad.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

HARRY E. MOONEY.—Schedules of Harry E. Mooney, Western mortgage broker, of 33 Liberty Street show liabilities of $50,450 and nominal assets of $10,700.

RICHARD GREENSTONE.—Richard Greenstone, manager, of 846 Tenth Avenue has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,676 and no assets.

JACOB BARBEY.—Jacob Barbey of 2,278 Second Avenue has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $14,903 and no assets. He was formerly of Maus & Barbey, who dissolved in 1898.

ROSIE KORN.—Rosie Korn, residing at 1,548 Fifth Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $4,500 to one creditor and no assets. She indorsed accommodation paper of Tobias Korn.

MORTIMER NORDEN.—Mortimer Norden, electrician, of 150 East Sixty-sixth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,218 and no assets. He was formerly of Miller & Co. at 1,350 Broadway.

SAMUEL KOLLER.—Samuel Koller, manager of a hotel at 52 South Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $10,376 and no assets. All but $900 of the debts are for furs purchased in Leipsic, Germany, in 1898 and 1894.

WILLIAM B. BROWN.—William B. Brown, manager of a coal yard on One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, near Second Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $4,570 and no assets. He was formerly in the coal business, and made an assignment on May 6, 1898.

RICHARD R. DIETZEL.—Richard R. Dietzel of 147 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $26,000 and assets of $1,200, consisting of land in Buffalo and cash in bank. He was formerly in the metal business in Buffalo and most of the debts were contracted in that city between 1891 and 1898. The largest creditors are the Union Bank of Buffalo, $7,000, secured, and James S. Glenn of Buffalo, $12,000. The Eastern Brewing Company of Brooklyn is a creditor for $500.

RICHARD A. SAALFIELD.—Richard A. Saalfield, residing at 65 West Sixty-ninth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $47,485 and nominal assets, consisting of a claim for $20,000 against W. Bayard Cutting for work and 500,000 shares of stock of the British North America Trading and Exploration Company, pledged as collateral and considered worthless. Mr. Saalfield was formerly in the music publishing business. Of the liabilities, $15,000 are in judgments and $45,000 as indorser on forty-six notes for J. A. Bacon of Boston. The debts were contracted from 1892 to 1899.

Morgan & Slattery Hearing.

The bankruptcy petition of Morgan & Slattery, the architects, came up yesterday before Referee Stanley W. Dexter, who said after the hearing that the case was practically closed, and that the applicants probably would be discharged from bankruptcy unless it could be shown that they had sworn falsely as to their assets. The books of the firm were exhibited and showed it to be insolvent. Mr. Morgan said that people thought the firm had been making money, but he declared that it had been losing. He declined to give any information relative to the value of contracts now held by the firm.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals

In its Opinion of Dec. 7, 1899,

Finally and fully sustains the Welsbach Co.'s Patent.

DEALERS and USERS and MANUFACTURERS are CAUTIONED against INFRINGEMENT of the

WELSBACH PATENTS

Judge LACOMBE, in the United States Circuit Court, handed down the following opinion, Saturday, December 9th, 1899.

On motion to restrain complainant from sending circulars to the customers of American Incandescent Lamp Co.:

LACOMBE, Circuit Judge.

Irrespective entirely of the preliminary objection that affirmative relief of this sort will not be granted to defendant—a question not now passed upon—there seem no good grounds for criticism of complainant's circular. It states that Judge Townsend enjoined the "manufacture and sale" of infringing mantles, and he did grant such an injunction. And this court has enjoined the sale of mantles which the person enjoined did not himself manufacture, when his past conduct in the matter of infringement created a special equity in favor of the complainant against him. It is true that the circular goes further, and threatens suit against persons who sell mantles, but who never have been at all concerned in manufacturing or causing them to be manufactured.

In other words, it threatens suit upon the patent as if it were a patent for a product. But the complainant insists that the threat is made in good faith; that it intends to bring suits against sellers of the infringing mantles upon the theory that the patent is really one for a product. In view of the peculiar language of the claim, this court is not now prepared to hold that such contention would be wholly without merit, or that the complainant could not succeed against a mere seller. Moreover, it is contended that the seller of a purchased mantle himself promotes the taking of the final step in the process, and such contention has not yet been passed upon adversely to complainant. These are questions which should be left to be determined in one of such suits, rather than here. If complainant intends to prosecute one or more sellers, and there is nothing before the court to induce a disbelief in its assertion that it does so intend, it would seem to be its proper course to warn dealers to desist from selling.

To the Holders of the
First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds
OF THE PITTSBURGH & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

(DATED JULY 1, 1887):

Referring to our notice of December 14, 1898, we have to announce that holders of more than 80 per cent. in amount of the First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the Pittsburgh and Western Railway Company have deposited these bonds with us in accordance with the terms of said notice.

We have further to announce that we have made arrangements with the Reorganization Managers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company whereby, in case they issue any Plan of Reorganization of the Pittsburgh and Western Railway Company prior to December 14, 1899, they undertake to give all our depositors whose bonds shall not have been sold to them for cash, as stated in the next paragraph, an option for at least thirty days after such Plan is issued, to take par and interest in cash, or to have their bonds included in the Plan on the basis of new securities. They also agree that at the expiration of such option they will purchase from us for cash at par and accrued ifiterest up to the time of delivery all bonds held by us in respect of which the option to take new securities shall not have been exercised, we agreeing to sell them such bonds. If no Plan shall have been issued by that date, the foregoing arrangements will continue in force thereafter until said Reorganization Managers terminate the same by notice to us.

If any holder of our receipts or certificates, rather than await such Plan, desires and shall elect to sell his bonds for cash, (thereby losing his right of election to take either cash or new securities after issuance of the Plan,) said Reorganization Managers further agree that, at any time prior to December 14, 1899, (and also thereafter until notice from them to us,) such holder may present his receipt or certificate at our office for proper annotation of such election thereon, and that, at the expiration of thirty days from the date of such annotation, he shall receive par and accrued interest in cash therefor at our office upon surrender of his receipt or certificate properly indorsed.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Much irregularity was shown in yesterday's market for outside securities. At the opening traders, as well as commission brokers, sold a good deal of stock, and prices went off sharply. In some cases the losses amounted to several points, while in few, if any, stocks were quotations as high as at the close on Saturday. Strength appeared here and there in the list, and, indeed, except where stocks were openly offered buyers found it difficult to procure stock. When the inside market improved in the afternoon the outside market turned with it, and recoveries as sharp as the morning's declines were recorded in a number of issues. Prices in many cases got back to the highest figures of the day, and some even went beyond Saturday's closing and ended the day with net gains.

AMALGAMATED COPPER was probably the most active issue, and followed a particularly irregular course. Opening sales were made at an advance over the previous week's close, but immediately after the opening under liquidation, accompanied by a certain amount of short selling, the stock began to decline, and went 2 points below the lowest figure that had yet been established for the stock. At 79 several hundred shares changed hands, and then it began to advance, and got back to 80¼. Reacting to 80⅛, it closed at 80 bid, a net loss of half a point. Traders bulled the stock in the afternoon, as they had feared it in the morning. Transactions amounted to between 4,000 and 5,000 shares.

NEW AMSTERDAM GAS was to only a small degree affected by the general conditions prevailing. The common stock sold at 22, a half point recession from Saturday's close, but not much stock was be had in the neighborhood of this figure, and the bid was later advanced to 22¾. It closed unchanged for the day, at 22½ bid. In the preferred stock transactions were made as high as 47, and it remained in demand at 46, showing a net advance of 1½ points. Prices for the bonds improved slightly, and in small lots they sold at 94. In none of these issues was the day's transactions in large amount.

ELECTRIC AXLE was fairly active, selling off early in the day and recovering with the rest of the market. It sold as low as 6, and when prices recovered in the afternoon as high as 6½ was paid for the stock. Closing figures showed a net gain of an eighth of a point, the final bid being 6½.

ELECTRIC BOAT was notably strong, and was in good demand throughout the day. Strength in the stock was attributed to the belief that favorable action by the Government in regard to the Holland boat will assure to the Electric Boat Company a profitable business. It sold as high as 30½ and closed at 30 bid, a net gain of 3 points. Trading in the preferred stock was very light, the only transactions for the day being made in the neighborhood of 40.

STORAGE POWER was much less active than on most of the days of last week, and was affected by the irregularity that characterized the whole market. It sold as low as 10, but on a very few sales got back to about 11, and closed at 10¾ bid, a recession of a quarter of a point from Saturday's figures.

HAVANA COMMERCIAL.—Among the industrial stocks were several that showed notable strength, and which, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions prevailing yesterday morning, ended the day with substantial net gains. Havana Commercial preferred, which closed on Saturday at 60 bid, was in demand throughout the day above that price, and ended the day with a net gain of 2½ points. A slight net gain was also recorded in the common stock, which, after selling at 15½, closed at 16 bid, a net advance of half a point.

ELECTRIC STOCKS.—Most of the stocks in the electric group were weak. Electric Vehicle common was offered at 64 and the preferred at 90. Among the transportation stocks, New York Transportation suffered most, and it was also the only one that was traded in to any amount. At the close it was offered at 10, the paid-in value of the stock. It showed a net loss of 1 point, the final bid being 9½.

STANDARD OIL was active to the extent of about 200 shares. On these sales it declined from 406½ to 463, recovering to about 464 and closing at 464½ bid, a net loss of 1½ points.

Closing quotations were as follows:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—Boston had a decidedly active market to-day. Mining stocks led, and they were thrown out freely. Parrot led in volume of sales. Over 4,000 shares of this stock came out in the morning, the price falling 6, to 31½, rallying to 35. Osceola was off 5½, to 64; Quincy, 3, to 142; Tamarack, 8, to 194. United States rose 1, to 31, but fell back to 30 in the afternoon. Utah lost 2½ to 29¾; Wolverine, ¾, to 37. Mohawk held at 16. Michigan lost ½, to 7½. Dominion Coal fell 2, to 45, rallying ¾; United States Oil, 2, to 33, rallying in full and 1 better, or to 36; Central Oil, 1, to 19¼; Centennial, 2, to 18; Cochita, 1⅞, to 12; Bingham, ½, to 11½; Calumet, 15, to 720; Butte, 10, to 50, rallying to 54½; Amalgamated, 1¾, to 79; Old Dominion, 2½, to 22; Isle Royale, 4, to 23, rallying 1; Arcadian, 4¼, to 25, rallying to 25; Montana, 10, to 285.

Apart from the mining shares and the stocks which are traded in on Wall Street as well as here, there was little doing, but prices did not yield much in the few prominent home specialties left after these exceptions. Business in bonds was quiet. Atchison adjustment 4s yielded 1⅜, to 78½; the general mortgage 4s sold at 96½.

At the close prices hardened generally. Amalgamated Copper rallied 2, to 81; Calumet, 10, to 730; Montana, 5, to 290. United States Oil closed 1½ lower than the highest, at 34½, or ½ net loss for the day. Osceola rallied 1, to 65. As a rule net losses were quite substantial, the recoveries in most of the mining stocks being fractional only—small fraction at that. Nevertheless, there was a pause in the selling, and some signs of willingness to buy here and there.

Call loans, 6@7; time money, 5@6; commercial paper, 5½@6. At the Clearing House balances between the banks loaned at 6 per cent.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The local market took its cue from Wall Street. With the exception of Linseed, which was well held around 11 for the common and 50 for the preferred, all of the active stocks showed big declines from Saturday. Biscuit common opened at 35 and dropped to 31, closing at 34⅜, while the preferred opened at 89½, dropped to 86, and closed at 87¼. Tin Plate common opened at 24½, dropped to 23, and sold to 25; the close was at 25⅛. Tin Plate preferred was comparatively quiet; it opened at 74½, sold to 75, and closed at 74⅞. The traction stocks were well held for some time, but eventually they, too, came under the pressure. Metropolitan Elevated preferred, which opened at 80½ and seemed to be in good demand at about that price, suddenly broke, and then went off rapidly to 76; later it regained somewhat, and closed at 78½ and dropped to 75, closing at 77½. Diamond Match opened at 122½ and declined to 121¼, but closed at 123.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—The stock market held encouragingly well to-day; only the high-priced stocks suffered any material decline. United Gas and Electric Storage Battery quickly and sharply responded to pressure. Asphalt and Marsden also were weak features, but both subsequently improved, recovering their earlier declines. Elsewhere the reaction did not exceed small fractions, and in the late rally most prices were carried back to Saturday's final level. The close, however, was feverish.

Worsted Mills Transferred.

The Manhattan Worsted Mills property, extending through from One Hundred and Twenty-ninth and One Hundred and Thirtieth Streets 100 feet west of Eleventh Avenue and fronting 125 feet on either street, was transferred yesterday to the Pitkin, Holdsworth Worsted Company. The buildings on the lot are two and four stories in height. The property was held under foreclosure early in the Summer to satisfy a claim of $75,000, and at that time was struck down to Oscar Dreisler, by whom title was given yesterday to the Pitkin, Holdsworth Company for a nominal consideration.

COTTON.—From a speculative view p int the w's cotton market was not a success. At no me was trading active, while most of he sessn the pit was nearly deserted. After opening ay at a decline of 25@7 points—this in response an unfavorable turn of affairs in Liverpool, ributed to the British reverses in South Africa he market followed a most uneventful course. e forenoon apathy was accounted for in that onfusion of ideas existed concerning the probble showing of the December Government reort, to come out at midday. But even after that ng-looked-for statement had come to hand there as little or no stimulation to trading. The lo- market for futures closed quiet and steady, th prices 3@6 points lower. BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The wheat market was narrow and slow during the forenoon, speculation growing out of an uncertainty respecting the probable figures of the visible supply statement; these last week were estimated for a increase of perhaps 1,000,000 bushels. But this morning some traders expected to see a small increase instead. There was very little in the general news to enthuse speculative trading, and after opening ¼c lower, the market gradually eased off until a net loss of ⅝c was apparent at noon, when May wheat was selling at 74⅛c against 75¼c, the closing price of Saturday. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board, afloat, basis were as follows: No. 2 red, New York, 74½c, ost; No. 1 hard, Manitoba, 75¾c, to arrive; No. hard, Manitoba, 80¼c, early January; No. 1 ard, Duluth, 80c, prompt nominal; No. 1 hard, uluth, 80¾c, early January; No. 1 hard, New ork, 79c; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 78¼c; No. 1 orthern, New York, 77¾c; No. 2 Northern, uluth, 76½c.

COFFEE.—The opening call on coffee futures showed a steady feeling at a decline of 5@10 points, with sales of 4,250 bags. The easier ruling of the early market resulted from unsatisfactory cables. Havre reported a decline of ½f at the opening, while Hamburg closed at ¼ pfennig decline. Both markets were very quiet. The closing Havre cables failed to make any change from the opening decline and left our market in a position to rally a little on covering. Sales for the day reached 12,250 bags and for the entire session 23,000 bags, with the market finally quiet in tone at net unchanged prices to 5 points decline.

BIG DECLINE IN STOCKS

Panic Conditions Prevail for a Time in the Street.

RECOVERY OF THE MARKET

Liquidation and an Easing Money Rate Restore a Normal Tone—Causes of the Slump.

Not for some time has the stock market been so perilously near to a panic as it was yesterday for the first two hours after the opening. Stocks pressed on the market by the wholesale, and excited groups of brokers, gathered around the trading posts on the Exchange in much larger numbers than usual, were kept busy executing their orders. The whole list fell, and for a time it looked as if the almost general demoralization could not be checked. But about noon the Street took on one of those moods peculiar to itself, and aided by the more or less completed general liquidation and an easing money market, conditions became rather more normal. As a result quotations responded to the better conditions and went higher. The consequence was that the final figures for the day marked none of the positive and, at one time, alarming declines, which had earlier characterized the list.

It is not possible, brokers say, to attribute the early remarkable declines to any specific cause. They were due, it was believed, rather to a combination of depressing circumstances not one of which in itself could be regarded as really serious. Unquestionably, it was said, the pall of the Addyston Pipe case decision and of the President's anti-trust message still hang over the market, or rather that part of it in which the industrials fall, and that had its influence. But more certainly, it was declared, the rise in sterling exchange rates to within a close margin of the gold exporting point, the temporary advance in call money rates to 15 per cent., and the news of the British reverse at Stormberg, signifying how vain was London's hope that the war would end early and thereby relieve the drain of gold upon her as well as liberating the Transvaal supply of yellow metal, were the chief contributing factors to the decline. There should be added to this—once the decline had begun—the reaching of a large number of stop orders and the impairment of many margins.

All told, the trading for the day totaled more than 1,100,000 shares, and of this great number 670,000 were listed securities. It is regarded as significant, too, that in the dealing it is understood that something like 650,000 shares were covered, one well-known bear alone taking in over 250,000 shares at profits which are said to be represented in the millions. The result is that the short side in the market is more or less eliminated for the time being.

The industrial stocks were chief in the tobogganing act. American Sugar, the stories of dissension in the trust continuing, at one time went as low as 132—the lowest figure for the year—though it was ex dividend of 3 per cent., and closed at 138, nominally a gain of 1½ points; actually, a loss of 1½. American Tobacco opened down 4 points and fell 2½ further. It finally rallied to 102, a net loss of 2 points. Brooklyn Rapid Transit fell as low as 76½, but shared in the general rally, closing at 80, a net loss, however, for the day of 1¾ points. Manhattan fell to 99, but later rose to 101⅝, a net decline of only ¼ point. Metropolitan at one time touched 174, but took a surprising rally in the afternoon, and closed with a loss of only about 3 points.

In the steel stocks the course of Tennessee Coal and Iron was regarded as the feature of the market. Several times the stock broke 2 and 3 full points between sales, and rapidly declined, until it reached 83, a loss of full 21 points from the closing quotation on Saturday. The high figure for the day was 100½, with the close at 91, a net loss of 13 points. Insiders, it was noticed, bought the stock confidently all the way down.

Colorado Fuel and Iron broke 7 points, to 42, closing at 45⅞, a net loss of 3¼ points. Federal Steel broke even. Republic Steel common lost ¼ point, and preferred ⅜; American Steel and Wire common lost ⅛ and preferred 1½; while American Steel Hoop fell 1 per cent. in the common stock, but gained 1½ on the preferred.

In the railway stocks, St. Paul preferred fell off 3 points for the day, Pennsylvania 1¼, Lackawanna 2½, and Reading ½.

Had it not been for the rally in the afternoon, however, these net declines would have been much greater.

One of the features of the day was the gain made by United States Leather common, the closing quotation being 14⅜, an appreciation of 2⅝ points.

The rumors concerning the gas war naturally affected Consolidated Gas stock, which at one time fell as low as 183, and closed at 187½—a net loss of 2 points.

With the easing up in call money rates in the afternoon and the general shaking out of weak holders, the market closed strong, on improved buying for long account.

One result of the enormous liquidation is that something like $30,000,000 was paid off in loans—a fact that was regarded as contributing to the much lower call money rate that prevailed in the late afternoon, 4 per cent. figure at one time being recorded.

SLUMP CAUSES TWO FAILURES.

Consolidated Exchange Brokers in Financial Difficulty.

The slump in the stock market on Saturday and yesterday embarrassed two brokerage concerns with membership on the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange. This plight was announced from the rostrum of the Exchange, and they have until to-day to retrieve the situation. Both have offices at 52 Broadway.

William Bouldin, Jr., who became a member of the Exchange last August, assigned to Carl V. Abrecht. Under the rule 170 shares of Atchison preferred and 220 shares of Sugar were sold for his acount. Mr. Bouldin in March, 1899, formed the firm of Bouldin & Van Tassel, which dissolved in June, after which Mr. Bouldin continued business alone. A few months ago he claimed to be worth $50,000, invested in various enterprises. He was formerly a newspaper editor at Frederick, Md., came to this city in 1888, and has since been interested in an asphalt paving company, a pipe line refrigerating company, a dairy feed company, and a gas and chemical company. He was a partner in the stock brokerage firm of Gould, Bruns & Bouldin from May, 1891, to May, 1893.

Thomas F. Plunkett, who traded as T. F. Plunkett & Co., became a member of the Exchange last July. About 250 miscellaneous shares were sold on his account under the rule. His friends said last night that his embarrassment was due to failure of his clients to respond to calls for more margin to their accounts, but that he expected to resume business.

A MAINE SURVIVOR BURIED.

Funeral of Commander C. P. Howell of the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Funeral services for Commander C. P. Howell of the steam engineering department of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who died of apoplexy on Thursday evening, took place yesterday morning at his late residence, 126 East Thirty-fourth Street. Full military honors were accorded the dead. Commander Howell was Chief Engineer of the Maine when that vessel was blown up in Havana Harbor.

The navy yard tug Nina brought many of his friends and a naval escort to the foot of East Twenty-eighth Street. The funeral services were conducted by Chaplain McKelway of the receiving ship Vermont according to the ritual of the Episcopal Church. As the coffin was borne to the hearse by six tars the marine band played a dirge and the escort saluted. The marines formed ahead of the hearse and the bluejackets fell in behind it. The route of the march was across to the Twenty-third Street Ferry. From Jersey City a train conveyed the body to Goshen, N. Y., where the interment took place.

Brooklyn Policeman Tries Suicide.

Andrew J. Hickey of the Brooklyn Police Bicycle Squad shot himself in the breast with a revolver and then jumped out of a third-story window about 7 o'clock yesterday morning at 200 Ninth Avenue, Manhattan, where he resides with his aunt. One of his legs was broken. He was removed to the New York Hospital. There, it was said he was in a critical condition as the result of the pistol-shot wound. The policeman has been suffering from insomnia for some time.

EMPLOYE AND JEWELS GONE.

H. S. Kramer Accuses His ex-Bookkeeper, M. Goldstein—Mr. Levy Defends Him.

Detectives here and in other cities are looking for Meyer Goldstein, formerly a bookkeeper employed by Henry S. Kramer, a jeweler at 82 Nassau Street. Mr. Goldstein disappeared on Nov. 9. Mr. Kramer alleges that he took with him an amount of money and jewelry which represent a value of some $20,000, and he has a warrant out for him charging him with forgery, alleging that it was by forging his, Kramer's, name that Goldstein obtained much of the property he took away. Meanwhile Kramer himself is defendant in a lawsuit which has grown out of the case, and Goldstein's lawyer, Abraham Levy, charges Kramer with having concocted a scheme to evade some of his debts.

Mr. Kramer's troubles were complicated yesterday by visits from creditors, whom he declares he doesn't know, wanting payment for various alleged claims.

Mr. Kramer says that Goldstein was an employe and had no interest in the business. According to his story, when he bought the business, three years ago, Goldstein came into his service as a legacy from his predecessor in business, and he trusted him thoroughly most of the time since then.

"I began to suspect Goldstein," said Mr. Kramer yesterday, "some time ago when I became dissatisfied with the way he kept my petty cash account, a way by which I was losing $2 or $3 a week. He was all the while stealing checks from me. He would now and then pocket a check that I had overlooked, and he doctored my books to make it look all right. Then he would forge my name to orders for jewelry from other houses and would forge my name to checks for payment for them, and then pawn the goods he obtained.

"I took a trip South this Fall, and when I got back I found he had ordered jewelry for me indiscriminately, his idea being to swamp me and bankrupt me, so that in the bankruptcy proceedings, as he would be the one to file my schedule of assets and liabilities, his peculations would be hidden. He skipped off on Nov. 9 while I was at the bank after my bank book, determined to find out the bottom of his proceedings. When I got my bank book I found there one or two forged checks against me with which he had paid for property. He got a great deal more jewelry than he paid for, representing himself to be Henry S. Kramer. In all he got away with some $20,000 worth of jewelry and money, less than half of which was stolen directly from me. I haven't yet found how much he did rob me of."

Goldstein is not at his home, but Abraham Levy, his lawyer, said yesterday that he would be produced and would stand trial. "He is at present very sick," said Mr. Levy, "and I am advising him not to give himself up just yet, because he is too sick to go to jail. The bail might be excessive—more than he can furnish. I can give my word, however, that he will be produced.

"Goldstein never stole so much as a button directly. He never deceived Kramer. He robbed Peter to pay Paul; obtained certain goods in the name of Kramer and used the proceeds of pawning them to pay Kramer's old debts. He was in fact a partner of Kramer. The value of the goods he obtained and did not pay for will not reach $5,000 all told. This is an effort of Kramer's, I believe, to repudiate certain indebtedness." Mr. Kramer denied these charges.

TO AMEND THE TAX LAWS.

Joint Committee of the Legislature in Session Here.

The joint committee appointed at the last session of the Legislature to investigate the workings of the tax laws and suggest amendments held a meeting yesterday at the Murray Hill Hotel. Senator Nevada N. Stranahan of Oswego presided. Charles Adsit of Hornellsville, representing the State Bankers' Association, appeared before the committee and gave his views regarding the taxing of banking interests. Senator Stranahan, at the close of the investigation, said:

"We are down here to get information, and we will probably be here for several days. It is not our purpose to give public hearings, but to collect our evidence by personal investigation. We have not gone to work on our report yet, and will not do so for a few weeks. We will make our report to the Legislature about Jan. 15. This report will be accompanied by a bill or bills. It would be useless to attempt to outline probable taxation legislation, as we have no idea of what we shall recommend to the Legislature. The present investigation will determine the nature of the bills we shall introduce next month."

MAN AND WIFE JOINT PASTORS.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Wright Give Up Their Brooklyn Charge.

The Prospect Heights Universalist Church of Brooklyn is soon to lose its distinction of being the only church in the city with a joint pastorate filled by a man and his wife. The Revs. A. E. and Alice K. Wright, the joint pastors of the church, have resigned, and expect to leave Brooklyn in the near future. Their resignations, however, have not yet been accepted, the members of the church being loth to part with them. Mr. and Mrs. Wright feel that their present charge offers attractive opportunities for a single pastor, but that the field is scarcely large enough for two pastors. They do not know as yet just where they will go when they leave Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright were students together in the theological seminary attached to St. Lawrence University. They were married immediately after their graduation. Their first charge was the Morrisville (Vt.) Universalist Church, whence they came to Brooklyn seven years ago to take pastoral charge of the North Henry Street Universalist Society. Two years ago they took charge of the Prospect Heights Church. They have been very successful in their work there.

Poison Victim's Wife Discharged.

Coroner Fitzpatrick yesterday afternoon discharged Mrs. Emily Koch from custody, pending the inquest to be held next week regarding the death of her husband, George Koch. Mrs. Koch was accused by her husband of having given him poison from which he died Saturday evening in the Presbyterian Hospital, but the police did not believe the charge.

Take a shot.

It ought to be called a "snap" shot, for there're several hundred suit remnants on the firing line.

That means coats and vests, $7.50; suits, $10—most of which were $25, $23, $22 and $20. Fancy mixtures, dark and light, goods both rough and smooth—all sizes in something.

Tile Layer's Damage Suit Against an Association of Dealers.

The case of Peter J. Kiernan, the employing tile layer who is suing the Tile, Grate and Mantel Association of New York for $25,000 damages for having, as he alleges, ruined his business by prohibiting its members from selling him tiles, came up yesterday morning before Justice Andrews, in Part IV. of the Supreme Court.

Alfred Steckler, counsel for the plaintiff, explained to the jury his version of the case, and claimed that the combination of the members of the association to prevent the sale of tiles to outsiders was illegal. Austin E. Pressinger, for the defense, contended that combinations not to sell to certain people were in certain cases legal. Tiles, continued Mr. Pressinger, were a luxury, and not a necessity, and therefore refusal to sell them to certain persons was not a restraint of trade. He moved that the complaint be dismissed on that ground. His motion was denied, and Mr. Steckler then placed in evidence the constitution and by-laws of the association, which provide for the expulsion of all members who sell tiles to outsiders.

Kiernan, the plaintiff, took the stand, and said that in May, 1895, after having worked as a journeyman marble cutter and journeyman tile layer for seventeen years, he went into the tile-laying business on his own account. In the following twelve months he did $2,500 worth of work, and the next year his business increased to $6,000. The prospects for a steady increase of business were very good, when in July, 1897, a sudden check was put on his successful career by the refusal of the members of the association to sell him any more tiles. He said that his business fell off so much after the imposition of the boycott that between July, 1897, and January, 1898, he did only $400 worth of work, and lost money on those jobs.

W. Benton Crisp of counsel for the defense, in cross-examining Kiernan, sought to show that he had been delinquent in the payment of his debts, and had been unreliable and incompetent as a workman. Mr. Stickler objected to this line of questioning as irrelevant, and Mr. Crisp said he wanted to show that the plaintiff had been discharged for intoxication and incompetency as a workman, and as a business man was unworthy of credit. Kiernan denied that he had been discharged for such reasons.

The case was adjourned until this morning.

LEGAL NOTES.

MORTGATOR PAYING THE MORTGAGE TO HIMSELF.—Garrett S. Wright, who was one of the two trustees of his father's estate, made a mortgage to his co-trustee for the amount of his indebtedness to the estate. The co-trustee having died, Wright, saying he now desired to pay off the mortgage, moved in Supreme Court, Special Term, to compel the Register to accept a satisfaction piece executed by himself as trustee. Justice Gildersleeve yesterday denied the application, saying that as none of the heirs had notice of the motion, and it was not pretended that the mortgage had as yet actually been paid, and as the satisfaction piece was to be executed by the mortgagor himself, the Register should first have some definite proof of payment.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.—Frederick W. Van Bergh and others, having in 1896 outgrown their old quarters in Rochester, N. Y., for the manufacture of plated silverware, contracted with Sidney R. Roby for the construction of a new manufacturing building, which he was to let to them for five years. There was a provision in the contract that for each day's delay beyond July 1, 1896, the day fixed for its completion, the contractors should pay $50, as fixed, settled, and liquidated damages. In a suit brought by Wendell J. Curtis, as Roby's assignee for creditors, to recover rent, the defendants pleaded a counter claim for damages because Mr. Roby did not complete the building until Aug. 3. Judgment for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the Fourth Appellate Division, has now been reversed by the Court of Appeals, which held, in an opinion by Judge Vann, that the provision of the contract for the payment of $50 a day as damages was to be construed according to the intention of the parties, to be gathered from the language used, and read in the light of the circumstances surrounding them at the time it was executed. When it appeared that the damages which would result from a failure to complete the building on the day fixed were uncertain and difficult of ascertainment at the time the contract was executed, and that the amount named as liquidated damages was not so great, under all the circumstances known to the parties at the time, that the court should say, as matter of law, that it was out of all proportion to the probable loss, its payment might be enforced.

POLICEMEN'S GRADE FROM LENGTH OF SERVICE.—John Lang, Jr., who resigned from the police force in December, 1893, after having served as policeman for more than seven years, was reappointed on Dec. 29, 1897, before the Greater New York charter went into effect. He was assigned to duty in one of the grades existing at the time. By the provisions of the act members of the force who were patrolmen appointed after the 1st of January, 1895, became members of the fifth grade. Lang was placed in that grade, with a salary of $1,000. Claiming the benefit of the provision of the Greater New York charter that members of the force who had served five years should be of the first grade, Lang last May demanded to be placed in that grade. The First Appellate Division has reversed an order which granted Lang's application for a writ of peremptory mandamus placing him in the first grade. Presiding Justice Van Brunt, who gave the opinion, said it was apparent that continuity of service was intended, because such continuity would necessarily give efficiency, and it was to reward such efficiency that the determination of grade by length of service was provided for. It would be a forced interpretation of the language of the act, under the conditions under which the legislation took place, the Presiding Justice said, to hold that a man who had been a member of the police force ten years before, and who had lost all the skill which he had acquired by reason of his previous service, should be entitled to step into the first grade, which grade was given because of the supposed experience which had been obtained by service on the force, and not lost by years of absence from police work. Justice O'Brien gave a dissenting opinion.

VALUES OF DOWN-TOWN REALTY.—Justice Ingraham, in giving the opinion of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, affirming, with some modifications, the judgment secured by William P. Douglas on the trial of his suit against the Manhattan Railway Company for damages to his property, 125, 173, and 179 Pearl Street, makes some interesting observations in reference to the general course of values of property during the last twenty years in the region below Fulton Street and east of Broadway. The judgment awarded to Mr. Douglas was $38,000 for fee damages and $33,000 for past trespass. The testimony on the trial showed that there had been a gradual and general decrease of rentals of Mr. Douglas's property since 1878; that there is not a street west of Pearl Street in this locality where values and rentals have not been very largely increased since the construction of the elevated railroad, and a very substantial increase, though not as large, in the property east of Pearl Street and south of Fulton Street. The effect of the operation of the railroad upon abutting property devoted to business purposes, especially for offices for lawyers, bankers, commission merchants, and kindred occupations, through interference with light, pollution of the air by steam, gas, smoke, and cinders from the locomotives, coupled with the operation of the road, Justice Ingraham says, must be serious. "Any use of a street," the Court adds, "which renders it impracticable to keep the windows open in Summer without great discomfort, which causes the light to be constantly interrupted, and causes the air to be so polluted that at times it is quite offensive, would seriously affect an office building, and must be detrimental." Property in Broadway, the evidence showed, had trebled in value, and had doubled in Nassau and William Streets, since 1878; and so in the cross streets between William Street and Broadway, and from Maiden Lane, going south, property in these streets being worth more than double, and in some cases three or four times as much, while property on Pearl Street had decreased in value.

Fouled Steamer and Plague Ship.

Two vessels anchored at Quarantine were run into yesterday morning. The first collision occurred shortly after 11 o'clock, when a mud scow in tow of the tug Municipal ran into the Ward Line steamship Yucatan, just in from Cuba and Mexico. The scow struck the Ward liner square in the cut-water, making a big dent and twisting the steel stem slightly to one side. The scow's damage was trifling. The second collision occurred at 8 o'clock, when the schooner Samuel C. Hart, bound from Stonington for Perth Amboy, fouled the J. W. Taylor, the detained plague ship. Neither vessel was damaged.

FOR BETTER CITY TENEMENTS.

Charity Organization Society's Committee Offers Prizes for Plans.

The Tenement House Committee of the Charity Organization Society has offered four prizes to architects for plans for improved city tenements.

The competition will be divided into three classes: First, for houses on lots 50 by 100; second, on lots 75 by 100; third, on lots 100 by 100. To the author of the best plan, irrespective of class, will be given its execution, or in lieu thereof $200. The second and third prizes will be $200 and $100 respectively. There will be also a special prize of $100 for the author of the best plan for a house on a lot 25 by 100. The plans submitted are to be exhibited in connection with the tenement house exhibitions to be held this Winter in New York and other cities. The jury of award will be composed of W. Bayard Cutting, John D. Crimmins, E. R. L. Gould, Mrs. Roland C. Lincoln, Miss Lillian D. Wald, W. R. Mead, and I. N. Phelps Stokes. The plans must provide a clear rentable space on each floor, exclusive of walls, partitions, corridors and staircases, equal to about 55 per cent. of the area of the lot, and should avoid the objectionable features of the common "double-decker" tenement.

Not more than 70 per cent. of the area of the lot must be covered by the building. Particulars as to requirements for ventilation, light, fire escapes, and floor area of living rooms are given in detail.

Architects are also invited to submit plans for model lodging houses or hotels for men and women, and for tenement houses not within the requirements above given. These plans are for exhibition only, and will form no part of the competition. Complete information respecting the competition will be furnished upon application to Lawrence Veiller, Secretary of the Tenement House Committee.

CONGRESS.—Representative Driggs of Brooklyn spoke yesterday in the House in favor of the Currency bill. He was the first Democrat to urge its passage. Bills were introduced in Congress yesterday to appropriate $2,671,387 for a new Post Office building and additional substations in New York City. The resolution introduced by Senator Pettigrew Monday to investigate the Idaho labor troubles was referred to the Military Committee. Senator Cullom introduced a bill to amend the Inter-State Commerce act. The Committee on Privileges and Elections was given authority to investigate the elections of Senator Clark of Montana and Senator Scott of West Virginia.—Page 3.

FOREIGN.—In a sortie made from Ladysmith Sunday morning a Boer howitzer was captured and destroyed, but the British lost one officer and eleven men killed, three officers and forty-one men wounded, and six captured. It is reported at Cape Town that heavy fighting has taken place near the Modder River. Gen. Gatacre, in his report, attributes his defeat to the fact that his forces were misled by a Cape Colony policeman. Snowstorms are impeding traffic in England. The temperature yesterday was 15 degrees below zero in Berlin. The debate on the German Navy bill is exciting great interest. Yesterday Dr. Lieber, Centrist leader, criticised the Kaiser in making his Hamburg speech. Italy's Minister of Foreign Affairs said yesterday that his country was not seeking territorial expansion in China.—Pages 2 and 7.

DEATH FOR LUZON BANDITS

Guerrillas Caught by Col. Smith Will Be Shot or Hanged.

CRIMINALS INFEST THE ISLAND

Some American Officers Say the Campaign Is Worse Than Fighting Indians.

MANILA, Dec. 12.—Col. Smith, with a detachment of the Seventeenth Infantry, surrounded and captured in a village near Malasqui a party of guerrillas, who had made their headquarters there. The party included the band which assassinated seven officials at Malasqui for friendliness to the Americans.

All are insurgents who became bandits when the disintegration of the Filipino army began. They kept the country around Malasqui in a state of terror for several weeks, and committed twenty-five murders in less than that number of days. When they were caught they were promptly sent to Gen. MacArthur's headquarters, at Bayambang, by train.

It is expected that they will be speedily tried and either shot or hanged as an example, if convicted.

The whole country north of San Fernando and between San Fernando and Manila, except within the permanent line of troops around the city and the closely patrolled stretches of railroad, swarms with similar bands. Probably they will be increased by men from Pilar's army, many of whom are making their way south to join the insurgent force in Cavite Province.

These people for the most part succeed in dodging Gen. Grant's, Col. Bell's, and Col. Hood's troops, who are scouring the country for them. They devote their energies to ambushing commissary wagons and to picking up soldiers who leave their commands. Every day some wagon train is fired upon or some soldier disappears.

Gen. Wheeler's secretary, Mr. Garrett, was disarmed and slashed by a boloman almost within sight of headquarters, his assailant pursuing him almost into the headquarters building.

The policy of these ruffians is to make the country uninhabitable for Americans and to frighten natives into refraining from giving any assistance to the Americans, as well as to compel the inhabitants to support the insurrection.

Frequently they raid and loot towns. The brother of the President of Imus went outside the town the other day to harvest some rice. He was captured by his compatriots, accused of being a spy, and executed.

Only a small portion of the insurgent arms have been surrendered, and the problem of suppressing this guerrilla warfare is anything but easy of solution. Some of the American officers think it worse than fighting Indians, owing to the difficulties of the country and the trouble of locating the enemy, who resort, when hard pressed, to the amigo dodge and hide their guns.

Some of the Americans favor the issuance of a proclamation declaring all natives found with arms to be bandits, punishable as criminals, instead of being treated as prisoners of war.

THE SITUATION IN LUZON.

Gen. Otis Says the Insurgents Have Been Scattered — Their Loss 100 in the Last Few Days.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The War Department has received the following cablegram from Gen. Otis, descriptive of the military situation in Luzon:

"Manila, Dec. 12.

"In Bulucan Province the insurgents have been scattered and driven east to the mountains. Our casualties in that section in the last few days were ten. The insurgent casualties in killed, wounded, and prisoners aggregate 100. Considerable insurgent property, with records, arms, and ammunition have been captured. Our troops are now in the mountains in pursuit.

"The insurgents have been driven from Subig Bay and the marines now occupy a naval station there.

"Our column moving west from Tarlac is now on the west coast of Luzon, where it has been supplied. It encountered little resistance. A column is now moving west and south from Dagupan along the coast. There is no concentrated insurgent force of importance in Luzon north of Manila. Southern Luzon will not offer any serious resistance. Troops are in co-operation in that section. Organized rebellion no longer exists, and our troops are actively pursuing robber bands. All important and threatened centres of population in the far north have been occupied."

THE SURRENDER AT SUBIG BAY.

Senator Pettigrew Inquires Into Statements of Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—In the Senate today Mr. Pettigrew (S. D.) offered the following resolution:

"That the Secretary of the Navy be and he is hereby directed to inform the Senate whether the flag of the Philippine Republic was carried by vessels in the Bay of Manila, and whether the flag of the Philippine Republic was ever saluted by Admiral Dewey or any of the vessels of his fleet at any time since May 1, 1898; were Spanish prisoners delivered over to the Philippine forces at the time of the surrender at Subig Bay? Did a vessel commanded by the forces under Aguinaldo, flying the Philippine flag, accompany the vessels Concord and Raleigh back to Subig Bay in June, 1898, in order to compel the surrender of the Spanish forces?"

Mr. Pettigrew asked for immediate consideration of the resolution, but Mr. Chandler objected, and it went over until to-morrow.

A dispatch was sent from Manila Dec. 10, in which it was stated that Spanish prisoners recently released complained that they had been deceived by Capt. Coghlan, to whom they surrendered, in July, 1898, upon the express stipulation that they should not be turned over to the Filipinos. These Spaniards stated as facts the matters about which Senator Petigrew seeks information.

PHILIPPINE HEMP PORTS TO OPEN.

Gen. Otis Says Aguinaldo Stopped the Exports by a Decree.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—In answer to the inquiry from the War Department regarding the opening of the hemp ports in the Philippines, Gen. Otis to-day made the following response:

"Manila, Dec. 12.

"Hemp ports will be open as soon as transportation for troops can be secured. Probably active trade early in January. See annual report, Page 262."

A reference to the place indicated in his report shows the following statement:

"Of the three staple articles of the islands, hemp, tobacco, and sugar, only the latter shows a very marked depreciation in amount secured and exported. About the same quantity of hemp was taken from the shipping ports during the past year as in the preceding year, and large exports of tobacco have been made. There still remain in the islands considerable quantities of both hemp and tobacco, but a short time ago Aguinaldo issued a so-called decree most injurious to his interests, forbidding his Tagalo Guards to permit at the ports where they were stationed the entrance of any merchant vessel flying the American flag, and as the interisland commerce is carried on under that flag, his decree terminated trade at the points where troops are not maintained."

More Spanish Prisoners Released.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The War Department has received the following dispatch from Gen. Otis, dated Manila, Dec. 12:

"Two thousand additional Spanish prisoners, secured in Northern Luzon, making over 3,000 released within a month; 700 now en route from Vigan and transports will be sent for remainder."

Filipino "News" from Hongkong.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Reuter's Telegram Company has received the following dispatch from Hongkong: "The insurgent Government (so called) of the Philippines will be changed to a dictatorship, to continue hostilities against the Americans exclusively by the methods of guerrilla warfare. The Filipino Army is being split up into small bands, the troops taking an oath before separation that they will fight until their country's rights are recognized. A force of United States marines who landed at Vigan, South Ilocos province, from the battleship Oregon, was defeated by the Filipinos under Gen. Finio, (Tino?) on Dec. 4.

"The Manila newspapers, despite the censorship, admit that Gen. Lawton is missing."

$100,000,000 SUGAR COMPANY.

Will Be Incorporated in Delaware to Include Companies Outside of the Trust.

DOVER, Del., Dec. 12.—When the Anglo-American Rapid Vehicle Company was incorporated here with a capital stock of $75,000,000, it was thought to be the largest industrial concern that would ever come under the general law of Delaware, but tonight preparations were begun for the incorporation here of a $100,000,000 concern. The new combine is to be known as the Colonial Sugar Refining Company.

Large sugar-making companies now outside the American Sugar Refining Company, which operates under the New Jersey laws, are concerned in this new Delaware corporation. Its specific object is to extend the sugar industry in the islands of Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and Cuba. The State will profit by the incorporation of this company to the extent of $15,000 in State tax and $5,000 in annual tax.

MAYOR JONES'S SETBACK.

City Council of Toledo Deals a Blow at His Cherished Ideas.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 12.—The City Council of Toledo has completely overthrown the municipal ownership ideas of Mayor Jones so far as Toledo is concerned. Mayor Jones walked out of the committee meeting today saying, "Well, I guess I am no longer wanted."

The City Council has ordered the sale of the Toledo National Gas plant to J. N. Bick for $228,000, although Mayor Jones presented a proposition from a firm offering to furnish the city with gas at a low rate, and at the end of ten years to turn over the plant to the city free of charge.

MODERN MIRACLES AT NORWALK

Baptist Divine Credited with Cures by Laying On of Hands.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 12.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage Van Doren of the First Baptist Church in this city has elicited considerable local interest by his reputed cures of the sick by what may be termed "the laying on of hands." The Rev. Mr. Van Doren, who is a nephew of the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, came to Norwalk several months ago from Albany, N. Y., and since then his followers claim that he has accomplished many astonishing cures.

Many persons are skeptical of the alleged cures, while on the other hand the patients are decided in their belief of the pastor's power to cure.

WOULD NOT CUT DOWN TREES.

W. L. Decker Sacrificed a $23,000 House Rather than Do So.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 12.—William L. Decker has sacrificed a house which cost $23,000 to build a few years ago in preference to having some maple and elm trees which surrounded it cut down. Mr. Decker is owner of the Decker Building at Union Square, New York.

He recently purchased the Bouchelle place here, and desired to erect a costly mansion. He was offered a good price for the building, but the removal would necessitate cutting down the trees. This he would not listen to, and the building has now been leveled to the ground.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS OBJECT

Charge that They Have Been Forced to Cut Turnip Tops.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The story comes from Richmond that the inmates of the Home for Confederate Veterans at that place have asked for an investigation of the management of the home because the veterans have been put at work cutting the tops of turnips, the men regarding this service as an imposition upon them. A similar complaint was made some years ago by the inmates of the Soldiers' Home here, the veterans asserting that they were obliged to perform tasks unbecoming to them.

Upon inquiry, it was found that, owing to a lack of assistance, the veterans had been asked to pick strawberries and other fruits for the table of the home, and objected to performing that labor unless they were paid for it. The result was the employment of additional laborers to pick the fruit for the consumption of the veterans.

BUCKET SHOPPERS ON TRIAL.

Forty-three Arraigned in Chicago—Some Pleaded Guilty.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The names of forty-three defendants in bucket-shop cases were called off by the Clerk in Judge Waterman's courtroom this morning. Many of the defendants failed to put in an appearance and their bonds were declared forfeited. Others appeared personally and entered pleas of guilty, while a few were ready to stand trial.

Frank Hoop, indicted with Arnold Lancaster, was not in the courtroom, and Attorney Hayward said he has left town. J. Edward King and Frank F. Eagan declared they were not guilty. John Valley entered a plea of not guilty, and his case was set for trial. A jury was quickly empaneled and the evidence heard. "This is Valley's second offense, and I shall ask for a jail sentence," declared Assistant State Attorney Barnes.

Frank J. Smith was another defendant whose bond was declared forfeited. He was not in court, and no one was there to represent him. George A. Fisher was also among the absent and missing. Mr. Barnes said that he had left town shortly after being indicted and has since evaded arrest. In the majority of instances only the minimum penalty—a fine of $500—will be asked for in case of conviction, as it is the defendants' first appearance.

ROOT TO RUN WITH McKINLEY.

Republican Leaders, It Is Claimed, Have Agreed Upon the New Yorker for Vice President.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 12.—A Washington dispatch to The Leader says:

"Many conferences are being held in the apartments at the Arlington Hotel of Senator Hanna and Henry C. Payne, respectively the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the National Committee; Senator Platt of New York, Senator Spooner of Wisconsin, Senator Scott of West Virgina, Senator Platt of Connecticut, who live there, while other well-known members of the Senate nightly throng the lobby.

Two of the questions that are receiving the attention of these men are, first who shall be McKinley's running mate next year? Second, shall the ticket be nominated by acclamation?

It may be stated almost without qualification that the Republican National ticket next year will be McKinley and Root. That the President will be renominated there has been no doubt for a long time. As to the nominee for Vice President the sentiment in favor of Elihu Root, the Secretary of War, which became apparent several months ago, has assumed proportions which, in the opinion of men who are masters in the art of politics, practicaly insures his being given second place on the ticket. Careful, conservative men such as Mr. Payne is known to be do not hesitate at this time to predict Mr. Root's nomination.

"If I were prophesying on the ticket I would say it will be McKinley and Root," said Mr. Payne this evening. "Although I am a Western man, I can see reasons which admit of no argument for the Vice Presidential nomination going to an Eastern man. It seems to be conceded generally that New York ought to produce him. Mr. Root would give the strength, firmness, and prestige to the ticket which another man would not do, and which are needed. He has made a splendid record for himself as the head of the War Department and is in every way fitted for place which Mr. Hobart graced."

That Mr. Root is willing to go on the ticket with Mr. McKinley there is not the slightest doubt. It may be said even that the Secretary is ambitious to procure the Vice Presidential nomination; in fact, it is known that he has aspirations of that character. He is perhaps better equipped for the place than almost any other New York man who has been mentioned in this connection. It is believed that he would be acceptable to Senator Platt, who, by the way, was largely instrumental in having him appointed Secretary Alger's successor in the Cabinet.

When Mr. Plat was asked to-night whom he favored for the Vice Presidential nomination he said: "Any good New York man would suit me."

"How about Mr. Root?"

"Mr. Root would be satisfactory," was Mr. Platt's reply. "McKinley will be nominated by acclamation."

As to the matter of nominating the entire ticket by acclamation, there is reason to believe that the next Republican National Convention will establish such a precedent. Senator Hanna has conceived the idea, and it is remarkable how favorably it is being received. The Senator has confided his proposition to a few friends, and they are enthusiastic over it. Mr. Hanna believes that inasmuch as McKinley will be renominated in that manner, his running mate should be accorded the same distinction.

"It seems to me," he said to-night, "that a contest in the convention for the Vice Presidency should be avoided for the reason chiefly that President McKinley will be named for first place without opposition. The nomination for second place under the circumstances should be made, in my opinion, with the same absence of friction and contest. If we could go before the country with a ticket chosen in such a way the effect upon the party throughout the United States and upon the people of all parties would be most marked. The action of the convention would be received with éclat, and the Republicans would start in at the very beginning perfectly harmonious and with a solid impregnable front. It would be a sure augury of the victory that will follow in November."

Vice Chairman Payne agrees heartily with Mr. Hanna's plan. The more he considers it the more pleased he becomes with it. He said to-night that he would be happy to see the convention adopt it, and that he believed it would do so.

In all probability the Republican Convention will be held the second week of June. Mr. Payne said this evening that it would assemble very likely on the 12th of that month, which will be on Tuesday.

BRYAN MAY BE A SENATOR.

Belief Expressed by Some that Gov. Poynter of Nebraska Will Appoint Him.

OMAHA, Dec. 12.—The Senatorial situation is daily becoming more complicated, and there are those who claim that the appointment of either Allen or Hitchcock will disrupt the party and that the Governor will be compelled either to appoint a dark horse or accede to the request of Orlando Tafft, Chairman of the State Republican Committee, and call a special session of the Legislature to settle the matter.

Gov. Poynter returned to Lincoln to-day, accompanied by a delegation of Hitchcock men. On his arrival at the State House he was besieged by a horde of friends of both Hitchcock and Allen. The Governor intimated during the day that he may announce the name of Hayward's successor to-morrow.

Some believe now that Bryan will be appointed, basing their belief upon the fact that the morning Hayward died the Governor was closeted for several hours with Charles W. Bryan, brother of William J. Bryan.

REPUBLICANS CARRY BOSTON.

Gen. Collins Defeated by 1,904 Majority, but the Democrats Hold the Board of Aldermen.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—After a spirited campaign, the Republicans won a victory in the Municipal election to-day, Thomas N. Hart defeating Gen. Patrick A. Collins, the Democratic nominee for Mayor, by 1,904 votes, the total vote being: Hart, (Rep.,) 40,665; Collins, (Dem.,) 38,761.

The Board of Aldermen will stand 8 Democrats and 5 Republicans.

The city, as usual, voted for license, but the all-absorbing question of relaying the street car tracks on Tremont Street, which had been taken up when the subway was completed, was negatived.

The Republican victory was in great measure due to the "knifing" of Gen. Collins by the supporters of John R. Murphy, who were severely disappointed at their favorite's defeat in the caucuses. A remarkably heavy Republican vote also materially assisted in overcoming the Democratic plurality of 4,000 in the last city election for Mayor in 1897, and the 6,000 at the State election in November.

OTHER BAY STATE ELECTIONS.

Republicans Sweep Several Democratic Strongholds.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—The elections in Massachusetts cities were practically concluded to-day, North Adams being the exception, when seventeen of them were held. Unlike the conditions a week ago, the Republicans were generally successful, although non-partisanship was a winning banner in several cities. Only in Newburyport did the Social Democrats make any kind of a contest, while in Boston, Lynn, and Woburn, ordinarily strong Democratic strongholds, the Republicans scored signal victories.

The day was also a good one for license, two cities, Lowell and Salem, changing from no license, and in many instances the license majorities in cities favoring the sale of liquor were increased.

TEACHERS WIN THE FIGHT

Manhattan, Bronx, and Brooklyn Salary Increases Upheld.

DECISION BY JUSTICE GAYNOR

City Officials, Pleased at the Result, Will Take No Appeal—About $700,000 Involved.

The teachers in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx and Brooklyn have won their fight for salary increases. Justice Gaynor handed down a decision in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday granting the writ of peremptory mandamus sought by Ira L. Bamberger and Edward M. Shepard, attorneys for Principal James McCabe of Public School No. 23, in Brooklyn, and Principal Greene of Public School No. 9, directing the auditor of the Board of Education, Henry R. M. Cook, and the city authorities to pay to the Brooklyn school teachers their October salaries, according to the new schedule, known as the Harrigan schedule.

As the Mayor and the Controller are both glad of the result, Assistant Corporation Counsel William J. Carr, who has represented the city in the matter, has decided not to take an appeal.

The point on which the fight turned, the construction of Section 2 of the Ahearn Act, is the point also involved in the fights in this borough, and that of the Bronx, and Justice Gaynor's decision has, therefore, settled these contests in favor of the teachers.

The teachers, who received their September and October salaries on the basis of the lower schedule antedating the Harrigan schedule, will get the increases resulting from this mandamus for September and October, and the November salary at the increased rate, all before Christmas. The sum the teachers gain by the decision is about $700,000.

Section 2 of the Ahearn bill, the measure which fixed the minimum salary scale in all boroughs of $600 yearly for all teachers, $900 yearly for all teachers of ten years' experience, and $1,200 yearly for all teachers of fifteen years' experience, provided:

"The Board of Estimate and Apportionment is hereby authorized and required to direct the issue of revenue bonds for the purpose of providing funds to carry into effect the provisions of this act." The city, through Mr. Carr, and in accordance with a previously promulgated opinion of the Corporation Counsel, held that this section only meant that if the borough boards had not enough money to pay the teachers on the basis of the schedule existing at the time the Ahearn law went into effect and carry out the provisions of that law also, the Board of Estimate was compelled to make up the deficit by an issue of revenue bonds.

The opinion of the Court, which was rendered really on the McCabe application, begins by saying that the Brooklyn Borough School Board has the power to fix salaries within its appropriation, and adds that it got for this year the sum of $3,126,238 for salaries, which was $316,300 in excess of the amount needed if the salaries established by the payrools of 1898 were not to be increased. "But," adds the Court, "it is considered that such excess was appropriated and apportioned to the said School Board to enable it to make such an increase."

The opinion says that while the carrying out of this purpose of increase was being arranged for, the Ahearn law went into effect, causing an increase in the Brooklyn salary schedule on its own account of over $250,000 for the year 1899, which would have nearly exhausted the $316,300 allowed in the borough appropriations for increases.

"The Borough Board, says the Court, established on July 2 new pay rolls carrying out not only the increases necessitated by the Ahearn law, but also other increases in teachers' salaries amounting to over $307,000, thus keeping this branch of the increase within the said unapplied balance of $316,300.

These two increases thus created a deficiency of $279,287.58. The Board of Estimate then "directed the Controller to issue revenue bonds to the amount of $338,294 to pay the increase in the salaries of teachers in Brooklyn made by the said act," but the Auditor refused to audit the pay rolls.

Having thus summed up the situation which led up to the litigation, the Court concludes as follows: "The contention of the Auditor is that the said act of the Legislature of its own force applied the said unapplied balance of the Brooklyn School Board to the payment of the increase of salaries effected by the said act, and that, therefore, the other increases in salaries made by the said School Board itself was void for lack of funds out of which to make it.

"No such intention is expressed in the said act, nor is it necessarily implied. If the Legislature had any such intention it would have easily expressed it in the provision for revenue bonds. Instead of saying, as it did, that such bonds should be sold 'for the purpose of providing funds to carry into effect the provisions of this act,' it would have authorized a sale of such bonds to meet any deficiency in the school funds caused by the increased expenditure made by the act."

The decision does not affect Richmond and Queens Boroughs. There the Borough Boards appropriated for salaries. Mr. Carr says, more money than they had a right to, under any possible construction of law.

"We acquiesce in the decision by not appealing," said Mr. Carr last night, "though I do not admit that our position was wrong. The sum of money involved was a large one, and it was our duty to carry on the fight in the city's behalf.

"If the court had decided favorably on the contention of Mr. Greene that the city's share of the State school fund should be used to pay the salary increases we should have fought the thing right up to the Court of Appeals, for that is an important matter. Justice Gaynor, however, did not rule on this point."

Controller Coler said of Justice Gaynor's opinion: "The decision, as I understand it, is based entirely upon the legal construction to be given to Section 2 of the Ahearn law. I am very glad for the sake of all concerned that a decision on this point has been obtained so promptly, and I am especially glad, for the sake of the teachers, that the decision is what it is. Personally, I am entirely willing to acquiesce in Justice Gaynor's decision without taking an appeal."

As soon as he had read the text of the opinion, Mayor Van Wyck sent a letter to Acting Corporation Counsel Connoly requesting him to accept as a final interpretation of the law the decision of Justice Gaynor.

WASHINGTON'S WAR ON DOGS.

Fear of Hydrophobia Stirs the Agricultural Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Department of Agriculture has issued an order prohibiting the immigration or emigration of dogs to or from the District of Columbia. The restriction of dog immigration does not apply to immigrants with muzzles. The reason for the prohibition is that a hydrophobia scare prevails in neighboring sections of Maryland and Virginia. All dogs offending against the order will be summarily arrested. Meanwhile the Poundmaster is hard at work capturing dogs. His dragnet yielded eighty yesterday.

The District Commissioners are not pleased at the action of the department, and have asked Secretary Wilson to furnish them with all the information he possesses as to the existence of hydrophobia in Washington, and in the adjacent sections of Maryland and Virginia.

GREAT DISASTER AT CERAM.

Reported that 8,000 Persons Were Destroyed on the Island in the November Earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 12.—The disaster that overtook the Island of Ceram on the second of last month resulted in a great loss of life and property.

The steamship America Maru, which arrived yesterday from the Orient, brought advices from Ceram that 8,000 persons were destroyed on that island alone when the earthquakes of November shocked the Japanese coast and agitated the islands adjacent to the empire.

On the night of Nov. 2 the people of Ceram were awakened by a heavy shock of earthquake that seemed to work from north to south. Every one fled from his house into the public square. A few hours later it was reported that the water was rising in the Bay of Amboela.

The sea came forward in the form of a huge tidal wave and forced the water into the bay. It came up fifty feet over the lowlands. At Pauholy and Samasceron on the Bay, the waves swept over the tops of trees thirty feet high.

The whole coast for miles was transformed into a huge mud puddle. Corpses were everywhere. Broken trees and portions of houses were buried in the ooze. Every few rods were great mounds of stones and boulders that had been washed up from the sea, changing the entire topography of the country.

The exact number killed along the coast will never be known, as the corpses are in many cases yards under the new ground. At Hatoesia, out of 500 people, 100 were killed and 40 wounded. The rest escaped to the hills, where the shock of earthquake was first felt.

GOV. TAYLOR INAUGURATED.

Sworn In as Governor of Kentucky at Noon Yesterday—Minor Democratic Candidates to Contest.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 12.—William S. Taylor was inaugurated as Governor of Kentucky at noon to-day. The crowd was much smaller than in past years, owing to the weather, which up to last night was rainy, followed to-day by a December blizzard. The inaugural ceremonies were simple. Retiring Governor Bradley, in the course of his speech, said that he hoped the Goebel election law, which had brought so much turmoil to the State, would be wiped from the statute books. Gov. Taylor in his inaugural address said:

"The verdict rendered by the people last November was the mandate of the people in favor of civil liberty. It was the triumph of the people over a merciless, remorseless, partisan machine, exerted to enslave them." He added that one of the chief aims of his administration would be to secure the repeal of the election law.

The oath of office was administered to Gov. Taylor at noon by Chief Justice Hazelrigg.

The defeated Democratic candidates for State offices began serving notices of contests to-day against the Republican candidates who were given certificates of election last week. Several have been served.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Philadelphians Ask the President to Help Them Get It for Their City—He Courteously Refuses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The fight of the cities has begun for the Republican Convention in 1900. Lemuel E. Quigg and Michael J. Dady are here looking over the ground in the interest of New York, and Philadelphia has already opened headquarters, and her delegates are hard at work. A delegation from St. Louis is expected shortly. Few of the Republican National Committeemen are in town, so that the fight is hardly on as yet, but the Philadelphia people have taken time by the forelock and are working with all the committeemen they can find.

Mr. Quigg and Mr. Dady have rooms at the Shoreham. Mr. Quigg was at the Capitol during the day, talking to Congressmen. There are as yet few signs of life about the New York canvass. Philadelphia people speak respectfully of New York, but do not seem to consider her a dangerous rival.

"Philadelphia in 1900" is the gigantic legend that stares everybody in the face in front of the reception room at the Arlington, where the Philadelphians have their headquarters. The committeemen got here last night and lost no time in getting down to business. They conferred last night with Senator Penrose and the Pennsylvania Representatives, and to-day they called upon the President. With them went Senator Penrose and Representatives Bingham, Young, Adams, Wanger, and Butler.

Chairman Shields told the President that the people of Philadelphia were McKinley people, and were anxious to have the honor of seeing him renominated in their city.

The President expressed his pleasure at meeting the delegates, but said it would be manifestly improper for him to express the slightest preference for any city in a contest of this character.

The Philadelphians expect that their great fight will be with Chicago. A big delegation from that city will be here tomorrow or next day, and the fur will then begin to fly. The Philadelphians say that the time has come to let the East have a Republican convention and that Philadelphia is the only eligible place for one. New York, they say, would make an ideal site for a Democratic convention. So far, the Philadelphians claim, they have met with remarkable success. They have seen all the committeemen in town and have heard from others, and have been successful beyond their expectations. They say that the talk of energetic efforts by Western cities other than Chicago is without foundation.

So far they have found no trace of any efforts by places west of Chicago, and they think all the efforts of Kansas City and other places are on paper. It is true that Chicago has put forth no effort as yet, but the Philadelphians do not expect that state of things to last many days.

Kansas City's real push will be for the Democratic Convention.

NEW YORK'S BID FOR CONVENTIONS.

Headquarters Will Be Opened in Washington To-day.

The citizens' committee appointed by the Board of Trade and Transportation toward securing the two National conventions for this city will open headquarters in Washington to-day. At the meeting of the Republican National Committee on Friday Senators Depew and Platt will present the views of the New York committee to the Republicans. The funds pledged amount to $125,000, and but few of the subscription blanks sent out have been heard from.

Health Officer Doty, who had been requested to serve as one of the delegation to go before the Republican National Committee, has been compelled to decline owing to a pressure of business.

Will Discuss Civil Service Reform.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 12.—The National Civil Service Reform League will hold its annual meeting here on Thursday and Friday of this week. The first day will be devoted to the reports of local associations, the reading of papers on "Civil Service Reform as a Factor in Municipal Reform" and "The Competitive Plan in the Filling of Offices of the Higher Grades," and the annual address of the President, Carl Schurz. Officers will be elected and papers read on the second day.

SAYS MOLINEUX IS GUILTY

Kinsley Declares He Wrote the Address on the Poison Package.

ACCUSATION IS NO SURPRISE

Day Given Up to Comparisons of Handwriting Exhibits—Prisoner Smiles at the Testimony.

The prosecution, through Assistant District Attorney Osborne, practically admitted yesterday that it would endeavor to prove the crime of murder in the first degree against Roland B. Molineux on the strength of expert testimony relating to handwriting. Most of the testimony so far introduced has been on this basis. The evidence of the witness Heiles and of Mary Melando was closely allied to the handwriting theory, and according to the statements of Mr. Osborne these witnesses were called to the stand out of their regular order because the testimony they had to give strengthened that which he expected later to bring out by his experts.

Heiles proved the existence of a bitter feeling toward Harpster by the defendant, and Miss Melando established the fact that he had blue-tinted, crescent-eftwined paper in his possession. This, however, was not the strong part of her testimony, Molineux having admitted having it in his possession, but the point wrung unwillingly from the witness was that Mr. Weeks had spoken to her about the matter long before Molineux was officially accused of the crime for which he is now on trial.

Mr. Osborne admitted yesterday that all his evidence led up at last to the testimony of the experts on the question of handwriting. The chief of these in the employ of the prosecution is W moved her derby hat when she sat down, and after the excitement attending her entry had subsided she began to write voluminously. During the morning session Justice Winslow of the Wisconsin Supreme Court occupied a seat on the bench with the Recorder and with him examined many of the exhibits in the case.

"Mr. Kinsley," said Mr. Osborne, when the expert took the stand, "will you tell us what you did to earn that $1,700 Mr. Weeks spoke of?"

"Yes, Sir. On Jan. 1 Detective McCafferty handed me the first bits of writing that came into my possession. I started to work on these, and until the February term of the Grand Jury I worked night and day on this case."

"Whose handwriting was given you?"

"The handwriting of Mr. Molineux, Mr. Rogers, Mrs. Rogers, John D. Adams, Gallagher, Harpster, and hundreds of persons who had written for samples of a certain medicine."

"Did you examine the handwriting of all the employes of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club?"

"I did. I examined the handwriting of every employe."

"Did you examine also the handwriting of every member of the club that was available?"

"Yes."

"Did you examine the handwriting of H. C. Barnet?"

"I did."

"In all that time were you told by Capt. McClusky or any of the detectives who the suspect was?"

"I was not."

"Did you know whose writings you were examining?"

"No. I did not know the names of the writers."

THE DRAWING ANALYSES.

Mr. Kinsley then took up his drawing analyses. He made reproductions with a crayon of the Burns letter, admitted to be in the handwriting of the defendant, and of the letters signed "H. C. Barnet," one asking for a remedy and the other for a marriage guide. All of these letters are worded nearly alike. They start, "Please find enclosed," then state the amount and the name of the article desired, and close "and oblige yours truly," with the signature.

Then Mr. Kinsley called attention to commas, to the word "oblige" written, as he said, with a break between the "i" and the "g," and with a small hook instead of the letter "e." He referred to the slant and slope of the letters, and said that the "i" was smaller where the person wrote hurriedly and large where he took time. He failed, however, to state how he knew that the writer had written hurriedly in one or the other letter.

The Sheffler letter, admitted to be in the handwriting of the defendant, and containing the word "enclosed," was then passed up, and Mr. Kinsley was asked to draw analogies between this word in the Sheffler letter and the word in the Barnet and Cornish letters asking for medicines. Mr. Kinsley said that all samples showed the same large "e," the peculiarities in the shape on the "n," a short break between the "n" and the "c," the "c" taller than the second part of the "n," the small "o," and the difference between the various letters' "g," one being sharper on the point and some of the others round. The "d," he said, also differed in several instances.

"Yet that is practically the same writing, is it not?" asked Mr. Osborne, in spite of the differences pointed out.

"It is."

"What about the punctuation in the letters?"

"It is erratic."

"Is this erraticism characteristic?"

"It is."

TWO STYLES OF "A."

Mr. Osborne then called the attention of the witness to the capital "A" in the Austen letter and in the other letters. It was testified that one was closed at the top and another open. There were also two kinds of "A" in the Harpster letter.

"So you find that the defendant wrote two styles of 'A'?"

"I do."

"Are they still the same?"

"Yes, substantially, except for the slope. The disputed writings are also written with a coarser pen than the admitted writings."

Mr. Kinsley then pointed out what he called points of similarity in the word "Knickerbocker" in the Sheffler letter and the address on the poison package. In both instances he said there was a break between the "i" and the "c."

"Now look at the final 'c' in 'Athletic' and the letter preceding it. Is there a break between the two?"

"There is not really a break, but it was written so that the break would have been there had the writer, in forming the 'c,' not come too close to the up stroke of the 'l.' The ink spread and formed a connection between the letters, although they were not intended to touch."

This was a little further than the expert had yet gone in his explanations, and Mr. Carvalho conferred with Molineux, who smiled broadly. Mr. Kinsley went on to say that in about nineteen instances out of twenty there would be a break, but that in this case there was inadvertently none. Mr. Kinsley went on to explain that in the poison address there was a break between the "t" and "c" in "Athletic," but that nevertheless the words were identical because in the first instance the connection, as he said, was made inadvertently.

"Then the writing is the same?" queried Mr. Osborne.

"Substantially the same," responded the expert.

"APPRECIATED" UNDER DISSECTION.

The word "appreciated" was then put under dissection. The witness showed the breaks between the "i" and "a," the "e" and "d," and in another letter the same breaks were found in the word "immediately." In almost every instance, the witness said, there was a break between the preceding letter and an "o" and "a," a "g" and "d."

The words "please," beginning every one of the letters for remedies and occurring also in some of the admitted writings, were then drawn. To the lay eye every one of the capital "P's" was different. They sloped to the right and left; some had the loop connected with the first bar and some had not. The writing of some of the words "please" Mr. Kinsley described as "mushy and loose" and others as "firm."

"Do you find characteristic differences in the words and letters?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"No," answered the expert. "They were executed by a different pen and have a different slant and pictorial effect, that is all. They were carried out by the same pen habit."

Then Mr. Kinsley gave it as his opinion that the same hand wrote the Barnet and Cornish letters, the undisputed writings of Molineux, and the address on the poison package. Molineux bore the direct accusation without flinching. It came neither as a surprise to him nor to any one in the courtroom.

Mr. Osborne then asked for an adjournment. He said he was worn out and needed rest. Mr. Weeks objected, on the ground that he should have the opportunity to cross-examine the witness while his direct testimony was still clear in the minds of the jury. He said he had promised to call Assistant District Attorney McIntyre to the stand for cross-examination to-day, and that would make another break in Mr. Kinsley's testimony. The Recorder ruled that it would not be necessary to call Mr. McIntyre until Mr. Kinsley had finished, and Mr. Weeks then consented to an adjournment. The Court asked Mr. Osborne if he expected to go on with Mr. Kinsley to-day.

"Unless I have some more witnesses dropping from the clouds," said the District Attorney.

HEAVY STORM ON THE BIG LAKES

High Winds and Snow Reported, but No Vessels Lost.

DETROIT, Dec. 12.—A southwest wind has been howling up the river at the rate of fifty miles an hour since early to-day. Gales are reported from all parts of the lake region. Points along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan report a heavy fall of snow. No disasters to vessels have been reported.

BUFFALO, Dec. 12.—Before noon the wind reached a velocity of sixty-two miles an hour and the breakwater was completely hidden from view by the heavy sea.

In this city considerable damage was done. Trees were blown over, some big smoke stacks were destroyed, and the iron structural work on new buildings twisted out of shape.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Dec. 12.—The heavy northeaster washed out 1,000 feet of the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic track near Mission, on Keweenah Bay, to-day. The early passenger train passed over it in safety, but the freight following, consisting of an engine and ten loaded cars, went into the lake. No one was injured.

To Present First Lafayette Dollar.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—President McKinley to-day decided to appoint Frank J. Thompson, Secretary of the Lafayette Memorial Commission, a Commissioner to present to President Loubet the first souvenir coin struck, in accordance with the recent act of Congress. The first coin will be struck at the Philadelphia Mint on the anniversary of Washington's death.

BRITISH LOSE MORE MEN

Twelve Killed and Forty-four Wounded at Ladysmith.

SIX OTHERS TAKEN PRISONERS

Boer Gun Captured and Destroyed by a Sortie, but Attacking Party Is Cut Off by the Enemy.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The War Office publishes the following dispatch from Gen. Buller:

"Dispatch from Gen. White, dated Dec. 11, says:

"'Last night Col. Metcalfe and 500 of the Second Rifle Brigade sortied to capture a Boer howitzer on a hill. They reached the crest without being discovered, drove off the enemy, and then destroyed the howitzer with guncotton.'

"'When returning, Metcalfe found his retirement barred by the Boers, but he forced his way through, using the bayonet freely. The Boer losses were considerable. The British losses were Lieut. Fergusson and eleven men killed; Capt. Paley, Second Lieut. Davenport, Second Lieut. Bond, and forty-one men wounded; six men captured, who had remained behind in charge of the wounded.'"

This sortie the morning papers are unanimous in regarding as a brilliant piece of work.

That the Boers fear the British bayonets is illustrated in the full accounts now arriving of previous sorties. It seems that in Sir Archibald Hunter's sally from Ladysmith to capture the Boer guns the British did not carry bayonets. While they were storming the hill the Boers, suddenly aroused from sleep, rushed to the edge and opened an indiscriminate fire upon them. But just before the British secured a footing on the top of the hill some one shouted: "Fix bayonets and give them cold steel!" At this the Boers turned and fled into the darkness.

Little mention is made in the War Office dispatches of horses, but it is understood that the losses in this respect have been exceedingly heavy. Among the officers alone from 20 to 30 per cent. of their mounts have been shot under them, the Boer tactics being to shoot first at an officer's horse and then at the rider when dismounted.

Gen. Gatacre's disaster at Stormberg has been blamed to a lack of knowledge of the country; but, according to The Daily Telegraph, when the war began there were no official maps available at Cape Town, and, therefore, it is probable that Gen. Gatacre is still without them.

The Times, while praising Col. Metcalfe's brilliant feat at Ladysmith, expresses the opinion that, relief being now so near, such sorties are rather perilous, and it would be better for Gen. White to avoid them so far as possible.

The Morning Post again endeavors editorially to arouse the British people to a recognition of the "serious nature of the struggle and of the grave position in which matters now stand." It urges the Government to prepare immediately to send more troops to South Africa.

Lord Mayor Newton, the Aldermen of the City of London, and other prominent officials of the Corporation, together with the high military authorities, will attend the memorial service to be held in St. Paul's Cathedral for the men who have fallen in the war.

A War Office dispatch reports that Mafeking was safe up to Dec. 4, but that the Boers had been shelling the town since Nov. 27 with increased effect. Daily rations had been considerably reduced, meat by half a pound and bread by a quarter of a pound, in view of a probable long siege. Water was still plentiful.

Scanty messages seem to indicate that preparations are about completed for simultaneous attacks at Tugela River and Modder River, the dispatches showing that the British and Boers were in touch in both directions Monday.

There is no confirmation of the report of another day-long battle along the Modder River, Monday; but possibly there has been a resumption of fighting, as reported by Gen. Cronje yesterday evening, as the searching lyddite shell fire of Sunday was probably preliminary to an advance.

A strange item of news has reached here from Boer sources announcing that the Waschbank bridge is dsmaged. This is taken in some quarters as a possible confirmation of the suggestion that the British have made a wide sweep, by way of Helpmakaar, and are preparing to take the Boers north of Ladysmith in the rear.

A message from Naauwpoort, dated Monday, Dec. 11, shows that Gen. French has apparently no inclination to withdraw his advanced troops at Arundel, as it was feared might be the result of Gen. Gatacre's defeat. Gen. French reports that his artillery, Dec. 11, forced an advance post of the Boers south of Colesberg to evacuate its position and seek refuge behind Vaalkop.

There is great indignation in Great Britain at the ignorance the British Intelligence Department is displaying in estimating the Boer strength in Cape Colony. Experts aver that 15,000 Boers will have to be driven out of the colony before the passage of the Orange River can be commenced.

The Rhodesian force advancing to the relief of Mafeking reached Gaberones Fort Dec. 2 and found the Boers had evacuated the place. The Rhodesians are repairing the railroad as they advance.

HEAVY FIGHTING IS REPORTED.

Cape Town Hears a Rumor of a Battle in the Direction of Modder River.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 12.—It is reported that heavy fighting was heard all day yesterday in the direction of Modder River.

GATACRE EXPLAINS HIS DEFEAT.

Cape Policeman Misled the Advance, but Probably Unintentionally.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The War Office has received the following from Gen. Forestier-Walker:

"CAPE TOWN, Dec. 11.—Gatacre reports as follows:

"'The idea to attack Stormberg seemed to promise certain success, but the distance was underestimated by myself and the local guides. A policeman took us around some miles, consequently we were marching from 9:30 P. M. till 4 A. M., and were landed in an impossible position. I do not consider the error intentional. The Boers commenced firing from the top of an uncalable hill, and wounded a good many of our men while in the open plain. The Second Northumberlands tried to turn out the enemy, but failed. The Second Irish Fusiliers seized a kopje near and held on, supported by the mounted infantry and Cape police. The guns, under Jeffreys, could not have been better handled. But I regret to say that one gun was overturned in a deep nullah and another sank in quicksand. Neither could be extricated in the time available.

"'Seeing the situation, I sent a dispatch rider to Molteno with the news. Collected and withdrew our force from ridge to ridge for about nine miles. The Boer guns were remarkably well served. They carried accurately 5,000 yards. I am holding Bushman's Hoek and Cyphergat. Am sending the Irish Rifles and Northumberlands to Sterksstroom to recuperate. The wounded proceed to Queenstown. The missing Northumberlands number 366, not 306, as previously reported.'"

LADY SARAH WILSON EXCHANGED.

Boers Release Her in Return for Another Woman Captive.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—A special dispatch from Lorenzo Marques says a Boer telegram from Mafeking says:

"Lady Sarah Wilson, aunt of the Duke of Marlborough, who was captured by the Boers while acting as a correspondent for The London Daily Mail, has been exchanged for a Boer woman who was a prisoner at Mafeking."

BOERS REPORT BRITISH DEFEAT.

President Steyn Tells of the Disaster at Stormberg.

PRETORIA, Dec. 10.—President Steyn has sent the following details of the fight at Stormberg Junction:

"The British, with six cannon, attacked the Boers, under Swanepoel and Olivier, and stormed the Boers' intrenched positions on the kopjes. After a severe fight they were compelled to surrender. The prisoners are Major Sturges, 6 officers, and 230 non-commissioned officers and men of the Northumberlands, and 2 officers and about 250 non-commissioned officers and men of the Irish Fusiliers.

"It is impossible to state the number of dead or wounded British. The Boers captured three cannon and two ammunition wagons."

BRITISH TRANSPORT AGROUND.

Denton Grange with War Munitions Stranded on Canary Islands.

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Dec. 12.—The British transport Denton Grange, with war munitions on board, is ashore outside the harbor and making water.

The Denton Grange, Capt. Williams, of 3,759 tons, when last reported was at Southampton, Nov. 20, bound for Table Bay, Cape Colony.

"ROMEO AND JULIET" IN BOSTON

Alvary and Mme. Eames Sing Title Roles—Season Is Satisfactory.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—Manager Grau's season of Italian opera, now in its second and last week in Boston, has been, as he himself puts it, satisfactory both from the artistic and financial point of view. Saleza's illness from bronchitis has caused the only change from an announced bill, and the season has progressed smoothly notwithstanding. Calvé and "Carmen" have proved the most potent attractions.

To-night Alvarez, the great tenor of the Paris Opéra, sang Romeo to Eames's Juliet, creating a sensation. The house was crowded from pit to dome and the enthusiasm evoked was tremendous. Alvarez is both an actor and a singer. He sang the balcony scene with a voice of ineffable sweetness, which he managed with ease, and in the duel rose to a height of passion which thrilled the vast audience and left the impression that the equal of Alvarez has not been heard here in a generation.

The cast also included Mmes. Mantelli, Bauermeister, MM. Plançon, Bars, Illy, Dufriche, Meux, Vanni, and Edouard de Reszke. Mancinelli conducted.

NEW AMERICAN DRAMA BOUGHT

W. A. Brady Acquires It to Star His Wife, Grace George.

William A. Brady has purchased a new American drama, in which he will star his wife, Grace George, who recently resigned from the cast of "Ben Hur" because she felt that the rôle of Esther, which she was to play, did not afford her ample opportunity to display her talents.

Mr. Brady yesterday refused to divulge the name of the author of the play until certain contracts were consummated. He thinks the play is one of the best pieces of property he has ever acquired.

Actress Sued for Infringement.

Maurice Campbell of Pittsburg, Penn., has brought suit in the United States court in Brooklyn for alleged infringement of copyright of the one-act play now being produced at a Brooklyn theatre under the name of "Her Soldier Boy," by Lillian Burkhart. The complainant alleges that he wrote the play that Miss Burkhart has been producing as her own composition, to his loss, and he asks $18,000 damages. Justice Thomas has denied a motion for a preliminary injunction to prevent the continued production of the play.

Irving Place Theatre's New Bills.

As the new comedy-drama "Das Recht auf sich Selbst" (The Right of the Individual) has not met with expected favor, Manager Conried has withdrawn it from the Irving Place Theatre. "Maedel als Rekrut," the original of "The Girl in the Barracks," will be presented there to-night. To-morrow evening and for the rest of the week Wildenbruch's play "Hubenlerche" will be given.

Burlesque Actress Passes Away.

Mrs. M. Florence Oppenheimer, wife of Manager Joseph Oppenheimer, and professionally known as M. Florence Edwards, died yesterday morning. Miss Edwards was one of the first women to produce in this country a serpentine dance, and for many years had figured as leading woman in her husband's burlesque companies.

Mr. Mansfield Changes His Plans.

Richard Mansfield has decided to make another change in his bill for next week. Instead of presenting a revival of "The Merchant of Venice," for the first three nights "The Devil's Disciple" will be given.

BASEBALL MAGNATES CONFER.

Decision in the Wrigby Case—Talk About the Circuit.

The National Baseball League magnates began their annual Winter meeting yesterday in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The Board of Arbitration was in session most of the day. The league proper adjourned without transacting any business. After the adjournment of the Board of Arbitration President Young's son gave out the text of a resolution which was adopted by the board regarding the case of George Wrigby, who was signed by the New York Club on Sept. 15, 1899, for a period terminating Oct. 15, 1899. The Syracuse Club had protested on the ground that it had not transferred to the New York Club its right of reservation of the player's services, as provided in the National agreement. Then the Syracuse Club transferred the right of reservation to the Brooklyn Club. The resolution disposing of the case sets forth:

"The National agreement does not give to the reserving club the right to control the services of a player after his contract has terminated with the said club, and its right to transfer such reservation is not impaired by any action of the player entering into the services of any other club after the termination of such contract and before the commencement of the next season of the club to which he has been transferred."

It is hardly probable that the proposed scheme for a reduction in the League circuit will go through. The Louisville followers have proposed that the League appoint a committee to appraise the value of the Louisville, Baltimore, Washington, and Cleveland franchises. Only one deal for players was reported yesterday. In that Chicago bought Outfielder. McCarthy from Pittsburg.

REVISION OF CUSTOMS LAWS.

A meeting of the Committee on Revision of Customs Laws of the Merchants' Association has been called for Dec. 18 by Secretary Angell, to approve the report of the Executive Board on the subject.

The committee was appointed last Spring, at the suggestion of President McKinley, for the purpose of considering the whole subject of the customs administration act. It is composed of well-known business men and importers of the city, who, since their appointment have gone carefully over the ground and have made the recommendations they think will accrue to the benefit of the importers. The report, when finally adopted, will be transmitted to Congress.

One of the principal recommendations is to grant to consignees the same right as purchasers now have to add to their invoices to make market value, or, in other words, it is held to be logical that consignees should have an equal right with purchasers in being permitted in their entry to raise invoice values when their information shows the same to be too low.

Other recommendations are a provision that no penalties shall accrue unless the appraised value exceeds the entered value by more than 5 per cent.; that the members of the Board of General Appraisers may be retired after fifteen years' service or upon reaching sixty-five years of age, at two-thirds salary; that the hearings before the General Appraisers shall be open and public; that the duties on goods in bonded warehouses shall be assessed on the weights at the time of withdrawal instead of deck weights, as is now the custom.

The oaths which importers are obliged to take have been amended by the elimination of useless verbiage or antiquated phraseology. Another amendment is the making of the penalties for undervaluation apply only to the articles undervalued, and not to the whole of the package in which they are contained, as at present.

It is the opinion of those customs officials with whom the committee has discussed the question of the first mentioned recommendation that the Government would be the gainer, not the loser, by the proposed change.

More Automobile Club Members.

There was a well-attended meeting of the Automobile Club of America at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. On the recommendation of the Board of Governors it was decided to retain the present quarters of the club in the hotel. The club amended the by-laws so as to permit of the election of 500 active and 200 honorary members. Under the decision originally adopted the membership was limited to 400. There are 120 applications for membership on file.

DEATH OF GEN. FERRERO

A Man Who Achieved Fame in Two Dissimilar Professions.

DANCING MASTER AND SOLDIER

Abandoned a Successful Career in This City and Won High Rank as a Civil War Volunteer.

Gen. Edward Ferrero, for many years prior to last May the lessee of the Lenox Lyceum, and one of the most interesting characters of New York, died at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon at his residence, 111 West Seventy-eighth Street, of a complication of diseases. Gen. Ferrero had been in poor health for several months, and had retired altogether from active business life.

Gen. Ferrero enjoyed the distinction of having achieved success in at least two walks of life, so widely dissimilar as to be popularly considered antitheses—those of dancing master and soldier.

Edward Ferrero was born in Granada, Spain, Jan. 18, 1831. His parents were natives of Italy, and had just arrived in Spain when the son was born. Thirteen months later the family removed to the United States and settled in this city.

The elder Ferrero's house here was frequented by Italian political refugees, and he enjoyed the friendship of Garibaldi, Argenti, Albius, and Avazzana. Signor Ferrero, who was famed as a dancer, opened a dancing school at what is now the northeast corner of Fourteenth Street and Sixth Avenue, which, as the years went by, became the most famous in the country.

Edward was reared practically on the floors of the dancing academy among the boys and girls of the wealthiest families of New York. He developed into a master of the Terpsichorean art, and when his parents retired, in the early fifties, he succeeded to the business. He originated many dancing figures which became popular throughout this country and Europe.

His establishment was patronized by the most exclusive families, and many elderly members of the leading families of the New York of to-day took their first dancing lessons under his tutelage. He also found time to teach dancing in the Military Academy at West Point. He always had a taste for military life, and at the beginning of the civil war was Lieutenant Colonel of the Eleventh New York Militia Regiment.

When war was declared he promptly left the polished floors of the dancing halls for the field of sterner action. In 1861 he raised the Fifty-first New York Regiment, called the "Shepard Rifles," of which he was made Colonel. He led a brigade in Burnside's expedition to Roanoke Island, where his regiment took the first fortified redoubt captured in the war.

He also commanded a brigade at Newbern under Gen. Reno, and in 1862 served in Pope's Virginia campaign. He was in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, and for his bravery in the latter was commissioned Brigadier General of Volunteers Sept. 19, 1862. He served at Fredericksburg and Vicksburg, and commanded a division at the siege of Knoxville.

The ex-dancing master afterward marched the Ninth Army Corps over the mountains without roads and by compass only to Cincinnati. He was in command at the defense of Fort Sanders against the desperate assault of Longstreet. In Grant's final campaign, including the siege of Petersburg, he commanded the colored division of the Ninth Army Corps, and on Dec. 2, 1864, he was breveted Major General for "bravery and meritorious services."

He was mustered out Aug. 24, 1865, and upon returning to New York did not reopen his dancing school, but leased a building at Twenty-eighth Street and Broadway, now the site of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, and converted it into a splendid ballroom, which was known as Apollo Hall. In this hall were held the greatest balls and other social gatherings of the exclusive social set. The site finally became too valuable for a ballroom, and in 1872 Gen. Ferrero gave up his lease and the building was converted into a theatre.

Gen. Ferrero next leased the big ballroom of Tammany Hall. He joined the Tammany Society, and became known personally to nearly every Democratic politician of note in the State. He never took much interest in politics, however, and never held an office. When the old Monitor and Merrimac Exposition Building, at Fifty-ninth Street and Madison Avenue, was converted into the Lenox Lyceum he gave up the Tammany Hall lease and took charge of the Lyceum Jan. 1, 1889. He held this until last May, when he retired.

Notwithstanding his hard campaigns and marches in the civil war, Gen. Ferrero retained the polished manner and grace of carriage acquired in early life. He was a member of the Loyal Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic, and Manhattan Lodge of Masons. A widow survives him.

SENATOR PLATT AS A WITNESS.

Expected to Testify in an Express Suit at Toledo To-day.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 12.—Judge Lurton, in the United States court to-day, began the hearing of the case of Calvin Cone against the United States Express Company. Frank Platt of New York is conducting the defense, and Senator T. C. Platt is expected as a witness on behalf of the company to-morrow. Calvin Cone, the plaintiff, who asks for judgment for $30,000 on an alleged contract, occupied the stand throughout to-day.

Cone began service with the United States Express Company in 1855. Until 1887 he was General Superintendent of all lines west of Buffalo. In that year his office was abolished. He at once opened correspondence with Senator Platt, intimating that his long experience in the express business had given him knowledge which he characterized as being both of "the positive and negative sort." He wrote that he had just been struck with the importance of a well-posted express man as an adviser to railroad companies in the matter of express contracts.

This letter brought a reply from Senator Platt asking him to New York for a conference. In the presence of a witness Mr. Cone suggested to Senator Platt that he be made general Western agent of the company for life, with a salary of $3,000 and advisory duties. Mr. Platt, he claims, reduced the salary to $3,000. It is for this alleged promised salary that Cone has brought suit.

The defense as outlined is that, after making this contract, Mr. Cone became general manager for the Toledo Steamboat Company, preventing him from giving any time to the express company.

CUE EXPERTS' COMPETITIONS.

Results of Games in Class B and the Rival Tourney.

Contests for the Class B amateur billiard championship were continued yesterday at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Smith and Threshie are in the lead. In the evening Smith defeated Hendrick by a score of 300 to 202 and made an average of 6 18-47, his best run being 35. Hendrick averaged 4 14-47, and his highest run was 28.

Threshie defeated Hendrick in the final game by 300 to 267, making a run of 32 and averaging 6. Hendrick made an average of 5 22-49, his highest break being 42.

Hendrick won from Hevner in the afternoon by a score of 300 to 242, and averaging 5 10-53. His best run was 40. Hevner averaged 4 10-53 and made a run of 38.

In the intercity and interclub handicap billiard tourney at Maurice Daly's academy Townsend defeated Stark, last year's Class B champion, by a score of 280 to 223. His average was 7 14-38 and his highest run was 41. Stark averaged 6 1-37 and made a break for 49.

Anti-Imperialists Forming a League.

A meeting to form an American League in this city along the same lines as the Anti-Imperialist Leagues of Boston and Chicago was held at 45 Cedar Street yesterday afternoon. The intention of those interested in the movement, which was originated by Bolton Hall, is to organize the sentiment opposed to imperialism before the meeting of the National Conventions. Charles B. Spahr was elected temporary Chairman, E. W. Ordway, Secretary, and Ernest H. Crosby Treasurer. A committee to perfect plans for permanent organization was appointed, composed of Carl Schurz, W. M. Forney, and William Potts.

CHICAGO TO BANISH TRAMPS.

Steps to be Taken to Keep Them from the City.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The Bureau of Associated Charities is determined to drive tramps and beggars out of Chicago. A special committee appointed last June, after studying the subject for six months, has recommended to the executive committee of the bureau the closing of police stations as free lodging houses and the arrest of all professional wanderers.

Superintendent Byrkel said yesterday:

"Chicago is starting on another Winter as a harbor and a nest for tramps. The Police Department is fostering the evil it fights by throwing open the stations to tramps. Vagrants are flocking to Chicago to spend the Winter and prey on and scatter disease through the holiday crowds. New York, Boston, Baltimore, and other cities have closed their doors to the tramps and they flock to Chicago."

According to the report statistics show that in 1898 120,578 free lodgings were furnished by police stations, while the Relief Aid Society's superior accommodations, where a return of manual labor was required, were called on only 8,261 times.

CLERKS MUST STAND ON MERIT.

War Department Refuses to be Influenced by Politics.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The efforts made by civilian employes in the War Department to secure promotion through outside influences obliged Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn to-day to announce that such influence would have no weight. He said he wanted it distinctly understood that all changes made in the civil service of the department are based entirely on merit.

The effort to influence the department's action by outside influence sometimes relates to other matters than promotions. Mr. Meiklejohn says that the department, in making promotions, reductions, and discharges, will rely exclusively upon the efficiency ratings and the recommendations submitted by chiefs of bureaus.

He warns civilian employes that every attempt to influence departmental action will be regarded as a violation of the regulations and will be noted on the record of the offender and considered as an element in his efficiency rating.

72 BLACK EYES IN 12 YEARS.

Newark Woman Says Her Husband's Cruelty Drove Her Away.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—Vice Chancellor Emery this afternoon heard testimony in a suit brought by Mrs. Jennie Ryan against her husband, John J. Ryan, for maintenance and support. The Ryans were married in March, 1888. On July 9, 1898, Mrs. Ryan alleges, she was forced, because of cruel treatment, to leave her husband.

Mrs. Ryan says that during the twelve years of married life her husband was intoxicated every Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, with the exception of six hours each day. On one occasion she alleges, Ryan grabbed her by her hair as she lay in bed, and rapped on her head with his knuckles.

She also says she averaged six black eyes a year for twelve years. In 1897 Mrs. Ryan testified she lay at the point of death, and her husband came up to the bed in which she lay, prodded her in the ribs, and, cursing her, said: "Why don't you die? There's $500 insurance on your life."

For six nights preceding the day she left him, Mrs. Ryan testified, her husband walked the floor all night carrying a razor and a meat knife, and threatening to kill her. She declared that but for the intervention of her brother, Harry Kehoe, and a friend, he would have carried out his threat. Ryan denies the charges.

SLATER SEES THE GOVERNOR.

Wants a Special Election in the Thirty-first District.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Assemblymen Kelsey of Livingston, Allds of Chenango, S. S. Slater of the Thirty-first District of Manhattan, and Assemblyman-elect Frank P. Demarest of West Nyack, Rockland County, were about the Capitol to-day. Messrs. Kelsey and Allds had business with the Controller regarding the work of the Tax Committee, of which they are members.

Mr. Slater was a member of last year's Assembly, and E. C. Stone, his Democratic opponent this year, recently died. The vote was close, and Mr. Slater was preparing to take his seat, by virtue of his name being placed on the roll, or to contest on the alleged transposition of votes in one district. The death of Mr. Stone has changed the aspect of the situation, and Mr. Slater says he is unwilling to take the seat which, if it belonged to his opponent, would now have been rendered vacant by his death. He therefore favors the holding of a special election early in January, when he will run again.

He saw Gov. Roosevelt to-day, and the Governor is willing to make any arrangement which will be satisfactory to Mr. Slater and the district. If it is decided to hold a special election, it will probably be called for Jan. 30, 1900.

Assemblyman-elect Demarest represented Rockland County in the Assemblies of 1888, 1889, and 1891. He was then known as the "little giant" of Rockland County. Mr. Demarest is in Albany for the purpose of securing quarters for the Winter.

Blame Fixed for Paterson Disaster.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 12.—The jury which has been investigating the accident on the Lackawanna Railroad at the Barclay Street Station here on the night of Nov. 29 brought in this verdict at 1:30 o'clock this morning after two hours' deliberation: "We find Conductor Gould M. Cattell and Flagman William Boedaker of Train No. 6 guilty of negligence in not obeying the flagging rules, thereby causing the collision on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad on the night of Nov. 29, causing the death of Mrs. Mary Burt Roe." Mrs. Roe's death was the only one of the seven formally investigated.

Congressman Kahn in Reed's Seat.

From The Washington Post.

Representative Julius Kahn, "the actor man" of former days, who has trod the boards with Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson, Tommaso Salvini, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence, Clara Morris, and other well-known stars, is very happy. And it should be said that Mr. Kahn's 250 pounds of avoirdupois, short, but broad and solid, is capable of absorbing a great deal of sunshine which shows continually in his beaming physiognomy.

Mr. Kahn, who succeeds the blacksmith statesman of the Golden Gate, James G. Maguire was among the lucky ones in the biennial drawing for seats. The reading clerk called out his name very early, and Mr. Kahn, robed in his dignified Prince Albert, tramped down the aisle to the most favorite locality and told the page how to label one of the desks that caught his fancy. Now Mr. Kahn has learned that he has the seat that Thomas B. Reed of Maine occupied in the Forty-seventh Congress. This is the cause and the inspiration of the Californian's joy. He touches elbows with the great Republicans seated in his vicinity, as he swings around in his swivelled chair and surveys the scene with great contentment.

GUATEMALAN KILLS AMERICANS.

Capt. Imboden and William Gold Shot by a Drunken Native.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 12.—Capt. John Imboden, son of Gen. Imboden of Confederate fame, was shot and instantly killed at San Pedro, Guatemala, last Monday, by a white native, who also killed William Gold, who was in the room with Imboden.

Imboden was a large mine owner with interests near Tegucigalpa, in Honduras. He and Gold were in San Pedro on business, and the native who shot them was drunk. He fired through the window at Imboden, while the latter was dressing, and killed him instantly. He then shot Gold three times, from the effects of which he died in a few minutes. The murdered escaped.

The news was brought to this city by the steamer Breakwater, but no one aboard the vessel knew the motive or identity of the murderer.

CHICAGO BOY BURGLARS CAUGHT

Arrested in Luxuriously Furnished Den—Many Dime Novels Found.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—A gang of alleged boy burglars was arrested last evening in lavishly furnished apartments in a barn in the rear of 4,341 Wentworth Avenue. Five boys compose the gang, and their ages range from eleven to seventeen years.

The furnishings of the "robbers' den" astonished the police. The walls were hung with costly tapestries, rugs, valuable paintings, and musical instruments, while on the floor and on boxes was enough bric-à-brac to handsomely decorate a residence. To complete the artistic effect of the rendezvous of the gang, a varied collection of antique guns, swords, and pistols were fastened to one end of the room, with a soldier's uniform coat as the centrepiece. The boys had gained an idea from one of the paintings, for over an improvised dais, covered with Persian rugs, hung "The Reading from Homer," and in the chief's chair was a pile of dime novels. When the police entered the chairs were in a semi-circle, as if the Captain of the gang had just finished reading.

CHEAP LITERATURE DISCUSSED.

Arguments as to Whether or Not It Cheapens Literature.

The question, "Does Cheap Literature Cheapen Literature?" was discussed last night at the Waldorf-Astoria before the Nineteenth Century Club by Prof. Harry Thurston Peck of Columbia University, S. S. McClure, the publisher, and Miss Isabel Hapgood.

The main theme of Prof. Peck's argument was that the great output of books by means of a minimum of cost in production tended to lower the general standard of the books to-day, thus reducing to a lower level the taste of the reading public, and consequently the work of authors, to whom, as Prof. Peck maintained, the commercial aspect instead of high literary aim, appeals.

S. S. McClure gave a history of what is understood as cheap literature, and said that it began in America forty years ago. "The cheap literature of to-day," he went on, "is the standard literature of the world, and the standard is higher than ever before. The publisher who does not publish good literature will not succeed. There is no use for any kind of a critic. The man who buys the book is the real critic. You can't sell poor books."

Miss Hapgood, who spoke last, argued that cheap books, in the sense of mediocrity, certainly cheapen brains, if one indulges in them. "It is the cheapening of books, not literature," she said, "that does the harm."

HAT TRADE UNPROFITABLE.

Manufacturers Say that the Domestic Business Does Not Pay.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Dec. 12.—A number of the prominent hat manufacturers of this place, which is the largest hat-producing city in the East, have just completed stock-taking, and, although the season was one of the busiest in the past twenty years, no money was made by those engaged in the domestic trade.

One large manufacturer, who has furnished the Government with army hats, stated that his factory was running night and day for several months in an effort to fill orders promptly, and were it not for his Mexican and South American trade, the season would be profitless. The goods used in those countries are of the best quality, and are shipped untrimmed. The trimmings are packed separate, which means a saving of $1 to $2 a dozen for labor. This is done to save the duty, which in Mexico is $12 a dozen on trimmed hats and $6 a dozen for those untrimmed. The duty is not figured on the value of the goods. All qualities are assessed equally.

The cause assigned for the reduction of profits in the hat-making industry is the advance in all the materials used in the construction of a hat, both direct and remote, and the refusal of the jobbers and retailers to advance prices. The latter demand from the manufacturers goods at the same price as they did years ago, and strive to hold to conditions that have long since passed away. As a result, inferior hats are given, which are often returned at a loss to the manufacturer.

An effort was made some time ago to organize a trust, but the scheme failed through the powerful opposition of the wealthy jobbers, who threatened to build factories. The jobbers control the trade in the South and West.

To Preserve the Palisades.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Gov. Roosevelt held a conference to-day with the commission appointed to devise a plan to preserve the Palisades. The Governor is very much interested and told the commission that it was his desire that co-operation be had with the authorities of New Jersey to work out a plan by which the Palisades might be preser

DRIGGS ARGUES FOR GOLD

Brooklyn Representative Supports House Currency Bill.

FIRST DEMOCRAT TO FAVOR IT

Speech Creates Great Interest in Congress—Debate Begun Monday Continued by Grosvenor and Others.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Great interest was manifested in the House to-day in the speech of Representative Driggs, (Dem., N. Y.,) who was the first member of his party to speak in advocacy of the Republican currency bill. He announced that he had pledged himself before election to support the gold standard and proposed to redeem that pledge. He will be joined by several of his Brooklyn colleagues and probably several others.

When Mr. Driggs arose many of the Republicans left their seats and went over to the Democratic side to listen. Mr. Driggs said that the convention which nominated him did not indorse the Chicago platform nor did it indorse either gold or silver. As the nominee he was left to follow his own convictions.

On the 28th of October, and again on the day preceding the election, he announced in the Brooklyn papers that he favored the gold standard, and if elected gave his pledge that he would support gold-standard legislation. [Republican applause.]

Continuing, Mr. Driggs declared that he believed the dignity and pre-eminence of the United States would be advanced by placing this country upon the standard of the most highly civilized countries of the world.

TRUE TO HIS CONVICTIONS.

"I do not arrogate to myself," said he, addressing his Democratic colleagues, "the presumption to say to you that I am right and you are wrong. But I believe, as a Democrat, that you would respect me less if, knowing how I feel, I should not openly avow my convictions and keep the pledges I made."

Mr. Driggs, continuing, argued that the doctrine of free silver at 16 to 1 was not in harmony with the ideas of some of the greatest men in the Democratic Party. He instanced the cases of Madison, Calhoun, and Randall, who never swerved in their allegiance to Democracy, but who offered specific policies.

Mr. Driggs, as a loyal Democrat, claimed the privilege exercised by these men of voting against the wishes of a majority of his party in Congress, and announced his determination to fight the passage of any free-silver measure, and at the same time to heartily support any bill declaring for the gold standard, whether of Republican or Democratic origin. His constituency was unalterably opposed to any free-silver bill, and he believed that, in the end, the great bulk of the Democrats of the country would realize the error and hopelessness of the 16-to-1 policy and demand the maintenance of a stable and permanent currency, based on the gold standard.

"Silver has now become an article of commerce," he said, "rising and falling in price, as do all other articles of commerce dependent upon laws of supply and demand. Its value is therefore fluctuating constantly, making silver undesirable as a standard of value."

FALL OF SILVER PRICES.

In spite of all legislation intended to bolster up silver, it had gone down steadily in price. The Bland-Allison act of 1878, which was adopted as a direct attempt on the part of Congress to aid silver, was followed by a drop in its price from $1.20 per ounce in 1878 to .9668 in 1890. Even with the passage of the Sherman purchasing act in 1890 the Government was unable to keep up the value of silver, for with the Mint buying practically the entire output of the mines silver dropped to .5656 per ounce in 1894. Mr. Driggs argued that the commercial panics which followed this legislation brought more hardships to Democrats than to Republicans, because the Democratic Party is made up largely of men of small means and modest capital. "We cannot," he said, "create anything by legislation, we cannot keep two kinds of money at a parity by legislative action, we cannot, powerful though we are, perform impossibilities; we can, however, do what other commercial nations have done, and that is establish gold as a standard and coin silver as it is needed and demanded, redeeming it in gold when necessary."

The leading commercial nations of the world had abandoned the standard of silver, and now transact their business on the basis of gold. Mr. Driggs declared that the wage earner has benefited by the decline in the cost of living commodities and the corresponding increase in the purchasing value of the dollar. Falling prices, said he, have been the result of overproduction. The laboring man is able to purchase at the present time almost double the commodities purchaseable in 1873 with the same dollar. From 1870 to 1890 there was a decrease in wages of less than 3 per cent., while the purchasing power of the wage earners' medium of exchange increased a trifle over 50 per cent. The capitalist was the main sufferer by the depreciation in prices, being compelled to invest in commercial enterprises, stocks, mortgages, and bonds at extremely low rates of interest.

AGREES WITH MR. BRYAN.

Mr. Driggs said he agreed with William J. Bryan in the additional explanation for the fall in prices—that of production out of proportion to the increase in population. He showed that while the population has increased about 55 per cent. since 1850, commerce increased 488 per cent.

"Prices remained high," he said, "prior to 1873, because millions of dollars were being expended and thousands of men employed in the construction of enterprises which made the later development and overproduction of commerce a certainty."

Congressman Driggs closed with a patriotic appeal to his fellow-members to stand by the fundamental principles of Democracy laid down by Jefferson, reaffirmed by Jackson, and reiterated by the Democratic National Convention in 1876.

GROSVENOR FAVORS THE BILL.

On the Republican side Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) argued for the passage of the bill. He said he had hoped that the Democrats would meet the issue presented by the pending bill, but they were here with the "same old stale battle cry" of 16 to 1. the "same old stale battlecry" of 16 to 1. Yesterday the gentleman from Missouri (De Armond) had charged the Republican victory of 1896 to corruption. He thought it ill became the party which stood sponsor for Goebel in Kentucky to charge fraud. For himself, he did not believe that Democratic voters or any considerable number of voters in the country were purchasable. Mr. Grosvenor declared that two-thirds of the Republican campaign fund in 1896 was used in the printing and dissemination of literature.

Going back to the platform declaration of 1896, Mr. Grosvenor produced a poll of the members of the Committee on Resolutions of the St. Louis Convention to show that an overwhelming majority favored a gold declaration before the convention met. The only controversy since had been as to who was responsible for certain verbal phrases. There was no difference as to what the substance of the declaration should be. He quoted from the Republican platforms of the past to prove that it had always been a cardinal principle of the Republican Party that every dollar of the United States should be of equal intrinsic value and debt-paying power.

Replying to Mr. De Armond's assertion yesterday that the Republican Party was the party of classes and did nothing for the masses, he declared that if there was a party which represented the aspiration, hopes, and interests of the masses it was the Republican Party. In proof of which he contrasted the condition of the people in 1896 and 1899.

TOUCHES ON THE TRUSTS.

Referring to the question of anti-trust legislation, he challenged any Democrat to point out any addition which could constitutionally be made to the Sherman anti-trust law. He dissented entirely from Mr. Bryan's remedy. He contended that Congress could not assail corporations in the States; that the States should control and regulate their own domestic affairs.

In conclusion, Mr. Grosvenor said:

"Mr. Chairman, the Republican Party does not need oral argument in the halls of Congress nor dissertations in the press of the country upon these vital questions. There are voices which proclaim the triumph of Republicanism that do not depend upon human organs for their effectiveness. From the pine-clad hills of Maine to the uttermost southern extent of New England the whirl of the spindle, the ring of the hammer, and the shout of happy, well-paid operatives is a constant and vociferous proclamation of Republican triumph. From New York to San Francisco all along the mighty avenues of travel and traffic, the voice of commendation and exultation because of Republican legislation and Republican intelligence and Republican statesmanship goes up in the breezes of the morning and are sung as vespers at the hour of evening twilight.

"The mighty volumes of flame and smoke pouring from the chimneys of enormous industrial establishments wave a beacon light to heaven, announcing the triumph of protective tariff and sound money. Mingled with the click of the pick in the coal mines of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and West Virginia is the voice of our workingmen, well paid where starvation wages were in force, well fed where starvation stalked with gaunt horror—well clothed, well educated, satisfied, contented, happy. Their voices sing praise for Republican intelligence and Republican patriotism, mingled with the fall of the coal measures and the ring of the implements of industry.

"Of every railroad line, from the Pacific shore to the coast, tens of thousands of laden cars mingle the voice of machinery with the indorsement of Republican action.

"The happy husbandman, upon millions of acres of fertile soil, as he returns from his labor, bringing his sheaves with him, realizes in an advancing market wider demands for his products, the entering of a jubilee, and his voice is heard in perpetual argument in favor of sound money and protection.

"The scratch of the pen upon the record in the Northwest and the Southwest as it cancels the millions of mortgages placed there in the hour of Democratic distress and starvation, now canceled by the payment of money that has come to the owners of these splendid farms through the intelligence and patriotism of Republican administration, joins in the grand cry of indorsement all along the line. As in the olden time the morning stars sang together for joy and all the sons of Gad rejoiced, so from Maine to California, from the North to the South, from the East to the West, the sons of toil, the sons of business, the sons of America, join in the glad shout that drowns the feeble voice of partisan speculation and partisan denunciation in the grand, glorious, ringing chorus of a redeemed and happy nation." [Great Republican applause.]

NEWLANDS IN OPPOSITION.

Mr. Newlands (Silver, Nev.,) followed Mr. Grosvenor in opposition to the bill. He traced the history of the country through the period of depression commencing in 1893, contending that the panic was not caused by the coinage of silver under the Sherman act. He said the increase of prosperity during the past two years demonstrates the correctness of the theory entertained by bimetallists, viz., that all other things being equal, prices will depend upon the quantity of money in circulation; that an increase of the money volume meant higher prices and a diminution of the money volume meant lower prices.

Mr. Shafroth, (Silver, Col.,) in opposing the bill, argued that at the foundation of the prosperity in the Harrison Administration, the depression during the Cleveland Administration, and the prosperity under the present Administration lay the supply of basic money. During the Harrison Administration the Sherman Purchasing act added $4,000,000 a month to the supply, the repeal of that law at the beginning of the Cleveland Administration brought disaster, and the great increase in gold production and the consequent increase in basic money accounted for the prosperity under the present Administration.

Mr. Parker, (Rep., N. J.,) in support of the bill, argued that the pending question should not be a party one, and he welcomed those of the other side who were to unite with the Republicans in crystallizing into law the declaration that the existing gold standard should be made permanent.

Mr. William Alden Smith (Rep., Mich.,) spoke in advocacy of the bill. The steady growth of the circulation during the past three and a half years, aggregating $476,000,000, gave the lie to the advocates of free silver. Our commerce with gold standard countries last year aggregated $1,600,000,000, with silver countries $139,000,000; how idle it would be, then, to jeopardize that commerce by going to a silver basis!

Mr. Prince, (Rep., Ill.,) who was a member of the Banking and Currency Committee in the last Congress, presented a careful argument in favor of the bill.

SAYS GOLD IS SCARCE.

Mr. Cochran (Dem., Mo.,) opposed the bill in a vigorous speech in which he contended that the real question presented by the pending bill was whether there was sufficient gold in the world upon which to pyramid the vast and constantly increasing volume of credit. He referred to the recent dispatches from London showing the struggle for gold all over Europe, and declared that the gold importations during the McKinley Administration had produced the gold famine abroad. There was not enough gold to do the business of the world. The importation of gold to pay for the surplus crops exported to supply the failure of crops abroad, Mr. Cochran claimed, had quickened trade and had produced the prosperity of which the Republicans boasted to-day. He warned the Republicans that when the stock of gold declined the prosperity of to-day would crumble like a house of cards. In the course of his speech, when Mr. Cochran reiterated Mr. Bryan's famous declaration concerning the crown of thorns and cross of gold the Republicans cheered derisively.

CLAIMS WAGES ARE LOW.

Mr. Sims, (Dem., Tenn.,) in opposition to the bill, said that under the existing prosperity wages did not average more than 10 per cent. above the panic level, while the price of manufactured goods had increased 100 per cent.

Mr. Powers (Rep., Vt.,) supported the bill. His only criticism of it was that it was not drastic enough. If he could have his way, when a greenback was redeemed it should not be reissued.

Mr. Lawrence (Rep., Mass.,) closed the debate for the day with an argument in favor of the bill.

Upon Mr. Cannon's motion a resolution was adopted directing the Speaker to appoint a committee of ten to join the committees appointed by the President and Senate to prepare plans for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the first Congress held in Washington.

Owing to the pressure for opportunity to speak on the Democratic side, Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, asked that night sessions be held for the remainder of the week, but this was demurred to, and it was finally agreed that night sessions for debate should be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) announced the death of Representative Danford of Ohio, and at 5 o'clock, as a further mark of respect, the House adjourned.

POLL OF NEW YORK DEMOCRATS

Ten Said to Favor the Currency Bill, While Six Are Slated to Vote Against It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—When the Currency bill comes to a vote in the House of Representatives it is expected that the Democrats of the New York delegation will give it a vote of at least 10. Before the discussion began a few strong sound-money men began to work to assure a vote creditable to the delegation and the constituencies they represent. Some opposition was felt at first, but a resolute determination to act in conformity with the people who elected them has encouraged those who would not take the advice of the few, and the effect of the outspoken attitude of the opponents of free silver will be revealed in the vote.

A canvass made to-day makes it appear that the Democrats will vote as follows: For the bill—Townsend Scudder, First District; John J. Fitzgerald, Second District; Edmund H. Driggs, Third District; Bertram T. Clayton, Fourth District; Frank E. Wilson, Fifth District; Nicholas Muller, Seventh District; Jefferson M. Levy, Thirteenth District; William Astor Chanler, Fourteenth District; Jacob Ruppert, Jr., Fifteenth District; John Q. Underhill, Sixteenth District—10.

Against the bill—Daniel J. Riordan, Eighth District; Thomas J. Bradley, Ninth District; William Sulzer, Eleventh District; George B. McClellan, Twelfth District; William H. Ryan, Thirty-second District—6.

Up to this afternoon no member of the delegation had been able to ascertain how Mitchell May, representing the Sixth District, will vote. He has reserved his declaration, and cannot be claimed by either side. About the same may be said of M. H. Glynn of the Twentieth District, formerly represented by that active sound-money man, Charles Tracey. Mr. Glynn is being urged by these men, who argue that a vote for the bill may prejudice the chances of those who support it when the time comes for a renomination.

The members who intend to support the bill are of the opinion that it is safer to take chances with their constituents on the side of the bill than against it. They are not sure but that before the next nominations are made the question of a silver standard will be so thoroughly discarded that a man suspected of devotion to it will be in danger at the polls after he has won a nomination. The minority of the delegation will not ask for a caucus unless they wish to secure a solid Democratic vote for the bill.

A caucus that would dispose of that problem would compel Mr. Sulzer and the other silver men to vote against their silver convictions, so the ten are not likely to be molested by the six.

DID REPUBLICANS LOSE A POINT?

Democrats Assert that They Did on the Currency Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Some of the Democrats of the House are repeating a criticism said to have been made to-day by one of their leaders that the Republicans threw away a trick by not taking the Currency bill into a committee composed in part of Democrats, and thus lodging upon the opposition minority the task of reporting a minority bill. This course, it is asserted, would have developed the Democratic division in a very striking way, and furnished the Republicans with material to illustrate the inability of the Democrats to unite on any policy except that of opposition to the Republicans.

"That sounds like a very clever criticism," said a Republican who served on the caucus committee that reported the Currency bill, "but it is not at all smart. The Republicans do not all agree about what should be done with the currency. If we had waited upon a committee of the House to frame a bill we might have got along more smoothly than we could have done in the last Congress, when it was impossible to secure an agreement upon anything, but there would not have been the prompt and unanimous action secured by the method adopted.

"No; the regrets of the Democrats are foolish and vain. We have a bill in the House, and it will be passed as soon as the tide of eloquence has ebbed. By following the course now recommended by the Democratic gossips we should have been obliged to wait until after the announcement of the regular committees before taking the subject up in its preparatory steps. All that has been avoided, and the Democrats know it. We shall have the bill passed long before Christmas."

BRYAN OPPOSES CURRENCY BILL

Says It Is a Bad Measure and Should Be Defeated.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 12.—In an interview to-day William Jennings Bryan expressed himself upon the financial bill now before the House. He said:

"Following in the line of the President's message, Congress is at present considering a bill that is an extremely bad measure. I refer to the financial bill now under discussion in the House. This bill is a very bad one indeed. It is a part of the gold standard people's plan, and I hope that it will be defeated. It should certainly never be permitted to pass the House, because it is not in the interest of Democracy."

POWER TO FIX RAILWAY RATES.

Senator Cullom Introduces a Bill to control Inter-State Traffic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Cullom to-day introduced in the Senate a comprehensive bill for the amendment of the law creating the Inter-State Commerce Commission. The bill is in most respects similar to the Cullom bill of the last Congress for the same purpose, but it has been changed in several minor particulars. The main features of the proposed measure are as follows:

The commission is authorized after hearing a case to make an order directing the carrier to desist from the violation found, and also to "prescribe in such order the thing which the carrier is required to do or not to do for the future to bring itself into conformity with the act," and in so doing the commission is given power to fix maximum rates, to fix both a maxium and a minimum rate or differential in rates when necessary to prevent discrimination; to determine the divisions of a joint rate between connecting carriers and the terms and conditions under which business shall be interchanged when necessary to the enforcement of the act; to make changes in classification, and to amend the rules and regulations under which traffic is moved. The commission now has no power in any case to fix rates for future observance by railroad companies.

The bill makes the order of the commission effective within the time specified, which ordinarily shall not be less than thirty days. Any carrier may within thirty days begin proceedings in the United States Circuit Court for a review of the order. Either party may appeal directly to the Supreme Court, and the case is to have precedence in the courts. If the court upholds the order, or if the order becomes effective otherwise, the carrier must obey it or be subject to forfeiture of $5,000 for each offense, and for every day it continues in default. If additional evidence is found necessary in court, the court must direct the commission to take it and make a supplementary report. The orders of the commission now are not effective until it brings suit in the court to enforce them, and the delays involved frequently extend over periods of years.

The bill also further provides that the commission shall make and establish a uniform classification. The long and short haul clause is made an absolute prohibition except upon leave granted by the commission. Large penalties are provided against carriers in case of departure from the published rate. The imprisonment feature is eliminated from the act, and shippers are not liable for any offense except false billing or other fraudulent practice. A forfeiture is imposed upon carriers for failure to file annual reports before Sept. 30 of each year. The commission is authorized to prescribe the form of accounts and to inspect the books of carriers, and it may employ special agents or examiners, who shall have authority, under the order of the commission, to inspect and examine such accounts.

BILLS PRESENTED IN THE HOUSE.

Chief Among Them Is One to Loan Money on Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Representative Sibley (Dem., Penn.,) to-day introduced a bill providing that any holder of United States bonds may deposit them in the Treasury and receive 80 per cent. of the face of such bonds in Treasury notes, with a certificate of deposit covering such bonds. The Treasury notes are to be receivable the same as National banknotes. During the deposit of the bonds they shall not draw interest, and they may be withdrawn on presentation of the certificate of deposit and notes equal to the amount deposited.

Other bills introduced: By Mr. Grout, (Rep., Vt.,) making oleomargarine subject to the laws of the States to which it is shipped and increasing the tax on oleomargarine colored to imitate butter to 10 per cent. per pound.

By Mr. Wadsworth, (Rep., N. Y.,) for a reorganization of the Weather Bureau and the establishment of a system of appointment, promotion, and retirement.

NEW MEASURES IN THE SENATE.

Bills to Classify Naval Vessels and Increase Letter Carriers' Pay.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—At the instance of the Secretary of the Navy, Senator Hale (Rep., Me.,) to-day introduced a bill providing for the classification of vessels of the navy into four classes, torpedo boats excepted. The bill provides that vessels of more than 5,000 tons' displacement shall be first class, and provides for a gradation downward. First and second rate vessels are to be commanded by Captains and others by officers of lower grade.

Senator Hoar (Rep., Mass.,) reintroduced his bill of last session for the protection of song birds.

Senator McBride (Rep., Oregon,) introduced a bill increasing the pay of letter carriers, the highest salary provided being $1,200.

Senator Sullivan (Dem., Miss.,) introduced a bill for the publication of the pension roll.

Senator Spooner (Rep., Wis.,) reintroduced his bill of last Congress for a public health commission.

Senator Butler (Pop., N. C.,) reintroduced his bill for a postal savings bank and for the purchase of postal cars.

Senator Pritchard (Rep., N. C.,) introduced a Senate resolution declaring unconstitutional the amendment proposed by the Legislature of that State at its last session to the State Constitution. After reciting the proposed amendment, the resolution declares that Section 5, as proposed, is "in contravention of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and that any State that adopts such provisions as a part of its organic law does not possess a republican form of government, as contemplated by the Constitution of the United States."

TILT OVER LABOR TROUBLES.

Senators Chandler and Pettigrew Clash Concerning the Latter's Resolution on the Idaho Strike.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—At the conclusion of morning business in the Senate to-day, the resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Pettigrew, (Silver, S. D.,) reciting certain things alleged to have been done by Gen. Merriam in connection with the trouble in the Coeur d'Alene mining district, and directing the Secretary of War to transmit to the Senate all orders and information in his possession bearing upon the subject, was laid before the Senate.

Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) objected to the statements in the preamble of the resolution, and said he desired to offer a substitute which would facilitate the getting of the information.

Mr. Pettigrew declined to accept the substitute. "Although I am not certain whether my friend the Senator from New Hampshire is a Republican," said he, "I am satisfied that any substitute he may offer is pernicious, as he himself often is."

Mr. Chandler—It requires a pernicious Senator sometimes to deal with a pernicious proposition. [Laughter.]

Mr. Pettigrew—That's the reason I suppose why you are trying to deal with this.

Mr. Chandler secured the reading of his substitute, which, he pointed out, eliminated only the charges made in the original against Gen. Merriam and, in his opinion, would serve much better the purpose of Mr. Pettigrew than the original.

Mr. Pettigrew, in reply, declared that the action of Gen. Merriam was a disgrace to civilization, but he was perfectly willing that the Republican Party should take the responsibility of it.

Mr. Chandler—The Republican Party has its faults, perhaps, but I'm much more willing to remain with it since the Senator from South Dakota left it.

He then read a paragraph from Gen. Merriam's report to the War Department bearing upon the Coeur d'Alene trouble, indicating that the officer had acted with justice and discretion.

Mr. Pettigrew asked that the resolution and amendment be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

To this Mr. Hawley, (Rep., Conn.,) Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, objected, claiming it ought to be sent to his committee.

The resolution was referred finally to the Committee on Military Affairs.

NEW YORK POST OFFICE PLANS.

Bills Introduced in Congress to Provide $2,071,387 for New Building and Sub-Stations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The New York Post Office bills, framed as the result of the conference between Senator Platt, Representative Cummings, and Postmaster Van Cott of New York City, make an aggregate appropriation of $2,671,387. One directs the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase or acquire by condemnation a site for and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious Post Office building, with fire-proof vaults.

The sum appropriated for the building is $2,500,000, and the other bill appropriates $125,000 for establishing stations and substations in lieu of present independent Post Offices in Manhattan, Bronx, Richmond, Kings, and Queens, to be consolidated with the New York office, and for employes, &c., and $46,387 for letter posts and boxes throughout the city.

Senator Platt to-day introduced the two bills in the Senate.

Representative Cummings (Dem., N. Y.,) introduced in the House the same two bills.

DR. DEPEW WILL ENTERTAIN.

New York State Congressional Delegation to be His Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Depew will open his home in the Corcoran house to-morrow afternoon to receive the Senators and Representatives from the State of New York and a large number of guests who have been invited to meet them. This will be the first large entertainment given by Mr. Depew since he came to Washington as Senator.

The last large reception given in Washington by a prominent New York man in honor of another New Yorker was that by Secretary W. C. Whitney when he invited a large party to meet Gov. D. B. Hill.

Gen. Wood's Nomination Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Senate, in executive session to-day, confirmed the nominations of Leonard Wood to be Major General of Volunteers, and Herbert Putnam of Massachusetts to be Librarian of Congress.

ROBERTS PRESENTS HIS BRIEF.

Contends that Congress Can Neither Try Him for Alleged Crime Nor Deprive Him of Property.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Roberts investigating committee resumed its session at 10 o'clock to-day, but, contrary to expectation, the early proceedings were behind closed doors. This, it was explained, was to permit the committee to receive and discuss reports on procedure, form of subpoena, &c. During this time Mr. Roberts and quite a gathering of Mormons and Gentiles stood outside the committee door awaiting admission.

Mr. Roberts was prepared to continue his argument on the demurrer to the right of the committee to try him. The Gentile delegation was more numerous, including the Rev. Dr. Hitt, Mr. Schroeder, to whom Roberts interposed rather sensational objection on Saturday, and the others who have come on from Utah to direct the proceedings against him.

The committee remained in private session until noon, when an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock to-morrow, when the actual hearing of witnesses will begin.

Mr. Roberts saw Mr. Tayler as soon as the committee adjourned and submitted his brief, which is a lengthy legal argument against the rights of the committee. He urges that the Constitution gives protection against trial without due process of law; also against taking property, such as the salary of an office, without due process of law.

Mr. Roberts summarizes his points as follows:

"From the foregoing established doctrines and rights of members of Congress, it follows:

"That the proposed proceedings of this committee would be subversive of the rights of the member from Utah.

"1. In that he is to be adjudged guilty of crime without due process of law.

"2. That he is to be adjudged disqualified by disabilities created by enactments of Congress and applicable to the old Territory of Utah, but not applicable to the State of Utah, which disabilities have been removed—(a) by amnesties of two Presidents; (b) by the Enabling Act passed by Congress; (c) by the transition of Utah from Territorial condition to that of Statehood.

"3. It further appears that the crime alleged against the Representative from Utah does not constitute a disqualification for a member of Congress unless the House and its committee are prepared to assert their power and right to add to the qualifications prescribed by the Constitution of the United States.

"4. And, further, the proposed proceedings by this committee would deprive the member from Utah of the Constitutional right to a trial by a court of competent jurisdiction and by a jury of his peers within the State and district where the crime is alleged to have been committed, and would deprive him of property and rights without due process of law.

"The member from Utah, therefore, asks the committee to stop its present proceedings and consider the prima facie right of the Representative from Utah to be sworn in as a member of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-sixth Congress. The member from Utah is prepared to submit his certificate of election to the committee, his certificate of citizenship issued by a United States court of competent jurisdiction, and is ready to affirm under oath that he possesses all the qualifications prescribed by the Constitution for a Representative, and is willing to take the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution."

As to protests by certain sectarian ministers from Utah, Roberts holds that the committee ought not to consider them, for the reason that the affidavits presented by them bear dates as follows: Thomas J. Bandon, Feb. 13, 1899; Ray T. Bandon, Feb. 13, 1899; Luella P. Miles, Feb. 27, 1899; Mrs. Marie E. McDougall, May 27, 1899; all dates being several months prior to the departure of the Representative from Utah for the East. In support of this, Mr. Roberts says:

"For more than a year after the charges began to be made against him, the member from Utah was in and about Salt Lake all the time, and seven months after the Bandon affidavits were drawn up by A. T. Schroeder, and therefore said protestants had ample time to institute proceedings before the courts of Utah, which were and are open for the prosecution of the charges made in the past.

"If the protestants have sufficient evidence they should have established the guilt of the member from Utah as to the misdemeanor charged, and come here with a court record establishing their charges, although the question would still be debatable as to whether the misdemeanor alleged, if proved, would be sufficient to bar him from the House, and on that subject the member from Utah has already expressed his belief and presented argument. The member from Utah again asks that he be allowed to take the oath of office."

Will Probe Senatorial Elections.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Senate to-day authorized the Committee on Privileges and Elections to proceed with investigations of the election to the Senate of W. A. Clark of Montana and N. B. Scott of West Virginia.

Congress to Act on a Pension Fraud.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Interior Department has sent to Congress a report on a peculiar pension case, in which Magdalena, alleged wife of Jacob Cook, received a pension from 1854 to 1899 as the widow of Cook, although married to Alexander Tice in 1872. The letter states that this pensioner was convicted of perjury at Trenton, N. J., last month and sentenced to six months in the penitentiary. The papers are transmitted for action by Congress, as the pension has been paid under special act passed by that body.

Will Fix the Alaska Boundary.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Government of Great Britain has designated F. King, the Government astronomer at Ottawa, as the representative of her Majesty's Government in the delimitation of the provisional boundary line between Alaska and Canada about the head of Lynn Canal, under the terms of the modus vivendi of Oct. 20 last, and the Government of the United States has designated O. H. Tittman, Assistant Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, to act in a similar capacity for the United States.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The President to-day nominated John J. Sullivan of Ohio to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Ohio, and Joseph A. Gill of Kansas to be Judge of the United States Court of the Northern District of Indian Territory.

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The following fourth-class Postmasters were appointed to-day for New York offices: Purdy Station, R. F. White; Richmond, G. D. Sharpe.

RAILWAY DEAL IN CHINA.

Russian and French Agents Hinder the Anglo-American Plans.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Morning Post says: "We have high authority for stating that there is considerable doubt whether or not the negotiations regarding the Anglo-American railway between Han-Kow and Canton will be carried to a successful issue. The view in official circles is that the matter will stand over.

"Russian and French agents are credited with producing a change of front on the part of the Chinese."

THE KING'S BRIDGE FRANCHISE.

The Board of Directors of the Third Avenue Railroad Company held a meeting yesterday and decided to accept the terms proposed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for the King's Bridge Railroad franchise, which covers about sixteen miles of road in the northern part of the city. These terms are 4 per cent. of the gross receipts for the first five years of the term of the franchise; 6 per cent. for the second five years; 8 per cent. for the third five years, and 10 per cent. for the remainder of the term. The franchise covers twenty-five years, at the end of which term there must be a reappraisement; at the end of the fiftieth year the franchise reverts to the city.

Edward Lauterbach, counsel for the company, said last night that the terms of the Board of Estimate were accepted, not because the company considered them favorable, but because the residents of the territory involved demanded transit facilities.

Tammany Contest in the Bronx.

The Tammany Hall General Committee of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District will meet in a few days to organize for 1900, and a fight over the district leadership for the ensuing year is expected. The present leader is Commissioner of Street Cleaning James McCartney, but he will withdraw on account of illness. He desires, however, to name his successor, and prefers Senator H. H. Mitchell. There is some opposition to Senator Mitchell, and this opposition, it is said, will support Louis F. Haffen, President of the Borough of the Bronx.

Tissot's Life of Christ

Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, who succeeded to the pastorate of the Henry Ward Beecher and Lyman Abbott church in Brooklyn, in a recent sermon said of Tissot and his work: "He has unveiled The Christ as a genial, radiant figure, the most lovable person in history."

The work has been sold at a very high price, as was thought necessary to reimburse its maker and makers for its immense cost in time and money.

We popularize this

Greatest Religious Work of Modern Times

by offering it at a low price and on easy payments, to those who join The Wanamaker Tissot Club. Initial fee, $1. Monthly payments of $3—their number determined by the value of the set you choose; same work, but variously bound.

Four sumptuous volumes.

500 illustrations—a hundred and twenty-five of them exact reproductions of Tissot's paintings, almost their full size and in all their richness of coloring.

There are more carefully made plans and diagrams of the old temples than have ever been given, and the details of ancient architecture are wonderful. One architect bought the set for business reasons alone.

Ready for instant delivery when we accept your membership—your references determine that.

Of course you haven't paid a cent for these books when you get them—just the $1 club fee. You promise to pay at the rate of $3 a month.

The Book Store, Ninth street.

Flannel for Shirt Waists All "French" flannel isn't French, and there are differences of quality among the real ones. The really desirable flannels for waists are scarce. It isn't hard to find flannels, but it is hard to find "pretty ones"—which is to be translated "good colorings."

So the stocks here are appreciated and the selling is very great.

All-over-silk-embroidered French Flannels, 95c and $1 a yard.
Some embroidered with bow-knots, $1.35 a yard.
Embroidered Cashmere (polka dot), $1.25.
Plain Twilled French Flannel, 27 in. wide, 40c, 55c and 60c a yard.
The 50 inch is $1.25.

Art Goods for Gifts In the Stationery Store, near Broadway, there are three or four hundred very dainty and very odd bits of Bronze from Vienna. One of our staff picked them up last summer. There are very natural looking grasshoppers at 75c to $1.50 a piece; a fine Arab on Horseback at $23. There are Dancing Girls, and this one must be a flirt—seated so coquettishly on a settee big enough for two. The most important piece is a tiger being killed by hunters who've planned a hunting stage in the trees. $35.

There are other fine things, too—solid silver Letter Scales at $12, and plated ones at $3.50; untarnishable brass Inkstands at $3 to $10, and a group of so-called Russian Enameled Ware (really made here); silver-plated base, gilded and enameled. Seals, 75c—we engrave the proper letter—to the largest desk piece at $8.

Near Broadway.

Men's Dressing Gowns Long garments of covert cloth, whipcord or cheviot—neat neutral colorings; made up in a liberal way, with edges satin bound; big pockets; silk cord at waist. Some really button up. $10 to $18. Sizes 36 to 46-in. chest.

We've imported gowns—of heavy cloths with jacquard figures. These are bound with cloth, else are corded. They come from one of the swell dressers of men in London. $20, $22.50 and $25. Sizes 40, 42 and 44-in. chest measure.

Men's Goods, Ninth street side.

Embroidered Linens Fair linen has a charm for all women and most men, and the housewife's linen closet has always been a pride. If she has time and tact and the inclination she embroiders centre pieces and tray cloths. If she is a thoroughly sensible woman she buys the embroidered pieces ready made.

The Renaissance Tea Cloth is 45 in. square and strewn with orchids almost natural enough to wither. $75.
This one is of Flemish Lace, and the pansies are as those scattered by some loving hand. $85.
There are Centre Pieces at $11 and $15, and at $20 and $25—and more than we've told of—but not many; maybe three dozen pieces in all. Will you get one or more of them?

Main aisle.

Umbrellas for Gifts A fine, full, fair-price lot of good umbrellas, mounted with pretty handles. We don't buy umbrellas—we pick out the handles and have the umbrellas made.

Better and cheaper than the usual way.

WOMEN'S UMBRELLAS
$2.50—Silk, with pearl, ivory horn, or Dresden handles; some with sterling silver caps. 26-inch size.
$3.75—Umbrellas of better silk and more showy handles.
$5—Silk umbrellas, with full-length ivory, horn or pearl handles with silver caps; wood handles, elaborately trimmed with silver; white ivory handles, trimmed with gold.
The gun-metal handles are in high favor this season; large variety of designs; $6, $7, $7.50, $8, $10 and $12.
And yet there are umbrellas with union (silk-and-linen) covers and very pretty handles, for $1.50 and $2.

MEN'S UMBRELLAS
$2.50—Union silk umbrellas, with trimmed natural sticks or plain horn handles. 28-inch size.
$3—All-silk umbrellas, with silver-trimmed wood handles.
$3.75—All-silk umbrellas with plain horn or plain buckhorn handles; some with silver-trimmed natural sticks.
$5—All-silk, or fine and better-wearing union silk umbrellas, with elaborately silver-trimmed handles.
Handsome all-silk umbrellas with antique ivory handles, some with inlaid bands of silver, others with silver trimmings. $12.

Toys—Interesting Demonstrations Daily

Here and there, all over the toy store, demonstrations are given of the workings of certain toys that teach while amusing. Toys for embryonic architects, builders, engineers, electricians, musicians, and so on. Not tasks—real play all that we tell of below, but play that awakens ideas, cultivates ability to judge correctly, decide quickly—yet simple and full of fun.

Anchor Building Blocks—There's hardly a boy anywhere that would not be made happier, brighter, with a box of these. From the time he's able to walk up to, well—hardly a limit because grown-ups often find themselves as truly engaged as the boy. The blocks are stone tinted to represent the brick, slate and stone of real buildings. 25c a box and upwards to $8.50. Supplement boxes are obtainable any time, 25c to $3.50.

Strattan Building Blocks—From these children make their own toys. You can build an electric car, a piano, a farm wagon, a tip cart and sixteen other toys from a single set of blocks. $1 a set.

Fun with Electricity—Complete apparatus with book of instructions for 60 experiments. Price, 50c.

Fun with Magnetism—Book of instructions and box of apparatus for 61 experiments. 25c.

Deweylin Harp—But very little practice required to produce really excellent music from these instruments, or combination of instruments, for mandolin, guitar and zither effects are all possible in the Deweylin Harp. $4.50 to $18.

Simplex Typewriters—You'll be surprised to see what excellent work can be done with these little inexpensive machines. $1 to $5.

Then there are crokinole boards, at 75c instead of $1.50—a lot of them here to-day. And Kinetoscopes at $3. Reversible tops, self-winding, at 10c. And various bubble blowers at 10c each.

Lots more to tell of—but you come and see them. Basement.

Women's Silk Stockings—Reduced

We counted up over seven hundred styles of stockings, not long ago, nd didn't worry, for it has been our aim year after year to fetch to merica some of every worthy style that Germany, France and England are to make for us or share with us. To be sure, there is some loss in he business—just now we find eighty-one styles that haven't sold fast nough, probably because they were half forgot among the many sorts.

This morning at 9 o'clock they go on sale—

Fifteen kinds at $1.50 that were $2.25 to $4. Some white, some black; all-over lace or embroidered.
Forty-eight kinds at $2.50 that were $3.50 to $7.50—mostly black—lace or open work or embroidered; a few colored plaids.
Thirteen styles at $5 that were $9 and $10. Black and colors.
Five styles at $10 that were $12, $15 and $20. Very elegant; some in opera length.

And these Bicycle Hose, for men and women—

25c a pair; were a dollar—four hundred and seventy-nine pairs; 20 styles.
50c a pair; were $1.50 to $3—two hundred and twenty-five pairs; 13 styles.

KILLED IN DEATH IN MEXICO.

Newark Mining Engineer Believed to Have Fallen Into a Canyon.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—Bede Voigt of 204 Fairmount Avenue has received word that his son, Gustave K. Voigt, a mining engineer, died at Monterey, Mexico, yesterday from injuries received by a fall Dec. 6.

The message was from the Mexican Land Company, by whom young Voigt was employed.

Voigt, who was twenty-six years old, and a graduate of Lafayette College, on Oct. 20 secured a position with the company to erect machinery at its mines in the mountains near Monterey. Three letters, dated Dec. 5, were received by his relatives here yesterday, in which he said he had to travel on muleback among the mountains along ledges that served for paths and were so narrow that only in a few places could two persons pass. On one hand the mountains towered high above and on the other was a cañon 200 feet deep.

Soon after reaching the mines he had a narrow escape. He was going along one of those ledges, when a car laden with ore rolled down the incline toward him. The mule he was riding took fright and leaped to one side. Voigt was thrown and fell on the path, but the mule missed its footing and went clattering down into the cañon 250 feet below. Voigt's parents think that a similar accident befell him this time, and that he fell into some cañon.

Voigt was named as co-respondent in proceedings for divorce recently instituted by Fred Waldman, a theatrical manager of this city, against his wife.

REPUBLICAN CLUBS' MEETING.

St. Paul Decided Upon as the Place for the Next Annual Convention.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Executive Committee of the National League of Republican Clubs met here to-day for the purpose of deciding upon a city for holding the next convention of the league. The chair was occupied by President George Stone of San Francisco, and the roll call showed forty-four members present, the largest number on record at such a meeting.

The claims of cities which are anxious to entertain the next annual convention were heard. Delegates from St. Paul and Sioux Falls presented the advantages of those cities. After listening also to the claims of Galveston and Indianapolis, St. Paul was chosen as the place for holding the next meeting, receiving 28 votes to 3 for Indianapolis, and 16 for Sioux Falls. The date of the convention was fixed for the third Tuesday in July.

On motion of Mr. Myers of New Jersey, a resolution was unanimously adopted reciting that in the death of Vice President Hobart the league had lost a warm friend and supporter, the Senate a wise and impartial presiding officer, and the Nation has suffered an irreparable loss.

To-day's session was rather an informal one, the main feature being a discussion of the repeal of Article 13 of the league's constitution, which prohibits it from endeavoring to influence the nomination of any candidate or the adoption of any policy by any State or National Convention. L. J. Crawford of Kentucky offered a resolution providing that a committee of five be appointed to present to the next National Convention of the league a revision of the constitution and by-laws, to incorporate into such revision an article providing for revenues so that the league may be self-sustaining, and to take into consideration whether the league's interest would be best conserved by embodying in its constitution the right to declare its preference for particular party policies and to criticise, if necessary, acts of public officials.

PAUPERS AND THE BALLOT.

Criminal Case on Trial Involving Their Right to Vote.

Justice Werner, in the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, convened by the Governor to try election fraud cases, heard yesterday the case of the first of the thirty-odd men who voted from Bellevue Hospital and the Municipal Lodging House. Gustav Neuhaus, who was placed on trial, worked in the Municipal Lodging House prior to election for his board. He was defended by Howe & Hummel.

Special Deputy Attorney General Rogers, who appeared for the people, called attention at the opening of the case to the practice of voting paupers in this city. When the State rested its case Mr. Hummel asked that the jury be instructed to acquit the prisoner on the ground that two decisions rendered by Justice Bookstaver covered the case. The two decisions referred to were in cases in which mandamuses were issued by the court compelling the Inspectors of Elections to let men vote who were situated similarly to Neuhaus.

Justice Werner declined to be bound by Justice Bookstaver's decisions. "There seems to me to be a very manifest distinction between the case before me and the ones mentioned by you," said he. "I do not think under the circumstances that this court should be bound by them."

The trial of the case will be continued to-day.

Only Eighty-three Soldiers' Votes Cast

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—In the presence of Col. Fred C. Ham, representing the Republican State Committee, and Melville A. Harris for the Democratic State Committee, Secretary of State John T. McDonough to-day opened the soldiers' vote cast at the recent election. It was found that only 83 ballots had been cast. Of the number Kings County has the most, with Monroe County second. The ballots were sent to the County Clerks of the various counties, who will transfer them to the Boards of Supervisors to canvass.

Long Branch People's Ticket Wins.

LONG BRANCH, Dec. 12.—There was a municipal election here to-day, to which the People's ticket was successful. Benjamin P. Morris, a lawyer, headed the ticket for Commissioner at Large, and this has always carried with it the election as President of the municipality.

BEET SUGAR IN MICHIGAN.

Companies Earned $00,000 in Three Months if Bounty Law Holds.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Detroit reports of the beet sugar companies operating in Michigan for September, October, and November show that during these months 85,936 tons and 1,300 pounds of beets were received and 9,663,826 pounds of sugar produced.

This means that if the bounty law of 1897 is held constitutional, the companies have already earned $00,333 this year from the State.

Gov. Pingree has been presented with a petition from the sugar beet growers of Bay County saying they are discriminated against as to the weight allowed by the manufacturers.

Albany's Public Works Commissioner.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—The incoming Republican city administration has settled upon Charles M. Bissell, formerly Division Superintendent of the Harlem Division and later of the Mohawk Division of the New York Central Railroad, to be Commissioner of Public Works. He has the appointment of Superintendent of Water Works and Superintendent of Parks, has supervision over streets, public buildings and sewers, secures estimates, and looks after all contract work. His term is for two years.

Druggists Will Test Registry Law.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The Druggists' Protective Association of Chicago was incorporated at Springfield to-day. The association is said to start out with a membership of 400, and its object is mutual protection. Among other things contemplated by the association will be to test the validity of the law requiring pharmacists to register every year.

Woman Convicted of Killing Child.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Julia Brannan and Mrs. Kate Brady were convicted of manslaughter in the Criminal Court to-day and each was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. They were tried for causing the death in October of twenty-one-months old Joseph Burns. It was stated at the trial that the mother of the child left him in care of the women while she went upon an errand. While absent it was alleged that the women placed the child upon a hot stove. It was severely burned, and died a few days later at the City Hospital.

MURDER IN A LODGING-HOUSE.

Night Clerk Shot and His Assailant and Another Man Held.

James Halcrow, night clerk in the Waverley Hotel, a cheap lodging house at 302 Eighth Avenue, was murdered there at 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning by Martin Sweeney, who occasionally stopped at the house. Halcrow was shot three times in the breast, and died before the arrival of an ambulance from Roosevelt Hospital.

The police were unable to learn positively what led to the shooting. It was at first supposed that Sweeney demanded a room without having the money to pay for it, and was refused by Halcrow. Sweeney was accompanied by a man who said he was Neil Cody of 102 West Twenty-ninth Street. Sweeney and Cody were taken to Police Headquarters, and afterward to the West Side Police Court. After hearing the story of the shooting, Magistrate Olmsted committed the men to the Coroner. It is the belief of the police now that the murder was committed for the purpose of robbery.

Chief Devery has been looking up the records of the two men. The man who gave the name of Cody was ascertained to be Neal J. Coakley, who is a well-known crook of Boston. His picture is 3,210 in the Rogues' Gallery. In 1893 he was arrested by Inspector Cogan of the Boston police and sentenced to the House of Correction. Nothing is known about Sweeney except that he is a frequenter of the Tenderloin. The pictures of both men have been taken for the Rogues' Gallery.

Halcrow was thirty years old, and is said to have had a wife and family living in Hoboken. He had been employed in the lodging house for nine months. The place is run by Bartirme & Co., who own a number of lodging houses in the city.

CONSOLIDATED GAS ROBBERY.

Company Loses $633 and Is Looking for a Missing Cashier.

Capt. McCluskey of the Detective Bureau is on the look-out for W. H. Esau, a former assistant cashier of the Consolidated Gas Company, who disappeared Thanksgiving Day, and whose departure immediately preceded the discovery that $633 was missing from the safe, to which he had access. He has been traced as far as Philadelphia.

Esau is an Englishman, the son of a London clergyman. He had been in the employ of the Consolidated Gas Company for fifteen years, and had never before been suspected of any sort of dishonesty. "Esau got a salary of at least $1,200," said Mr. Gawtry, President of the company, yesterday. "On Thanksgiving Day, when our offices were closed, he went around to the branch where he was employed, at Third Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, and got the janitor to let him in, on the plea that he had some work to do. That was the last seen of him, and the next day it was found that $633 was missing from the safe, of which the cashier and Esau, the assistant cashier, had the combination. We also found that he had suddenly packed up his belongings at his boarding house in this borough on Thanksgiving afternoon and made off. He was bonded by the Fidelity and Casualty Company for $5,000, so that the Consolidated Gas Company loses nothing."

The Inspectors of the Fidelity and Casualty Company as well as Central Office detectives are trying to find Esau. It was learned yesterday that Esau had been drinking rather heavily Thanksgiving morning.

THOMAS B. REED A MEMBER.

Ex-Speaker Admitted, with Others, to the Bar Association.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

New Locomotives for the Southern.

The Southern Railway Company has just placed an order with the Richmond Locomotive and Machine Works of Richmond, Va., for forty-one locomotives, aggregating in value over $000,000, as follows: Four ten-wheeled passenger locomotives, weighing in working order 134,000 pounds; four ten-wheeled passenger locomotives, weighing in working order 136,000 pounds; two ten-wheeled passenger locomotives, weighing in working order 134,500 pounds; six consolidation freight locomotives, weighing in working order 142,500 pounds, and twenty-five consolidation freight locomotives, weighing in working order 151,500 pounds.

Trunk Line Association Meeting.

The Passenger Committee of the Trunk Line Association yesterday considered a request from agents who handle the Western passenger traffic in connection with outgoing steamships, recommending that free transfers from the cars to the steamers be furnished by the railroad companies, inasmuch as the Boston lines, which alone had been furnishing these free transfers, have withdrawn their arrangement. The committee decided not to accede to the request, which has never found favor with the association.

Long Island Railroad Extension.

It was said yesterday that the Wading River Branch of the Long Island Railroad will be extended to the main line at some point between Manor and Mattituck, probably the latter. To reach Mattituck it will pass through Rattig Hollow and Northville. It is possible the road may be continued to Good Ground and Riverhead, connecting the north shore with the main line and the south shore road.

Sioux City and Northern Railway Sold

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Dec. 12.—The Sioux City and Northern Railroad was sold under foreclosure to-day for $1,500,000 to William and Robert Tod of the firm of J. Kennedy Tod & Co. of New York.

Long Perth Amboy Land Fight Ends.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Dec. 12.—A long fight between the City of Perth Amboy and the heirs of William T. Meredith was ended by a compromise last night. The city has made many attempts in the last twenty years to open Railroad Avenue through the property of the Merediths. Every time the matter has been carried to the courts and the plans of the city rejected. The Aldermen were told that the sum of $2,500 would be accepted for the land, and the offer was promptly accepted by the city.

A PRACTICAL INNOVATION

A Clever and Helpful Convenience Welcomed by All.

Few business innovations of the past have been so clever or so quickly adopted as that recently instituted by an enterprising clothing and furnishing goods store down town. The house is exceedingly popular. Their wares have an immense range, and all at very moderate prices. The firm in question is Maduro Bros. & Co., of Nos. 112 and 114 Nassau street, in the fine building recently erected by ex-Governor Morton. The arched entrance leads directly to their attractive warerooms. Said a gentleman recently: "I have a locker there, and, for instance, last Thursday evening my wife came down because I couldn't leave business till late, and had engaged tickets for the theatre. I live in Harlem, and otherwise I would have had to give up either theatre or business. By 6:30 I'd left my wife in Maduro's well-appointed store. I got my dress suit and a complete change from my locker, took a bath, a shave, and a shine, and at 7:45 we were on our way. My everyday suit? Oh, that they'd sent home for me, after cleaning and pressing, as I desired them to do so. And the service is very inexpensive."

The common impression might be that high prices rule at this place. An error. Its popularity is due to the moderate prices appended to everything. Nevertheless, the class of its patronage is very high.

eclares to Charge a Man with Unchastity Is Libelous.

STICE GARRETSON REVERSED

ppellate Division Says His Decision in Suit of Abbe Against Abbe Is Preposterous.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme art, Brooklyn, yesterday passed upon the ingle standard " of morality as a matter law in the suit brought by Richard F. be against his brother, Max F. Abbe, to over $10,000 damages for alleged libel. s libel consisted of statements contained a letter written by the defendant and t by him to another man. In this letter was stated that the plaintiff had boasted intimacy with the wife of the man who eived the letter. The defendant, through counsel, filed a demurrer, holding that charge a man with unchastity was not elous. This demurrer was sustained by stice Garretson of the Supreme Court.

The Appellate Division reversed Justice rretson's decision and directed judgment the plaintiff. The defendant, however, leave to withdraw his demurrer, and, on payment of costs, to answer within nty days.

The brief of the defendant's counsel, Mr. nslow of Towns & McCrossin, which the art received with ill-disguised senti- nts, read in part:

Not a case exists where an allegation of re unchastity concerning a man, not mpled with any violation of statute law to its mode of commission, is libelous. requirement of chastity as to men, ex- t they are priests, exists in any State on th by law, nor in any code of ethics or ligion. All codes of ethics, except those women's rights, advocates and disciples Fourier and Mary Wollstonecraft, re- re chastity of women, but not of men.

* * If the defendant committed any or in writing the letter in question it was offense against the sense of propriety of fashionable world or 'smart set,' so led.

All aristocracies make unchastity in a sine qua non of good fellowship. All al families have been full of it. There is has been no Church or voluntary asso- tion of men in the world, except the akers in modern times and the Essenes in ancient world, which pledges its male mbers to chastity as a condition of ad- ssion, or makes unchastity a ground of fellowship or expulsion.

All public men in America, with one or exceptions, have practiced it more or notoriously. The people of the United tes unhesitatingly elected to the Presi- cy a man whose unchastity was by him- admitted. It is popularly deemed some- ng that uniformly accompanies the suc- sful, tactful, powerful, conquering classes men. Hence the mere charge of unchas- per se against a man does not bring into public hatred, ridicule, or con- pt, but merely classifies him as an aver- man, having a leaning, if anything, to- rd aristocratic or fashionable life."

These sentiments were bitterly attacked Charles A. Webber, counsel for plaintiff want of chastity in our public men," said, "has always been condemned by American people. Even now, while the endant's counsel is claiming the contrary be the fact, the people and the press of whole country are agitated over the stion as to whether a Mormon shall be wed to take a seat in Congress, to which is not denied he was duly elected.

But my learned opponent must go fur- r and allege: 'It is popularly deemed mething that uniformly accompanies the ccessful, tactful, powerful, conquering ses of men.' Oh, what a proclamation make publicly! What a doctrine to pre- t to our children! It is as vile as it is meless, false, and rash. It is depraved, ked, villainous. And yet it is made in hristian court.

What an awful indictment he brings inst that higher strata, against wealth fashion. But I care not whether it be e or false. I care not how they view hastity. The common people are the mmunity, the indictment must be against m, and it must be proved that they so ard unchastity.

Is this court going to make the formal nouncement that in this community we e so degenerated in morals that chastity man is neither expected nor demanded does not in fact exist? From the pul- s of nearly a hundred Catholic churches this borough this very month hundreds zealous missionaries will address one- rd of this vast community and thunder inst unchastity in no uncertain terms. Catholic circles, at least, there is no rge more despised or that will lower a n more."

You say that this demurrer was sus- ned?" asked Justice Cullen of Mr. Web- .

I do," was the reply.

That is preposterous," remarked Justice rtlett. " There is no use in arguing here t to charge a man with unchastity is not lous per se."

The discussion was brought to an end by esiding Justice Goodrich, who asked: Does counsel for the defendant suppose s court will hold that the morals of this mmunity are such that it is not libelous se to charge a man with unchastity? will decide this case on the spot." The ision given above was then made.

STORM STRIKES THE CITY.

ch Wind, but Little Rain—Damage to Telegraph Lines.

The wind and rain which came upon New rk yesterday morning were concomitants but the edge of a big storm which for n days has been moving up the Missis- pi Valley and had yesterday morning ched Northern Michigan. The wind here me from the south and sent the mercury sing up the thermometric tube, but so d was the blow that it gave the rain the earance of being much heavier than it s.

The rain began to fall at 8:15 A. M. and sed at 1:15 P. M. The fall of water, as cially measured by the Weather Bureau rk, was but .12 of an inch. The velocity the wind was from forty to fifty miles st of the forenoon, but it reached a max- um of fifty-five miles at 11 o'clock. It iled to the southwest in the afternoon l fell off, until at nightfall it was blow- only eight miles an hour.

The telegraph companies suffered consid- ble damage from the storm in the West. th the Western Union and Postal Tele- aph were from two to three hours late in ting through dispatches.

Mrs. Thomas Recognized by the Congress of Religions.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Thomas, wife of the Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, will be given recognition as a preacher by the Congress of Religions, which opened this evening at Sinai Temple.

Following this she is to be ordained at the People's Church next Sunday, and will take her place regularly in the pulpit in Chicago and elsewhere after the ceremony. The decision to make the ordination was agreed upon by the prominent clergymen who have charge of the Congress of Religions.

REESE RELEASED UNDER BONDS.

Returns to the Coal Fields, Where He Was Arrested for Contempt.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Dec. 12.—John P. Reese, National Executive Committeeman of the United Mine Workers, who has been in jail here under commitment from the Federal court for contempt, was released yesterday under the writ of habeas corpus recently issued in St. Louis by Judge Thayer. The necessary $3,000 bonds was provided by Topeka bankers.

Mr. Reese returned at once to the coal fields, where he was arrested, declaring that he would pursue the course he was following when arrested for contempt.

BANK OFFICERS LOSE SUIT.

LIMA, Ohio, Dec. 12.—A verdict for $18,000 was returned against N. L. Michael and Gus Kalb, Vice President and Cashier of the American National Bank, to-day, by the jury in the suit brought by the Board of Directors.

The bank was mysteriously robbed in December of last year, the time lock being found set and running, but the vault doors were open when the bank was opened on a Monday morning. The defendants testified that the doors were closed and locked Saturday night, but experts swore this to be an impossibility. The suit was brought on the ground of negligence.

TO COUNT THE SOLDIER VOTE.

Corporation Counsel Holds that the Country Is at War.

The Board of County Canvassers held a meeting yesterday, at which the question of the validity of the votes of soldiers and sailors engaged in the suppression of the Philippine rebellion was considered. Some time ago the canvassers requested an opinion from Corporation Counsel Whalen in regard to these votes, and this opinion was read at yesterday's session. The Corporation Counsel, after quoting the Constitution and the State laws to show that in time of war men engaged in the service of the United States shall not be deprived of the right of suffrage, says:

"The question is whether the hostilities now going on in the Philippines constitute a state of war. If the question were an original one, I should be very strongly inclined to hold that there was no war at this time, and there can be no question but that the United States Government has contended, and does still contend that the hostilities in the Philippines are not a war at all, but a mere insurrection. In this view the Government is clearly right, from an international standpoint, and as between the United States and other powers the courts would doubtless hold that there is no state of war.

"But as between the Government and its own citizens the question presents a somewhat different aspect, and, whatever might be the leogical or theoretical conclusion to be reached upon the question, in the absence of authority, I must hold that for the purposes of this act we are 'in time of war.' The answer to your question, therefore, must be that it is the duty of the Board of County Canvassers to canvass the vote cast by the soldiers and sailors who were duly qualified under the statute at the last election."

The board then adjourned to Dec. 22, when, it is hoped, the returns of the soldiers and sailors' votes will be on hand.

BROOKLYN'S WATER SUPPLY.

Plan to Afford Temporary Relief—Decrease in Rainfall.

Deputy Commissioner of Water Supply Moffett of Brooklyn, whose department is in a serious plight just now, is exercising every effort to relieve the water supply situation in that borough. He has devised a plan designed to afford temporary relief to householders. The plan provides for high pressure for the elevated parts of the borough, and a reduction of the pressure for the lower levels, so that water shall not be wasted. Pumping engines will furnish the extra pressure for the higher elevations.

"I will ask Commissioner Dalton," said Mr. Moffett, "to urge the Board of Public Improvements that $10,000,000 be spent, if necessary, to provide Brooklyn with a water plant large enough for the needs of the borough. The proposed forty-eight-inch main from Milburn to Spring Creek, for one thing, is of the most pressing necessity."

In connection with the laying of this proposed conduit, Mr. Moffett advocates the repairing of the Milburn, or, as it is better known, the Freel Reservoir. For the past six years or so this reservoir has not been in use, it having leaked badly from the time of its completion. It is estimated that it would cost about $400,000 to put it in condition for use.

The report of the Department of Water Supply for Brooklyn for the quarter ended June 30 was published yesterday. It says the rainfall at the Hempstead storage reservoir, which is the centre of the Long Island watershed, was only 5.47 inches, as against 13.55 for the quarter ended in June, 1898.

At the same time the consumption of water from the Ridgewood system increased from 91,051,000 gallons a day in April to 93,234,000 in May and 95,277,000 in June. The natural effect of the enormous increase was to diminish the pressure on higher ground.

Rain Helps Westchester Reservoirs.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 12.—The long-hoped-for rain came to the relief of water reservoirs and cisterns throughout Westchester County to-day, greatly to the satisfaction of the various water companies, which were afraid the draught would continue until everything froze and left the reservoirs half full. There had been no rain to amount to anything for weeks.

AN ANTI-CIGARETTE ORDER.

Southern Railway Men in South Carolina Must Give Them Up.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—A general order has been circulated by the Southern Railway applicable only to the South Carolina Division, that all employes of the company must stop using cigarettes or resign their positions, and that in future no one will be employed who smokes cigarettes.

Assistant General Passenger Agent Hardwick says the order may soon be made applicable to all the different branches of the road. The order issued by the South Carolina Department is an ironclad rule, and applies to all the departments of the line throughout the State.

GREW WEALTHY BY SWINDLING.

Many Women Sent Small Sums to Heber for Samples of Silk.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Walter T. Heber, arrested here to-day charged with using the mails for fraudulent purposes, confessed before United States Commissioner Humphrey that he had grown wealthy through his swindling operations.

Post Office Inspector Stuart has received scores of complaints, mostly from women, which indicate that Heber operated through the mails in every part of the country. He advevrtised extensively, offering to send 500 samples of silk and other articles upon receipt of 25 cents. As an extra inducement he guaranteed to reproduce, in oil, photographs sent him by customers.

When arrested numerous photographs were found, and his mail on the day of his capture contained nearly $200 in sums from 25 cents to $3. Among the aliases under which he operated were the following: A. T. Burnie, F. L. Tolman, George T. True, L. Fauman, and Hayden. The authorities believe Heber is also an assumed name.

Tried to Burn His Grocery Store.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—Ike Woffa, who keeps a grocery store at the West End, this city, was arrested early this morning while in the act of setting fire to a quantity of paper, which had been saturated with kerosene, in his store. The building, a four-story brick structure, is owned by Myer Rosnosky. Several families live in the upper stories.

James M. Croft, who was a Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant of the First Montana Volunteers in the early fighting in the Philippines, is making a visit to friends in the East. The matter of the army ration being under discussion, Lieut. Croft said that the experience of the men of his regiment had been to verify the fact that in quality and quantity the army ration is satisfactory in every way. Talks he had had with officers in the armies of other nations had led him to the conclusion that it is "the best ration on earth." He agrees with Col. Smart in his claim made in the letter to THE TIMES, published on Sunday, that the flexibility and elasticity of the ration makes it all that can be desired when the men learn how it can be used to the best advantage. He heard comparatively few complaints while the men were in camp or on the march, after they had learned how to burnish their rations and exchange them for other food not on the regular army bill of fare. Speaking of the various commanders of the army in the Philippines, he said that Gen. Arthur MacArthur is the ideal soldier of them all, and that the admiration of the men under him for their commander is little short of idolatry. He is always the courteous, high-bred gentleman, easy of approach and ready to listen to his men and alleviate their troubles when these have a good foundation. "There is not a man in the Philippines who has had to do with him but would follow him to the ends of the islands if he expressed a desire to go there," he said.

Women seem to have decided that a very proper thing for a Christmas present for their male friends this year is a bath robe, judging from the demand for them at all stores where women trade. Some of those shown this year are not only rich in color but in materials, being made of brocaded silks and rich and soft woolen goods. One needs a fat pocketbook to get the best of these handsome ones, for the prices for them run from $15 to $35, and even higher.

One of the finest bits of turf on Riverside Drive before the Dewey Day parade was that elliptical-shaped stretch on the little bluff running from Ninety-seventh to One Hundred and Third Street and between Riverside Avenue and the Drive. In about the middle of it the reviewing stand for the orphan children was erected. That stand was one of the last removed. It had been built in such a way that the weight of the thousands of youngsters who watched the parade from it had forced the small timbers used as foundations through the rich turf, cutting deep ruts and making ridges that will remain for some time to come. That plot will never again be so splendid a feast for the eye of those who ride along the drive as it was last Summer. Men are now at work cutting walks through the turf in a half dozen different places, so that a short cuts may be furnished to pedestrians wishing to get from Riverside Avenue to the Drive itself. This has been made necessary because hundreds of people would walk across the turf on pleasant days and some of them were careless or malicious enough to mutilate the turf on every trip they made over it. The walks now building will, it is hoped, help to save the turf remaining.

Managers of many of the big dinners scheduled for the Winter are troubled to find good after-dinner speakers for their entertainments. With Mr. Choate in London, Gen. Horace Porter in Paris, and Senator Depew in Washington, it is a puzzle to find men who can restore to good humor a crowd fatigued by the efforts of the heavyweight talkers. Men who can tell funny stories and tell them well are in demand this Winter, and will be welcomed at all the dinners they care to attend.

So much of a factor has long-distance telephoning become in the transaction of business in these days that one company is now engaged in stringing a system of ten trunk line wires between this city and Boston. The route selected is as near to an air line as can be made between the two cities, and traveled highways and populous centres are being avoided, the lines being stretched across country instead. It is the purpose of the company now putting up these wires to lease them exclusively for through business between the two cities. No provision has been made to connect with the smaller cities along the right of way selected, and there will be no switchboard between here and Boston. Workmen are stringing the wires through lower New England this week. Where the Connecticut River near Middletown is crossed steel towers 185 feet in height have been raised so that the wires will not interfere with vessels moving up or down the river, and the danger of fouled cables is thus averted. Not a foot of cable will be used between the two cities.

Megaphones, which have generally been looked upon as a sort of semi-useful plaything for yachtsmen, or by announcers at bicycle races and field sports, are now being put to a thoroughly practical use by builders. Two of them are in constant use by the contractors for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, now being erected on Morningside Heights. With them a man at the top of the arches, about 150 feet above the street level, converses with the stonecutters and handlers of other materials below. So useful have these exaggerated speaking trumpets become that their general use by builders is certain to follow this innovation. Megaphones for such purposes have been found better than the telephone, as they are inexpensive, and there is no danger of their getting out of repair.

Chicago, where the changeable and reversible shirt bosom was invented, has now come out in favor of the abolition of suspenders as a necessary part of the dress of its male citizens. Its tailors recommend to their customers the use of a belt in place of the "galluses" of their grandfathers. One writer on Chicago fashions has gone so far as to say that most of the well-dressed men in the city have adopted the new fad, and find it so very agreeable that they will in the future have their dress trousers held in place with a belt instead of suspenders. That sort of thing may go in the wild West, but fashionable tailors here laugh it out of court. "I couldn't get a fit for my customers," said one of them in speaking of the latest Chicago freak yesterday, "and even if I could I couldn't get any of my customers to do away with the modest but useful suspender. Belts with knickerbockers are all right, but with any other sort a man would be in a perpetual state of hitching in order to keep his trousers in place. Possibly New Yorkers have more time in which to dress than do the young men of Chicago. It's certain they'll never get in such a hurry as to do away with their suspenders. That's a sure thing, if there ever was one. The idea is too preposterous to be seriously entertained for a moment. It must be a Chicago joke."

Trout fishermen heard with considerable pleasure yesterday that the New Jersey Fish and Game Commissioners will this week plant about 75,000 yearling trout in the streams of the northern counties of the State. The fish are now about three inches in length, and are thought to be vigorous enough to care for themselves, so that they will be ready for the hook in a couple of years. The Connecticut Commissioners, who planted about 100,000 yearling brook trout a year ago in streams in that State, have had the most favorable reports as to the result of their experiment, and will hereafter plant only yearlings or even older fish. More of them survive than when the recently hatched fish are planted to fall a prey to their many enemies.

"Car fenders really cause more accidents than they prevent," remarked one of the operating force of the Broadway road a couple of weeks ago. "Careless drivers run their horses or wagons into them, bicycle riders get caught in them while trying to pass in front of rapidly moving cars, and some of the accidents that have resulted in serious injury to persons might have been avoided if the party knocked down had not been caught in the fenders and dragged along the street." Those who heard the statement thought it was the assertion of one whose thought was mainly as to the cost of the fenders. His further statement that the value of the fender as a means of preventing accidents was mainly imaginative was also laughed at. Yet in a case on trial in Connecticut last week the fact developed that street railway men were ready to back up these assertions while testifying under oath as experts. President Goodrich of the Hartford system, President Parmelee of the New Haven system, and Superintendent Mather of the New Britain system all testified that as a means for the WOMAN CAME UP WITH POST?

Mrs. Smith Took an Active Hand in a Fight in the Road and Fence War of a Long Island Hamlet.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., Dec. 12.—The road and fence war which has interested the hamlet of Echo for two years has broken out afresh. The Brookhaven Highway Commissioners, in an effort to straighten the main road in front of Ansel Smith's property, at Echo, two years ago laid the new lines of the road, but Mr. Smith claimed the highway encroached upon his property to nearly one-half the width of the road. To indicate his contiguation of possession he put up a row of posts at the point in dispute. These were removed by the Commissioners, but were replaced by Smith.

A commission was then appointed for the purpose of considering the necessity of opening the highway to a uniform width of four rods through the entire village, a distance of three miles, and assessing damages. The commission decided in favor of opening the road, and awarded Smith $100 as compensation for his property.

The Highway Commission wanted Mr. Smith to remove the fence, but he demanded the $100 before the posts were pulled up. Commissioner Terry and Roadmaster Brice and a number of workmen drove to the disputed point yesterday, with the intention of tearing down the fence, but on their arrival they found Smith, with his wife and eldest son, ready to defend their position. Mr. Terry sent here for aid, and Deputy Sheriff Brown and several special deputies went to the scene to preserve the peace.

The workmen then proceeded to take up the posts. Mrs. Smith threw her arms about the first post attacked, but it was pulled up. Mrs. Smith being raised into the air. All the posts came up, but no sooner were the authorities out of sight than Smith and his son replaced the fence. Smith asserts that until he gets the $100 he will maintain the fence.

THE ASTORIA LAND GRANTS.

Gov. Roosevelt Writes to the State Board About the Valuation.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Gov. Roosevelt has written a letter to the State Land Board relative to the grants of land under water made to the Astoria Light, Heat, and Power Company. The letter will be presented to the board at its meeting to-morrow.

While the Governor refuses to disclose the contents of the letter, it is rumored that it requests the board to verify the valuation placed on the land granted by the two appraisers, who inspected and advised the board that it was worth $3,500, with a view to ascertaining if such valuation was correct.

Attorney Bonner, who represents the Astoria Company, conferred with the Governor to-day, and submitted certain papers to the Governor, which the latter will transmit to the Land Board to-morrow.

GOVERNMENT OF PUERTO RICO.

Cabinet Meeting Discusses the Problem—Said to Favor a Form Like That in Louisiana in 1803.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—President McKinley and Secretary of War Root are determined not to allow their recommendations on behalf of Puerto Rico to be neglected by Congress if that body can be induced to promptly take them up. In the meeting of the Cabinet to-day the matter was discussed in connection with the presentation of some reports from Gov. Gen. Davis, setting forth the necessity of action to relieve the depression due in a great measure to the acquisition of the island by the United States. Citizens of the island are praying to have their political status clearly defined. The people of the island is as profound as its commercial stagnation. While there is no public debt, the planters are heavily involved, and are not helped by new investors, outsiders appearing to hesitate while the conditions remain as they are.

Although the President made recommendations in his message on the lines suggested by Secretary Root, looking to the adoption of a government similar to that provided in Louisiana in 1803, it is not at all improbable that the President will send a special message to Congress to urge upon that body the relief suggested by Secretary Root. It is believed that the Cabinet favors that plan. As the most difficult question to be met is that of abolishing all tariff duties between Puerto Rico and the United States, and that must receive the approval of the Ways and Means Committee, it is believed that there will be no communication on the subject before the announcement of the committees.

Some of the Southern Democrats seem bound to oppose the abolition of tariff duties between the United States and Puerto Rico. To hte producers of sugar and tropical fruits this will appeal as a local question, and in Louisiana the prospect of the competition of Puerto Rico, and eventually of Cuba, which they fancy will be forced to ask for annexation as the result of free trade with Puerto Rico, is a serious embarrassment. They say that once Puerto Rico enjoyed all the advantages that can be enjoyed by a State of Territory the disadvantage of Cuba will be so keenly felt that its people will throw aside all hesitation and ask to have the pledge of the United States not to annex the island repealed for their benefit.

ELECTIONS IN PUERTO RICO.

Republicans Carry Ponce and Claim San Juan by a Heavy Majority.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Dec. 12.—The Republicans have carried Ponce by 1,700 majority. Elections were held in seventeen towns. The Republicans hold eight, with 1,200 total plurality. Forty-five elections are yet unordered, and it will take two months to complete them at the present rate. The Republicans claim San Juan by a heavy majority, and assert that there has been a complete, overwhelming Federal defeat.

Gov. Gen. Davis has issued an order governing the display of flags in Puerto Rico. The Spanish flag is not to be allowed on public buildings. For of late it has been customary for the municipal authorities in the interior towns to display the Spanish and American flags together on the city buildings.

Movements of Government Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Navy Department is informed of the arrival of the gunboat Marietta at Puerto De Galle, Ceylon, to-day, on her way to Manila, and of the departure of the training ship Essex from Villefranche yesterday for Gibraltar. The Quartermaster General is informed that the transport Sedgwick left Havana last night for New York with 86 passengers, $1,250,000 funds of North American Trust Company, $168,455 Post Office funds. The tons of general cargo, and 4 tons of ordnance.

...E FEDERAL INHERITANCE TAX.

...guments were heard by the Supreme ... at Washington during several days ...week upon the constitutionality of ...heritance tax sections of the War ...nue act of June, 1898. The court ... at one time arguments upon sev...cases involving the questions raised. ...of these cases, carried up from the ...uit Court of Appeals in the Eastern ...ict of New York, was that of the ...tors of the estate of the late EDWIN ...OWLTON of Brooklyn against Inter-Revenue Collector MOORE of the First ...rict. The testator's personal estate, ...unting to $2,559,899, passed to lega... of various degrees of kin and to one ...oration, a church. Under protest the ...tors paid taxes amounting to $42,-...7. Suit was brought to recover this ... with interest.

... War Revenue act, after exempting ...es of less than $10,000 actual value, ...ides that personal property passing ...irs either by will or under intestate ... shall pay a tax which is so graded ... a bequest from a large estate would ... a higher rate than a bequest of ... amount from a smaller estate. ...re the property exceeds $10,000 in ... but is below $25,000 the rate is 75 ... for each $100 if the bequest goes to ... descendants, lineal ancestor, or ...er or sister of the testator; $1.50 ...100 where it goes to nephews and ...es or their descendants; $3 per hun... to uncles or aunts or their descend... $4 per $100 to great-uncles or ...-aunts or their descendants; and $5 ...100 to heirs not of kin or to corpora...; but property passing to husband ...ife shall be exempt.

...s further provided that if the estate ...eds $25,000 in value the rates of tax ...e mentioned shall be multiplied by ...and one-half; by two if the value ex...s $100,000; by two and one-half if it ...eds $500,000; and by three if it ex...s $1,000,000.

...is evident that under the provisions ...is law a legatee might be taxed at two ... different rates upon two bequests of ...al value. For instance, a sister inher... $50,000 under the will of one broth... who died possessed of an estate worth ...000 would pay a tax of $625; while ... $50,000 inherited from another ...her who was worth $1,100,000 when ...ied the tax would be $1,125. It is ...ural that the amount of the tax ...uld increase with the amount of the ...cy, but under this law the rate at ...ch the tax is levied increases with the ...unt of the legacy. In the brief of Mr. ...RLES H. OTIS, counsel in the Knowl... case, the effect is thus stated:

...e rate of the tax increases as the ...unt of the legacy or distributive share ...eases. For example, a child receives ...acy of $9,000 and is not taxed; he re...s a legacy of $11,000 and is taxed three-...ths of 1 per cent.; he receives a legacy ...26,000 and is taxed 1¼ per cent.; he ...eives a legacy of $101,000 and is taxed ... per cent.; he receives $501,000 and is ...d 1¾ per cent.; he receives a legacy of ...00,000 and is taxed 2¼ per cent., (as in ... case at bar.). In other words, the law ...kes a clear discrimination against the ... and exacts from them a greater pro...tional contribution to the needs of the ...ernment.

...The constitutionality of the law is at...ked on the ground that this is not uni...m taxation. The tax imposed under ... War Revenue act is clearly an ex..., and the Constitution declares that ...ll duties, imposts, and excises shall be ...form throughout the United States."

...course, the Federal Congress has ...thing to say about the regulation of ...eritance. That is exclusively the ...vince of State laws. The taxes levied ...der the War Revenue act must there...e be uniform throughout the Union ... the act cannot stand. Whether the ...rt sustains the law or not will depend ...on the view it takes of the contention ... the complainants in these cases that ...es levied at rates that increase as the ...ount of the sum taxed increases are ... uniform and therefore not constitu...nal.

...t is a general principle of taxation ...at taxes should be laid at the same ...e upon the same article in all parts of ... country. Judge HARLAN, who dis...ted from the opinion of the Supreme ...urt declaring the income tax law un...nstitutional, said in his opinion:

> ...f it were true that this legislation, in ... important aspects and in its essence, ...criminated against the rich because of ...eir wealth the court, in vindication of ...e equality of all before the law, might ...ll declare that the statute was not an ...ercise of the power of taxation, but was ...pugnant to those principles of natural ...ht upon which our free institutions rest, ...d therefore was legislative spoliation, un... the guise of taxation.

...The complainants in the War Revenue ...t cases contend that the act "at...mpts to create taxable classes, based ...on wealth, varying the rate of the tax ...on the same kind of taxable property ... the hands of the same class of taxable ...rsons." The State of Illinois imposes a ...x upon inheritances with a sliding ...ale of rates which makes the larger ...tionality of the law was attacked on the ground that this was not uniform taxation, but the Supreme Court held that it was within the power of the State to tax in any way it pleased the right to succeed to property, since it had itself conferred that right. In his opinion Justice BREWER said: "It seems to be conceded that if this were a tax upon property such increase in the rate of taxation could not be sustained, but being a tax upon succession it is held that a different rule prevails." The Federal tax is upon property, not upon the right of inheritance.

There are countless decisions from which the theory of the court as to the rule of uniformity might be inferred. New principles or new conditions may be found in the present cases, however, which may modify the application of the rule. The decision of the court will be of deep interest to the public, since while there has been no general complaint that the war revenue taxes are burdensome, and most of them are likely to become permanent, the collection of a Federal inheritance tax in addition to the inheritance taxes now collected in many States will constitute a heavy exaction upon fortunes left by will and would tend to bring into increasing favor the custom of disposing of estates during the lifetime of the owner.

BRITISH DIFFICULTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA

But this is a great war upon which we have entered. It is not a small task that this country has, not for the first time in its glorious history, undertaken. We are told that the Transvaal is a weak power. Weakness in war depends upon many considerations. It is not merely a question of numbers or of wealth. It is a question of local circumstance, of position, of methods of warfare. At the time of an unwarranted and extraordinary and insolent aggression, of attack upon her Majesty's territories, the Transvaal State was by far the greatest military power in South Africa. For years it has been preparing, as we now know, for this contingency, and, when the war broke out, in numbers of men, in its resources, in its armament, it altogether outnumbered and outweighed anything that this country could possibly do for many weeks to come. You must bear in mind that in this war we are 6,000 miles and more from the country in which we have to operate, and when our troops land in that country they are 1,500 miles by land from their ultimate objective.—MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S speech at Leicester, Nov. 29.

This is, upon the whole, a very fair statement of the British difficulties in South Africa. It can hardly have failed to occur to the hearers of the speech, as it must also occur to its readers, that the tone of it is a new tone for the orator to take. It is not at all the tone that he took when he was courting the reputation of being the most "forward" member of the British Cabinet. At that time the remarks we have quoted would have proceeded more naturally from a spokesman of the Opposition and would have been taken by everybody, including Mr. CHAMBERLAIN himself, to be a criticism upon his methods. We may imagine that he would have replied to them by invoking scorn for the man who harbored any doubts of the ability of the British Empire to beat down all the feeble opposition that could be brought against it by two little States of "embattled farmers" numbering less than 50,000 men of fighting age, all told.

But the considerations now adduced by Mr. CHAMBERLAIN are all true and relevant, even though it be he who adduces them. Three months ago, in a response to the speech he has just been making, he would probably have triumphantly cited the comparative statistics of the British Empire and of the Transvaal Republic. But these things do not go by statistics alone. A century and a quarter ago, one of Lord NORTH'S followers in the House of Commons might have cited like statistics to show that the revolt of the Colonies could not amount to anything. Five years ago there were many well-informed persons who showed by statistics the enormous disparity in numbers and resources between Japan and China and deplored the temerity of Japan in provoking a hopeless conflict.

At the beginning of the present war nobody in England put the date for the capture of Pretoria later than Christmas. It is less than a fortnight to Christmas now, and nobody now imagines that this prediction will be fulfilled. The invaders have not yet had an armed force in either of the two assailed republics. Neither will it be pretended that the advantage of what fighting there has been has been on the British side. And yet the whole available British Army has been in South Africa for weeks, or ever since the definitive advance of Gen. BULLER. Yet up to this time no results have been achieved. To-day, as six weeks ago, it is not Johannesberg and Pretoria, but it is Kimberley on one side and Ladysmith on the other, that are in danger.

All these things justify Mr. CHAMBERLAIN'S present position that this is "a great war," but they correspondingly invalidate the position which by his actions he took before it began that it was going to be a small war. They also raise an indictment against his behavior and that of the whole war party in England. Why did Mr. CHAMBERLAIN treat the proposals of the Boer Government with contempt as if they were not worth a civil answer? Why did The London Times say, when the Boer ultimatum had actually been delivered, that the real issue was "of Dutch or British supremacy in South Africa"? What was to be got by an announcement of that kind, which was in effect repeated by Lord SELBORNE in the House of Lords. Had the British such a surplus of military strength that they could afford to tell every Dutch Afrikander in South Africa that their triumph over the Transvaal would be the downfall of his hopes? That is not the way in which men act who are anxious to allay animosities. It is the way in which men act who feel that they are strong enough to defy and despise animosities. The policy of which Mr. CHAMBERLAIN is the most conspicuous representative is the policy which has reinforced the forces of the two republics with every ambitious and patriotic Boer who could make his way to the Boer it about that every foot of the British advance from the coast towns has been through a hostile country. It is in large part due to Mr. CHAMBERLAIN'S own exertions that the war for which he is so largely responsible turns out to be so serious as he now finds and owns it to be.

DOUBLING THE GERMAN NAVY.

Count VON BUELOW'S exposition of the appropriation for the German Navy was a pattern in its kind. Neither Lord SALISBURY nor any other "old Parliamentary hand" could have done it any better. It was entirely free from anything of menace. On the contrary, it was an announcement of good relations all around. Our own example was used in some sort as a model for Germany. And no doubt it is true that an increase of the "sea power" of one nation is as good an argument for the increase of the others as the increase of one army. This latter has been used so effectively as to convert the Continent of Europe into the armed camp which we see.

The peculiarity of the case of Germany is that there is in the increase of the navy no question of national defense, strictly so-called. A great navy is a vital necessity to Great Britain. Without it she would be liable to be starved to death or submission within a month. With us, a navy is also a necessity of defense, considering the immense stretch of our exposed coast and the facility of raiding expeditions, such as we experienced in the war of 1812. But Germany neither imports the greater part of her food supply, like England, nor has she a long and vulnerable coast line like ourselves. Her coast line is in fact very short upon the North Sea, for her much longer coast upon the Baltic is not counted, and would scarcely be vulnerable in case of war except to Russia, in which case it would doubtless be forts and guns that would be the German reliance for the defense.

The use of a navy for Germany is simply to maintain and extend her foreign trade and her outlying possessions in case of war. The present German Navy seems to be ample for the present uses of the empire. Consequently a proposed enlargement implies a general policy of expansion, and indeed Count VON BUELOW declared as much. To double the German Navy would make it very disproportionate to any work it has now to do. But this process of doubling is to go on through a good many years, twenty, according to a casual remark of the Kaiser, though, in his official statement, the Imperial Chancellor declined to define the period. At any rate, it is clear that Germany means to be much more of a world power than she has been heretofore. It seems likely that her new possessions, whatever they may be, will be held upon the tenure of the "open door." In that case, we can have no objections, any more than we have in the case of Great Britain, to her acquiring and administering as many of them as she pleases. She will be acting in the interest of American as well as of German commerce.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BRITISH BARBARITY.

Much of the war news from South Africa that has come by the way of Continental Europe has been colored by charges against the British soldier tending to show that he had suddenly become regardless of the rules of civilized warfare. We were told that Boers were massacred after surrendering at Elandslaagte, and that the survivors suffered unspeakable indignities while being conveyed as prisoners of war to the naval station near Cape Town. The wording and details of the charges made showed that they had some common source of origin. A recent number of the Dutch paper Courant, published in Arnhem, reveals the fact that this source of origin was the Cape correspondent of that journal.

In the Courant we find the story of the alleged massacre on the field of Elandslaagte set forth with shocking details; we find the life of the survivors on board the guardship Penelope set forth with such horrors that those of the British prison ship Jersey at the time of the American Revolution sink into insignificance. Says the correspondent: "They stole from the prisoners their watches, their money, their keys, their pocket knives, their handkerchiefs. They presented a bayonet against the breast of one, Heer MANTEL, and demanded, 'Your watch or we kill you!' Another was made to take off his shoes to show that he did not have money therein concealed. Even wedding rings were stolen. They even cut off the finger of a wounded man to get at his ring."

In due time stern and authentic denials of these things will doubtless come from Cape Town. In the meanwhile a few extracts from a Cape paper printed at the time of the arrival of the Boer prisoners on board the transport Putiala will serve to show the existence of conditions which tend, in the most convincing manner, to show the falseness of the monstrous charges made by the correspondent of the Courant. We have before us a copy of The Cape Times of Nov. 8. Without dwelling upon the news from the front in which the gallantry, the marksmanship, the invincible bravery of the Boers are graphically recorded, we turn to an article headed "Prisoners of War."

It seems that after the prisoners had been transferred from the Putiala to the Penelope, Capt. BRUCE of her Majesty's ship Monarch briefly addressed them, pointing out that since the fortune of war had made them prisoners "the naval authorities at Simon's Town will do all in their power to make the lot of those who are now in their custody as endurable as possible." The article continues:

> On the way down from Durban to Simon's Bay the prisoners gave no trouble whatever; the officers took their meals with the Captain and ship's officers in the saloon, and the others were well cared for fore and aft, found the coast the generality evidently considerably freer from inhabitants than they all speak in high terms of the gallantry of the British troops, and particularly of the Gordon Highlanders.

Then follows the citation of Boer opinion on the outcome of the war, which is given with the utmost frankness; the prisoners, while believing that the South African republics would be defeated in the long run, "cling to the opinion that the war is a financial one."

But it may be said that this is only ex parte testimony, which, pleasant as it is, does not of itself preclude the possibility of the alleged atrocities. This idea becomes obviously untenable, however, when we read:

> In proof of the fact that they [the prisoners] appreciated the kindness extended to them while on board ship, the officers addressed a written communication to the commander before leaving the ship, thanking him for the courtesy extended to them during the voyage.

We doubt not that these very prisoners will be the first to refute the charges made by the Cape correspondent of the Courant. It is also extremely evident that this mischiefmaker, if discovered, will be properly taken care of. The British soldier is not the only soldier who has been maligned by falsehoods uttered by contemptible correspondents. The men who are fighting in the Philippines know how to sympathize with him.

THE TARIFF AND THE CHURCH COLLECTIONS.

The latest attempt of the Protection organ to prove that the tariff is the source of all good and perfect gifts is a peculiar one. We have before us a card sent out by The American Protective Tariff League to the officers of all the churches in the country who can be reached. "With a view," it says, "to securing a comparison between the condition of the people under the Free Trade Wilson Tariff and the Protection Dingley Tariff, we desire to have reports of the plate collections in all churches for the six months ending June 30, 1895, and the six months ending June 30, 1899."

We trust that this card has been widely circulated, and that it will elicit a large number of replies. Adopting the method of reasoning employed by the intelligent officials of The American Protective Tariff League, the statistics will throw much light on a number of interesting and important questions.

For instance, meteorologists have long been seriously puzzled as to the source of the changes more or less temporary in climate, determining the fertility of the soil and the volume of crops. If it can be shown that the plate collections and the crops are both larger under a protective tariff than under a revenue tariff, the conclusion is logical that if the tariff causes the increase in one it also causes the increase in the other. This discovery not only simplifies the study of the question, but renders the study of it unnecessary. What is the use of bothering our heads as to the weather conditions and their effect on the farmer's prosperity, when we can consult the statute book, see if the tariff is protective and be able instantly and securely to say whether the farmer will have big crops or poor ones?

Nor is this the only advantage in this line of reasoning if it be correct. It not merely enables us to foretell the future but to control it. If the protective tariff required to swell the plate collections and the crops is not on the statute book it can be put there. The opposition of besotted free traders would be of no avail. They could not stand for a day against the overwhelming demand of the farmers and the clergymen. This is really the theory on which the protectionists are banking. It is discouraging business, but they stick to it.

An Ideal Post Office.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see by to-day's TIMES that the Madison Square Garden has been offered to the Government as the site of the proposed new Post Office. If the present building is in the market, and if it could be adapted to postal purposes, it would be for the public benefit to have it turned to such use. Not only is it centrally situated and adequate in size, but it is one of the handsomest and most striking architectural features of New York. The tower of Madison Square Garden is one of the "sights" of the city, and any change of ownership that involved its destruction would be, aesthetically considered, a public misfortune. Nothing would tend more strongly to its preservation than the use of the building as a general Post Office, and I trust you will use your powerful influence in favor of its acquisition by the Government. JOSEPH B. GILDER.

THE SWAN SONG OF ROBERTS.

From The Chicago Times-Herald.

I'm going home, I'm going home,
Back where my loves are waiting;
I'm going to let others do
The Nation's legislating;
Let others rant, let others roar,
Displaying sense of folly—
I'm going back to stray no more
From Sarah, Sue, and Molly.

I'm going home, I'm going home,
Where loving hearts await me,
To loiter there and cease to care
A snap for those who hate me.
They've risen and they've had their say—

SILVER AND FREE SILVER

Pennsylvania Democratic Congressman Abandons 16 to 1.

IS ALSO AN EXPANSIONIST

Says He Was Mistaken in the Campaign of 1896—His Views on the Currency Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Representative Joseph C. Sibley of Pennsylvania, about whose alleged change of view on the money question there has been much inquiry during the last week, has given a statement of his opinions, in which he not only acknowledges that he was mistaken in his notions about the intimate relation between free silver and prosperity, but comes out frankly and cordially in favor of expansion.

Coming at a time when there is a manifest disposition among Democrats to revise their declarations, and admissions by prominent members of the party that this can be done without abandoning Democratic principles, the remarks of Mr. Sibley, who was considered a good enough Democrat in 1896 to be spoken of as a candidate for President and/or Vice President, are bound to attract wide attention. In his interview Mr. Sibley said:

"I am and have been a pronounced believer in the principles of bimetallism. I don't care whether it be National or international bimetallism, nor am I wedded to any ratio. But Aristotle, Adam Smith, John Locke, John Stuart Mill, Francis Wayland, and, in fact, every great writer on political economy, has laid down the proposition that the volume of money in any country determined the prices of its products.

"Bimetallism was a living issue in 1896, but the conditions have changed. In that year I publicly predicted that if McKinley and the gold standard were successful prices would fall, with a corresponding increase in the purchasing power of the gold dollar, and we would have an era of hard times and commercial depression such as this country had seldom witnessed. Now I look around me and I see the forges blazing, the fires lighted in all the furnaces, the shuttles weaving, and the looms spinning, every man who has a day's labor to sell finding a ready market for it; our ships loaded to the Plimsoll line with exports bound for all parts of the world, and everywhere plenty and prosperity. And so it occurs to me that somebody must have been mistaken; and perhaps that fellow was me.

"I have been a pessimist for a long time, but I am now an optimist; believe that we have a better Congress now than ever before—that we have a better President, and that the next President, whether it be McKinley or Bryan, will be better still. The world is moving forward.

"Yet the contention of the bimetallists in 1896 was absolutely correct, and has been vindicated by present conditions. We claimed then that a greater volume of money of final redemption was needed to stimulate business enterprise and check falling prices. We suggested bimetallism as a means of adding to the world's supply of money. But who could then have foreseen the vast gold discoveries in the Klondyke region? Who then knew of the wonderful possibilities of that tremendous South African reef extending 300 miles from Johannesburg on the south to Pretoria on the north? Who could have predicted the perfection of the marvelous cyanide process of extracting gold? In one year $300,000,000 of gold has been added to the money in circulation. No such amount even of gold and silver combined has ever before been placed in circulation in any one year in the history of the world. Therefore, the contention of the bimetallists as to the necessity for a greater volume of final money has been substantiated. With this enormous increase has come changed conditions. The issue of 1896 is no longer an issue. In fact, it would be ridiculous to make that an issue for 1900.

"Witnessing as we do a revenue coming to the Government sufficient to overcome the deficit and promise a surplus, with every industry actively and profitably engaged, with every man employed who seeks employment, the overshadowing issue is whether we shall so wisely conduct ourselves as not to disturb this prosperous condition. It would perhaps be better if Congress simply does nothing but pass the appropriation bills and adjourns, without experimenting with any theories that may return us to the scrapheap period. I've contributed the last dollar I ever want to contribute to the scrapheap. Not because I object to contributing, but because I want always to see prosperity, happy homes, and smiling faces.

"I shall vote against the Currency bill, but if it had been divided, as it should have been, I would have voted for two of its sections and against one. I favor the proposition to give National banks the right to issue paper money to the full amount of their deposits. I also favor the establishment of National banks in small towns, with a capital of $25,000. But it is a question in my mind whether we should retire the greenbacks which this bill practically does, by providing that they can only be paid out for gold. I confess that my regard for the greenbacks is largely sentimental. In the dark days of the civil war they kept our soldiers in the field. Nor do I believe that the time is opportune for the gold standard.

"I am inclined to agree with Lord Goldenham, who asserts that the United States might successfully establish bimetallism at a ratio of 22 to 1, but to return to the old ratio of 16 to 1 would cause fluctuations in values that would work great hardships on the large commercial houses that have outstanding accounts, and would be detrimental to business generally.

"I am an expansionist, and I believe we should keep the Philippines. China and the Orient are undergoing great changes. Railroads hundreds of miles in length are being constructed, and with those railroads and other modern improvements will come new wants for the people of China. There is more undeveloped wealth locked up in China than in any other country on the globe, and the Philippines furnish us with the commercial key to that wealth. I believe that President McKinley has acted with wisdom, not only in the Philippine question, but in the general details of his Administration. I am frank to say that I think he is entitled to some recognition of the country, even from men who do not share in all his political beliefs.

"In my opinion, Mr. McKinley and Mr. Bryan will be the Presidential candidates next year, and things are, as a party, modify our present attitude. I think the question is as good as settled already in favor of Mr. McKinley. Personally I have a high admiration for the character of Mr. Bryan. I consider him very little understood, especially by the people of the East. I know him to be a lover of his country and a man of the highest and purest personal character. But on many questions of the present time I cannot agree with him, although I shall always entertain for him the highest respect and admiration."

Mr. Sibley declined to answer the direct question whether he would support Bryan or McKinley in the next Presidential campaign. "It is too early to determine that question," he said.

It is thought here that some of the Pennsylvania Democrats in the House will support the Republican Currency bill. The attitude of these members is expected to be made more clear as a result of a meeting to-morrow and a dinner to be given by Mr. Sibley.

The announcement that a number of Democratic members of the House will vote for the bill has led to some talk of a Democratic House caucus. Mr. Richardson, the Democratic floor leader, says, however, that no determination in that line has been reached.

SENATOR DANIEL'S ATTITUDE.

He Intimates that a Restatement of the Democratic Policy in 1900 May Be Necessary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator John W. Daniel of Virginia, who has been a Democrat "since 1850," according to his own playful statement before the Virginia Democratic Association, at its banquet given here last night justified some of the reports that have been heard about him as to the necessity for a restatement of Democratic policy in 1900 without abandoning any of the vital principles that have been held by the party since its formation.

"I am not going to discuss the platform of 1900," said the Senator. "There is not a line in the Chicago platform in which I do not believe. There is not a line or a word in it that a man who is a Constitutional lawyer cannot demonstrate to be sound in principle. The Democratic platform of 1900 is like a ship—iron-clad. It is impregnable, sound in logic and morals. It will stand the test.

"There is no party that was ever able to on the field. No political party in 100 years has been able to make two campaigns on the same platform, not because they were not true to their principles, but because there have never been two consecutive four years that did not present different problems and problems in different phases.

"I will not commit myself nor will I advise any Democrat to commit himself so that he may not favor any addition or amendment, as the time, place, and circumstance may call for. As far as I know, our great leader and standard-bearer will lead the party again in 1900. The great place that he occupies in the confidence and the affections of the people who voted for him must not be overlooked. I see no indications why he will not be the man to head our cause in 1900.

"The least wise of all of us can tell more about the campaign of 1900 in three months from now than the most sagacious of us can tell about it now. We live in an age of rapid transit, the most rapid transit of any period of the world. The next three or four months will be pregnant with events. They will point their fingers to the battlefield of 1900."

PADEREWSKI, PIANIST.

First Recital of the Great Polish Player at Carnegie Hall.

It used to be Patti of whom we wrote she is come again, and the town is once more at her feet. But now it is Ignace Jan Paderewski, the pianist, who comes again, the master of the keyboard, and is the conqueror of hearts. He has come back after an absence of nearly four years, and the scene at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon, when he gave his first recital, was as if he had never gone away. There was the same apparently slight figure seated alone at the piano on the half-dark stage. There was the same pale, thoughtful face, with the nimbus of orange hair floating around it. There were the same graceful, sinewy hands and the same broad, powerful shoulders. There were the same manifestations of public absorption in the playing of this really remarkable man.

There were the silent and bowed heads of the reverently musical listeners, and the staring eyes and open mouths of those who went to scoff and who tarried to be amazed. There were the same unmistakable evidences of masculine admiration and the equally unmistakable demonstrations of feminine emotion. The women rushed down to the stage at the end of the recital just as they used to in the bygone seasons and worshipped at the feet of the throne. And the pianist played the piano, not, perhaps, exactly as he used to, but always as one having authority and as one who had penetrated to the heart of the instrument and to the secret shrine of music herself.

Taken altogether, it was a curious manifestation of the potency of a personality in that sphere in which personality finds its widest scope. If there are some who remain skeptical as to the real musical value of it all, they are not to be blamed, although they are radically and hopelessly in the wrong. For, when all is said and done, when every possible discount is allowed for the easily overwrought feelings of the younger women who go to hear him, when all allowance is made for the equaring, the cubing of the emotional power of music by the reaction on it of concentrated hysteria, Paderewski is a great artist, a wonderful pianist, and a power not to be resisted. The reasons of this can be told, but the process seems cold blooded, and it has been gone through with in this paper. Perchance there may be occasion to go over the ground again, but not just now. It is sufficient to record at the present writing that Mr. Paderewski is here, and that he played in the same influential manner as of old.

His programme consisted of the following numbers: The Bach-Liszt fantasia and fugue in A minor, Beethoven's sonata in F minor, Opus 57; Schumann's A major fantasia; the A flat ballade, mazurka, Opus 33, No. 4, nocturne, opus 27, No. 2, études Nos. 12, 7, and 3, from Opus 10, and the A flat polonaise of Chopin; the Tausig transcription of the Strauss waltz, "Man lebt nur einmal," and Liszt's sixth Hungarian rhapsody. This was a programme well suited to a full display of the pianist's qualities.

In the beginning of the Bach piece it was evident that the artist was nervous and he dropped some notes, but there were the usual loveliness of color and clarity in the fugue. In the sonata the player had command of himself, and his performance was in the happiest vein. There has been in the past, and there will continue to be, difference of opinion as to the correctness of the interpretation of this work by the famous Polish pianist. We Americans are not accustomed to hearing Beethoven made so pretty, and we think that in Mr. Paderewski's reading we miss some of the austerity of the composer. But this is not a matter which the public will take seriously, and if Mr. Paderewski knows how to sugar the nutritive pill, he will surely be forgiven.

The Schumann fantasia was played in a manner which left nothing to be desired. The manner in which the great artist sang Schumann's poetic melodies through the instrument was simply matchless, while the breadth and dignity of his style were noble. The last movement was treated with beautiful insight into its subtle content, and there was always that marvelous singing tone to send the composer's thoughts into every heart. As a Chopin player Mr. Paderewski is, in the opinion of the present writer, not equaled by any other pianist. No other certainly has shown such a wide sweep of style as he showed in his reading yesterday of the nocturne and the polonaise. As for the lace work of the waltz of Strauss, it was wonderful in its clearness and crispness and in the beauty of the nuancing, while the playing of the octave repetitions in the rhapsody was enough to drive an ordinary pianist to despair. It may be said for the sake of the record that the audience staid at the close of the programme and insisted on the familiar two encores, which in this case were the A flat waltz of Chopin and the march from the "Ruins of Athens."

FOR THE GRAND OPERA SEASON.

Box Office Opening and Plans for First Fortnight's Performances.

The box office of the Metropolitan Opera House, beginning to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, will open for the sale of seats to the general public for the first week of the Grand Opera season, under the direction of the Maurice Grau Company. The opening performance is set for next Monday night. The seats yet to be sold are those which were left after the regular subscribers had made their choice. It would seem that if the demand in future years continues as it has in the past and present season, the seats will soon be all subscribed for before Mr. Grau opens the opera house for the first performance.

From the many applications which have been received by the management asking for the reservation of seats or boxes, there is reason to suppose that applicants tomorrow for seats in the orchestra for the opening night may find them all sold, and the only remaining seats will be those in the last two rows of the orchestra circle. There are indications, too, that it will also be difficult to purchase desirable seats in the upper parts of the house. This condition is likely to prevail throughout the entire season for the Monday and Wednesday evening performances and Saturday matinées, which apparently are the most popular with the operagoers.

For the opening week Mr. Grau offers a répertoire which embraces the following operas: Monday, "Roméo et Juliette"; Wednesday, "Carmen"; Friday, "Tannhäuser"; Saturday matinée, "Faust"; Saturday evening, "Lohengrin."

In outlining his répertoire for the second week of the season, which begins Monday, Dec. 25, Mr. Grau is somewhat undecided as to whether "Mignon" or "Aïda" will be chosen for the opening performance. The chances now favor the latter opera, which will give Mme. Eames an opportunity to make her first metropolitan appearance in the rôle of Aïda.

Following is the répertoire outlined by Mr. Grau at present, but subject to change:

Monday—Verdi's opera, "Aïda," in Italian. Aïda, Mme. Emma Eames; Una Sacerdotessa, Mlle. Bauermeister; Amneris, Mme. Mantelli; Amonasro, Signor Campanari; Ramfis, M. Edouard de Reszke; Il Re, M. H. Devries; Un Messaggiero, Signor Vanni; Baletto, M. Saléas; incidental dance by the corps de ballet; conductor, Signor Mancinelli.

Wednesday—Rossini's opera, "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," in Italian. Rosina, Mme. Sembrich; Bertha, Mme. Van Cauteren; Figaro, Signor Campanari; Basilio, M. Edouard de Reszke; Bartolo, Signor Pini-Corsi; Sargente, Signor Vanni; Fiorello, M. Meux; Conte d'Almaviva, M. Salignac; conductor, Signor Bevignani.

Friday—Mozart's opera, "Don Giovanni." Donna Anna, Mme. Nordica; Donna Elvira, Mme. Cavenaille De Vere; Zerlina, Mme. Sembrich; Leporello, M. Edouard de Reszke; Don Ottavio, M. Salignac; Masetto, Signor Pini-Corsi; Il Commendatore, M. Herman Devries; Don Giovanni, Signor Scotti; conductor, Signor Mancinelli.

During this same week the company will go to Philadelphia, where "Faust" will be given on Tuesday evening and "Tannhäuser" on Saturday evening.

JULIA ARTHUR MAY RETIRE

Condition of Her Health Said to Demand a Period of Rest.

VISIT TO LONDON IN DOUBT

Important Engagements Which May Be Canceled—Actress and Her Husband Silent.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—Julia Arthur, who is filling a week's engagement here at the Newark Theatre in "More Than Queen," will retire from the stage, it is understood, at the end of this season. Whether her retirement will be permanent or temporary is uncertain. The probability is that it will be temporary and necessitated by the state of the actress's health. That she has been in a highly nervous condition was evidenced by the incident in the Broadway Theatre a few weeks ago, when she interrupted the play because of alleged annoyance by persons in a box.

Miss Arthur's retirement would disarrange a series of engagements that, it has been learned positively, have been contracted for months in advance, and which contemplate the curtailment of her season in this country by three weeks, in order that she may make a trip to London, where she is booked to appear at the Criterion Theatre in the Spring. Her purpose was to perform there in "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," "A Lady of Quality," and "More Than Queen." She possesses the English rights of "More Than Queen," and the contract by which they were ceded calls for the production of the piece in London within a given time. Miss Arthur also owns the British colonial rights of the play, and it is among the probabilities, should her retirement not occur, that she will eventually appear in it in the antipodes. Meanwhile, at the conclusion of her engagement here, she will be seen at the Montauk, in Brooklyn, whence she will go to Toronto, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg, and other cities. She was to have left for London in April, and in the Fall return once more to the Broadway Theatre under the management of Klaw & Erlanger. "A Lady of Quality," it is understood, was not to have formed part of her répertoire in this country next year.

Neither Miss Arthur nor her husband, Benjamin P. Cheney, would deny last evening that she intended to retire.

"I will not deny it, neither will I admit it. I do not want to discuss it in any way," said the actress.

Mr. Cheney said: "I will not deny, nor will I affirm it. My wife doesn't have to play for the money there may be in acting. She acts out of pure love of her art. Naturally, a great strain is put upon her by her work. If any engagements have been made that she should desire to cancel, it can be done by giving due notice and by making the necessary pecuniary compensation."

Mr. Cheney would not even admit that the actress had arranged to appear at the Criterion in London. "If you want to put it that way, I don't believe she will go to London," said he. "Still, she might go, either for pleasure and recuperation or for professional reasons."

Mr. Cheney is wealthy enough for his wife to be able to abandon work at any time, and therefore if she wants to retire there is no reason why she should not. She has expressed the intention of doing so to intimate friends. Mr. Cheney's fortune is estimated at several millions of dollars. He is only thirty years old, but is a Director in many banks and trust companies in Boston. He is a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, of the Boston Cadets, and of various clubs. He has long taken a deep interest in theatrical affairs, and is one of the most popular amateur actors in Boston. He married Miss Arthur very quietly in 1898.

"QUO VADIS" ON THE STAGE.

Dramatization of Sienckiewicz's Novel is Presented in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The dramatic version of Henry Sienckiewicz's "Quo Vadis" received its initial production at McVicker's Theatre this evening. Monday night was originally set for the performance, but the elaborateness of the staging demanded further rehearsal, and the play was postponed until to-night.

The dramatization is by Stanislaus Stange and follows the main incidents of the book closely. The scenery, by D. Frank Dodge of New York, received a large share of the applause.

"Quo Vadis" is presented in six acts and eight scenes, some of the latter, particularly the banquet scene in Nero's palace and the panorama of the burning of Rome, being especially realistic in design and gorgeous in coloring. The cast was in part as follows:

Vinicius, Joseph Haworth; Petronius, Arthur Forrest; Nero, Edmund Lyons; Ursus, Elmer Grandin; Lygia, Roselle Knott; Eunice, Maude Fealy. The play held the interest of the audience from the start, and there were numerous curtain calls.

The incidental music was composed by Julian Edwards, the choral numbers and the dances being in accord with the period which "Quo Vadis" covers.

The advance sale of seats broke the record at McVicker's.

NEW PLAY FOR NAT GOODWIN.

Ford's Novel, "The Hon. Peter Stirling," to be Dramatized.

Nat Goodwin, who is constantly in quest of new plays, has recently added another important dramatization of a novel to his répertoire, his latest acquisition being Paul Leicester Ford's "The Hon. Peter Stirling."

The author has arranged with Miss Mildred Dowling to collaborate with him in dramatizing the story. It is not yet decided whether Mr. Goodwin will make the production this season, but he purposes to have it in readiness if the occasion requires its presentation.

The piece, however, will be done in this country next season.

NEW MUSICAL COMEDY COMING.

Company Organizing Soon to Present "Mam'selle 'Awkins."

Alfred Aarons has begun active preparations in organizing his company to produce a new musical comedy called "Mam'selle 'Awkins," which is on the style of "The Girl from Paris." The book has been written by Richard Carle, with music by Herman Perlet and Alfred Aarons.

The piece will have its first production out of town, and some time in January brought to New York to be presented at some Broadway theatre. Mr. Aarons for the last two days has been in cable communication with Miss Marie Tempest to come over from London and play the leading rôle. Negotiations are also under way for the engagement of Miss Marguerite Cornille to play one of the leading rôles.

NO CHINA "SPHERE" FOR ITALY

Minister of Foreign Affairs Says Italy Seeks Not Territory, but Commercial Development.

ROME, Dec. 12.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, during the budget debate, Signor Barzilai, a Leftist, discussing the Government's attitude toward China, said:

"Italy has obtained nothing from China, and China has become haughtier toward Italy than toward any other European power. Already half the Italian fleet has been recalled from Chinese waters, and now it would be better for the remainder to be recalled, as no other course is open under present conditions."

Marquis Visconti-Venosta, Minister of Foreign Affairs, replying, said:

"Italy is loyal and faithful to her alliances, which continue to be the immovable bases of her foreign policy. Experience has proved that the Triple Alliance is able to provide for the maintenance of peace in Europe, which has been no common task.

"Moreover, Italy has secured the good will of France, while maintaining the traditional friendship of Great Britain.

"So far as China is concerned, Italy does not wish to enter upon the path of territorial occupation. It is only proposed to favor initiative, with a view of developing Italian commerce, and in this the Italian Minister at Peking is assisting."

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Van Rensselaer—Fitzgerald.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 12.—Miss Caroline Elizabeth Fitzgerald of Brookline and Charles Augustus Van Rensselaer of New York were married at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in Brookline, at noon to-day. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Fitzgerald, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Van Rensselaer.

The church was crowded with the friends and relatives of the couple from Boston, Brookline, New York, and Cambridge. The auditorium was decorated with running vines and the altar and chancel rail were adorned with palms, ferns, potted plants, and cut flowers. Before the ceremony the church organist played classic selections.

The processional was from "Lohengrin." The bridal party entered the church preceded by the six ushers, followed by the little maid of honor and the bride, leaning on the arm of her father. She was gowned in white satin, trimmed with old point and applique lace. Her tulle veil was caught up at the forehead with a small cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a white ivory prayer book.

The maid of honor, Miss Natalie Chauncey of New York, a cousin of the bride, wore a dress of white silk, with lace trimmings. Her picture hat was of pink, with long ostrich tips. She carried a basket of pink roses.

The bridal party was met at the chancel rail by the groom, the best man, Philip Lydig, of New York, and the Rev. Dr. Leonard K. Storrs, pastor of St. Paul's Church, who performed the ceremony.

The ushers were Messrs. Harold and Stephen Fitzgerald, brothers of the bride; Walter Curzon Taylor, Samuel Bettle, Stuyvesant Pillot, and Charles Beekman, all of New York.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, in Washington Street. Only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer will reside at 55 East Sixty-fifth Street, New York.

Coppell—Bowers.

Miss Mary Stewart Bowers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Bowers of 7 West Twenty-first Street, and Mr. Arthur Coppell were married yesterday at 4 o'clock in Grace Church. The Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington performed the ceremony. Miss Martha D. Bowers, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Edith and Florence Coppell, sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Rita Gray, and Miss Josephine Roe. The maid of honor was in white liberty satin and lace and the bridesmaids were gowned in white crepe de chine. All the bride's attendants wore large black picture hats adorned with bunches of pink roses in the back. The bride's gown was of rich white satin, trimmed with point lace, and her veil of tulle was fastened with diamond ornaments. Mr. Allan Wardner was the best man, and among the ushers were the Messrs. W. A. W. Stewart, Edward Burke, Henry Wardner, W. Meredith, Henry S. Kip, and Henry M. Bowers and Spottswood D. Bowers, brothers of the bride. The church decorations were palms and white roses and carnations, and the house decorations were the same, with an added touch of pink roses. The reception, at Mr. Bowers's house after the wedding was largely attended.

Levy—Frank.

Lillian E. Frank, daughter of H. C. Frank, was married at noon yesterday to Mr. Mac Levy of Brooklyn at the home of her parents, 22 West One Hundred and Thirty-third Street. Rabbi K. Kohler of Temple Beth-El officiated. Felix Waterman was the best man. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served.

IN FAVOR OF CO-EDUCATION.

Women of the Society for Political Study Unanimous in Support of Mixed Schools.

That mixed schools and colleges are an unmixed blessing to the female students is the opinion of the Society for Political Study. This conclusion was reached yesterday at the weekly meeting of the society at the Tuxedo, after a one-sided discussion of co-education, for it developed that upon this particular question the members were as one woman. This unusual unanimity occasioned not a little surprise to the members themselves—a surprise that was tinged with regret. Mrs. Bates observed that "a meeting where there is no opposition isn't half as interesting as one at which there is a fight."

The basis of the discussion was a paper dealing with the question of co-education, read by Mrs. Anna R. Diehl. Mrs. Diehl expressed unqualified approval of this policy, which, she said, was that of two-thirds of the private schools, and which was coming to be generally adopted in colleges. "The girls who study with boys have a distinct advantage over those who do not," said Mrs. Diehl. "They get a broader range of views, and the glamour of morbid romance is likely to be diminished by their contact with the opposite sex, for they are thus able to see young men as they really are." Mrs. Diehl concluded with a protest against women's colleges being made to occupy the position of mere annexes to universities, instead of being an integral part of them. She mentioned Barnard in particular as being in this position.

Mrs. Richard M. Bent declared her conviction that were co-education in force in all educational institutions there would be fewer divorces, as nothing so effectually brushed away "cobwebby romances" as the mixed schoolroom. "Girls are apt to put a halo around the head of the handsome young man with the blonde mustache," said Mrs. Bent, "but their estimation of his character and qualities might be considerably modified if they had worked with him in the classroom."

Mrs. A. M. Jackson said she had been connected with a co-educational institution that had become known as the marriage factory, but the fact remained that most of these marriages had turned out very happily.

Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake remarked that, notwithstanding the claims of certain persons and societies, it was she who first demanded that Columbia be opened to women. It was in the time of President Barnard, after whom the woman's college attached to the university was named. She called upon the Faculty, she said, and argued that the charter of the college expressly provided for co-education, for it stated that the institution was founded "for the education of the youth of the city," and the word "youth" applied equally to both sexes. Her demand was referred to a committee, of which the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix was Chairman, with the result that it was shelved. "Dr. Dix" she remarked, "is anything but progressive in regard to matters in which the rights of women are concerned."

Other members expressed the view that girls who were deprived of the privilege of co-education missed a good deal of pleasure and profit, and when Mrs. May Benton Bedell, who was presiding, called upon anyone who might entertain a contrary view to express it nobody responded.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

A morning of wind and rain, which made walking impossible and even driving disagreeable, and an afternoon of enervating warmth was the story of yesterday's climatic conditions, which must be told in brief, as upon the state of the thermometer and the elements society doings in this transition period of the year largely depend. Christmas is too near to make the loss just now of a morning to the women of fashion other than serious, for it means redoubled exertions and added weariness later on.

The day itself was fortunately not a heavy one socially, and really had comparatively little of incident. There was little going on, with the exception of the Bowers-Coppell wedding, a number of "at homes," two receptions given, respectively, by Mrs. Walter Watson of 52 West Fifty-second Street and Mrs. J. J. Emery of 5 East Sixty-eighth Street, and the coming-out tea of Miss Maria L. Moran, who was introduced by her father, Mr. Amedee de Pau Moran, at his residence, 17 West Fifty-sixth Street.

The story of the weddings of Mr. Arthur Coppell, a son of Mr. George Coppell, and Miss Mary S. Bowers, daughter of Mr. John M. Bowers, which took place in Grace Church yesterday afternoon, and of Mr. Charles Van Rensselaer of this city and Miss Caroline Fitz Gerald, which was celebrated at Brookline, Mass., at noon yesterday, is told elsewhere. It was fortunate that the weather cleared before the Grace Church wedding, so that Miss Bowers had the proverbial bride's luck and, according to the old superstition, was blessed by the shining sun.

The first of the sewing classes to be formed this season will be that which works for the Lying-In Hospital. The class this year will be held under the auspices of Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Burden, Mrs. Crocker, Mrs. Gambrill, and Mrs. Weatherbee, and its meetings will be held, the first on Jan. 9 at Mrs. Brooks's residence, 1 East Forty-fifth Street; the second on Jan. 16 at Mrs. James A. Burden's, 908 Fifth Avenue; the third at Mrs. Richard Gambrill's, 30 Park Avenue, on Jan. 23; the fourth at Mrs. George Crocker's, 1 East Sixty-fourth Street, on Jan. 30, and the fifth at Mrs. E. H. Weatherbee's, 240 Madison Avenue, on Feb. 6. Other meetings will be announced later, and all will begin at 11 A. M. It is stated that 5,000 garments will be needed this year by the Lying-In Hospital. The class made 2,859 last year.

Formerly sewing classes met only in Lent, but during the past two or three Winters they have been regular features of the season. The members of the larger classes, who are especially invited to join them, are requested to each subscribe $5, which is expended for the purchase of material, and sometimes for the payment of readers and artists to entertain the ladies while they are sewing. The woman at whose house the class meets is supposed to furnish light refreshments, and at the meetings of some of the smaller classes elaborate luncheons are served.

The long series of literary and linguistic talks and musical recitals, which have also become a feature of the regular season, have also begun, and yesterday Mr. Elliot Schenck gave the first of his explanatory recitals at the piano of Wagner's music dramas, while the second of the "French talks" took place at Mrs. Pierpont Morgan's.

Mrs. Ernest C. La Montagne has issued cards for a reception at her new city residence, 114 East Thirtieth Street, on Dec. 20. Mrs. Henry Duncan Wood and Miss Eleanor D. Wood of 58 West Fifty-first Street will give receptions on Dec. 16 and 23. A débutante of the season not previously mentioned will be Miss Heloise Beeckman, daughter of the late William B. Beeckman, and whose mother—who died some years ago—was Miss Alice Keller, a half-sister of Mr. Louis Keller. Miss Beeckman resides with her stepmother, who was Miss Kate Parker of Newark, N. J.

There was quite a gathering of the Roman Catholic set in society at the coming-out reception yesterday afternoon of Miss Maria L. Moran. The reception took place at the residence of Miss Moran's father, Mr. Amedee de Pau Moran, 17 West Fifty-sixth Street. Mr. Moran and his daughters, Miss Maria and Miss Rosalie E. Moran, who is still a junior, spent last Summer in Europe, and returned home on Nov. 7 last.

It appears that the date of the junior ball of Columbia University is Tuesday, Dec. 19, and not Friday, Dec. 22, as was recently stated. The error arose from the fact that this ball has usually been held on the Friday evening preceding Christmas. Mr. A. N. Lawrence, Jr., is Chairman of the Ball Committee. Mr. R. S. Woodward, Jr., is the Secretary and Mr. Bruce Falconer the Manager and Treasurer.

News comes from Paris of the engagement of M. Hottinguer, a son of Baron Hottinguer, and Miss Marian Munroe, a sister of Mr. John Munroe, the well-known Paris and American banker. M. Hottinguer is said to be a very wealthy man. Miss Munroe is well known in this city and particularly to the many Americans who visit much in Paris.

The second night's performance of the musical burlesque, "The Lady from Chicago," given by the Strollers at the Astoria ballroom last evening, was a marked improvement on that of the first night. The feature of the performance, as on the first night, was the dancing of Miss Emily Hoffman and Mr. Otho Cushing, which brought down the house, and which could not be excelled on the professional stage. Miss Hoffman surprised even those of her friends who have previously seen her dance by her performance Monday night and last evening. She is the embodiment of grace, and her dark brunette beauty makes her a fascinating picture in her becoming Spanish gown. Mr. Cushing made almost as much of a sensation by his dancing as he did by his appearance in the historically correct but startlingly realistic and airy costume of a fourteenth century Court falconer at the famous Bradley Martin ball.

The Friesland, which sails for Antwerp to-day, has booked, among other passengers, Frank M. Brundage, United States Consul at Aix-la-Chapelle, Belgium; A. Laurens, Belgian Consul at Guatemala; Count J. de Lichtervelde, Mrs. T. H. Rodman, Jr., Miss E. Burnham Rodman and Miss Elinor Seymour Rodman, Mr. and Mrs. William Savage, and Mrs. Delancey Stone and Miss Stone. The St. Louis, sailing this morning for Southampton, has booked, among other passengers, John Bolt, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Davies, J. Coleman Drayton and Miss Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ellis, Mrs. F. O. French, Miss Elsie French, Adelbert S. Hay, United States Consul at Pretoria, South Africa; Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Hayes, the Baron Hoyningen-Huehne, Baroness Hoyningen-Huehne, and their two daughters; George Inness, Dr. G. M. Magruder and Mrs. Magruder, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hobart Nichols, E. Kenyon Stow, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Motley Weld of Boston, and E. D. Winslow and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Winslow of Washington. There will be a number of people at the White Star wharf when the Oceanic sails this afternoon to bid farewell to friends. It is said that Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart will sail on the Oceanic, on which ship, as has already been said in this column, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, and Miss Alice Ward will depart.

The managers of the Decorative Art Society, 14 East Thirty-fourth Street, gave the second and last of its two semi-annual teas yesterday afternoon. There have been on exhibition at the society's rooms for the last two weeks some valuable embroideries, among them beautiful specimens of Algerian, Persian, Sicilian, Portuguese, and Greek embroideries loaned by Mrs. J. H. Wade; a piece of Chinese embroidery some 400 years old, loaned by Mrs. S. I. Hurtt; a costume worn by an American boy in Manila fifty years ago, loaned by Mrs. F. R. Sturgis, and a collection of slippers, one a pair worn by Marie Antoinette, loaned by Miss Elsie De Wolfe. There was also a large piece of Venetian lace, 200 years old, and said to be the most valuable of its kind in this country, loaned by Mrs. G. H. Hoffman. The Decorative Art Society has in its salesrooms all sorts of artistic holiday gifts, the work of needy women who depend for their support on the sale of these articles. Mrs. Lewis L. Delafield is the President of the society, and Mrs. A. B. Stone, Mrs. Thomas G. Young, Mrs. J. W. Pinchot, and Mrs. Alexander D. Shaw are the Vice Presidents.

Latest advices from Capt. Nathan Appleton and his traveling companion, the Hon. Jacob Sleeper, report them leaving Port Said for Cairo and the Nile. They were entertained at Port Said by his Highness the Khédive. The travelers are having an unusually good time and enjoying the novelty of their trip, as it is quite out of the common course.

A correspondent writes from Bar Harbor, now buried in its Winter snows: "Kebo, which is arising from the ashes of the famous old clubhouse burned last season, will be greatly changed. The new house, which will be distinctively golfish, is situated in the western up-hill corner of the links, instead of in the centre, as the old one was. The stone lodge has been moved up the hill, and the old driveway half way across the links has been closed. The new house will cost $15,000, and its building is largely due to Waldron Bates of Boston, who is prominently identified with the club. The Pot and Kettle Club is the ten-thousand-dollar project of Col. Morrell and Edgar Scott of Philadelphia. Herbert Parsons and E. G. Fabbri of New York, and others of the younger set, who desired to establish a sort of country club where they can lounge and feast without the conventionalities of society fros. Ground was broken for the Pot and Kettle this week, and it will be finished in May. Dr. Robert Abbe of New York will spend $30,000 this Winter on a villa at Duck Brook, on the Corniche Drive. The ancient mill, a landmark of half a century, has disappeared, and a swimming pool, with a little artificial island in the centre, will replace it. Dr. Abbe's villa, now building there, will contain, as a special feature, one of the finest private music rooms in the country. It will be 80 by 23, finished in oak, and designed for Courtland Palmer, the son of Mrs. Abbe."

The tickets for Mrs. Arthur Paget's theatricals in London in January next are selling rapidly, and the lowest price for a single stall is 10 guineas, or $50. There is said to be a deal of competition for the boxes, of which there are only four, not including the improvised box which is to be arranged for the royalties in the middle of the dress circle. Both the Prince and Princess of Wales are to be present, as well as the Princess Christian and the Marchioness of Lorne. After the play, Prince's restaurant has been placed at the disposal of Mrs. Paget, and the audience is expected to take supper there, the proceeds from which are to go to the relief fund. The night before the Maine sails for South Africa there will be a dinner at the Carlton, at which the tickets are 5 guineas. Lady Randolph Churchill will be present as well as several royalties.

As dull as London is, there are a few diversions, and among them the annual Dog Show which opened this week. The Duchess of Marlborough has some interesting exhibits there, not only of the famous Blenheim spaniels, but of toy bulldogs as well. Mrs. Arthur Paget has won the prizes with her Belgian griffons. The Princess of Wales and the Duchess of Newcastle are also exhibitors, and many women came up from the country to be present at the show.

After all preparations for a green Christmas and a good hunting season had been made, even this solace for those in England who do not go to wars has been denied. The recent arctic weather and heavy snows will put an end to the hunting for some time. Still there will be a great many house parties during the holidays. The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough will be among the entertainers for the Yuletide, and Blenheim will have a large assemblage of guests. The Duchess, who has taken of late years to wearing toques, has abandoned them, it seems, and has again adopted the great picture hat which is said to be very becoming to her. On the occasion of the visit of the Emperor of Germany at Blenheim she wore one of these large hats and a gown of red cloth.

COURT SCOLDS A HUSBAND.

Herman F. Richter, Charged with Abandonment, Object of Censure.

"You are a fine sort of a man. When your children grow up and learn that their mother had sewed to support them, and that you had neglected them, they won't think much of you."

Magistrate Meade addressed these remarks yesterday to Herman F. Richter, in the Essex Market Court. Richter has an office at 120 Nassau Street.

His wife testified that she had sewed night and day to support herself and their two children. The husband, who was well-dressed and wore a heavy gold watch and chain, smiled while she told her story. Magistrate Meade directed Richter to pay strict attention, as he would read out what he proposed to write on his affidavit. The Court then read out the following:

"Dec. 12, 1900.

"To the Magistrate Succeeding Me in the Third District Court:

"Herman F. Richter, held for abandonment, is a tricky, unreliable person. He has violated several paroles, and has treated his wife and family in the most inhuman and scandalous manner. I respectfully ask that whoever takes bail be particular, as this man is apt to play any kind of trick on the Court. His wife is a most estimable lady, and has struggled with her needle to support herself and two children, attending to their education, while he has never offered anything toward their support. This case was before me in the Harlem Police Court eighteen months ago, when, after his agreeing to do certain things for his wife and family, he disappeared. I have since that time been trying to get him.

"C. W. MEADE."

Richter was directed to pay his wife $8 a week. In default of bonds he was locked up.

An Old Trick of Petty Thieves.

A well-known firm was informed yesterday by one of its customers that just after one of the firm's delivery men had left a package at the home of the customer a man rushed up the front steps and said the package had been left by mistake, and that if the maid would give it back the proper package, which had been left at another house, would be delivered. The maid refused without an order, and the man disappeared. This is an old trick, which is worked by petty thieves about this time every year.

Col. Alexis C. Smith to Retire.

It is probable the Twenty-third Regiment of Brooklyn will soon be left with but one field officer. It was said yesterday that Col. Alexis C. Smith had decided to retire from the National Guard. The retirement of Col. Smith would leave Senior Major David E. Case in temporary command, as there is at present no Lieutenant Colonel. Major Case has also announced that he will retire from the regiment early next year. This would leave Mayor W. A. Stokes as the then senior field officer in command.

SUGAR TRUST MANAGER DEAD.

John O. Donner Passes Away on the Eve of His Departure for Europe.

John O. Donner, Superintendent of the American Sugar Refining Company, who was often referred to as "the brain of the Sugar Trust," because of his practical knowledge of the business, died at the Holland House yesterday on the eve of his departure for Europe, where he hoped in some degree to recover his health, which had been undermined by too close attention to his official duties.

Mr. Donner had been failing gradually for several years, and only a few days ago the Directors of the trust voted him a year's vacation. He was stricken at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening with a severe hemorrhage. Dr. Allen M. Thomas of 43 West Fifty-fourth Street and Dr. Francis Delafield of 12 West Thirty-second Street were called, but the patient did not rally, and expired nine hours later.

Mr. Donner was born at Altona, near Hamburg, sixty-eight years ago. He came to this country while yet a young man, and engaged with the old sugar-refining firm of Matthiessen & Wiechers, where, under the tuition of F. Matthiessen, the senior of the house, he soon laid the foundation of his technical education. With Hector De Castro, and backed by German capital, supplied largely by Gossler of Hamburg, he founded the refining firm of De Castro & Donner. The firm prospered at first, but there came a sharp decline in the prices of raw sugars, and in 1884 the house failed. When the Sugar Trust was formed Mr. Donner became one of its experts, and recently was appointed the principal expert.

His salary, it was said last night by one of his business associates, was $30,000 a year, and in some years he had commissions, in accordance with the revenues of the corporation, which had brought his yearly earnings up to double that figure. Mr. Donner about three years ago removed to Ramseys, N. J. He was an ardent lover of speedy horses and a prominent member of The Jockey Club. He maintained a fine racing stable, and his horses were often seen on the leading race courses, but he never permitted them to be entered in any race in his own name. Perhaps his most famous horse was Kingston, which he afterward purchased by the Brewers. Mr. Donner was a member of the Union Club, the Scientific Alliance, the Tuxedo Club, the Turf and Field Club and the Westminster Kennel Club. He leaves a wife, his second, and two children.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Edwin F. Keene.

Capt. Edwin F. Keene died at his home at Rockville Centre, L. I., Sunday night, from paralysis, after three days' illness. He was stricken on a Long Island Railroad train while on his way home from Manhattan. Capt. Keene was born in Manhattan fifty-nine years ago. At the outbreak of the civil war he helped to recruit the Fifty-first Volunteer Regiment. He soon became a Captain. He was wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg. He leaves a wife, two sons, and two daughters.

Obituary Notes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN LOW, a prominent lawyer of Middletown, N. Y., died there suddenly yesterday of heart disease. He was seventy-one years of age.

CHARLES H. BRUSH, for forty years an Elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Northport, L. I., died Monday at his home at Sunken Meadow of paralysis. He was seventy-six years old.

The Rev. FRANCIS D. HOPKINS, aged sixty-seven years, a retired minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday at his home in Newark, N. Y. He leaves a widow and five children.

EDWARD BATES, Librarian of the Treasury Department at Washington, died Monday night at the home of his father, Dr. Julian Bates, at St. Louis. Mr. Bates was about twenty-five years of age, and prior to his appointment as Librarian of the Treasury Department was Curator in the Public Library of St. Louis.

EDWARD F. RICE, a veteran business man of Syracuse, N. Y., died there yesterday, aged sixty-eight years. He was born in Pompey and came to Syracuse when twelve years old to learn the dry goods business. He was also largely interested in local street-car enterprises.

Mrs. ARABELLA R. LEAVITT, eighty-three years old, widow of Rufus Leavitt, died at her home, 221 Broadway, Flushing, L. I., Monday. She leaves four sons and two daughters. Her death made it necessary to recall several hundred invitations for a ball, which was to be given shortly by her son, G. Howland Leavitt, and his wife, to their daughter.

Mrs. HARRIET R. HARRIOT, who was prominently identified with the growth of various Baptist churches in Brooklyn, died at her home, 207 Carlton Avenue, on Sunday. She was the widow of John C. Harriot, and was born in Pompton Plains, N. J., in 1823. Mrs. Harriot taught Sunday school for 58½ years continuously. She leaves two sons.

The Rev. W. H. HATCH, a retired Methodist minister, died at Springfield, Mass., yesterday. He was ninety-two years of age, and had been preached for fifteen years. His last pastorate was in Allston, Mass. He had preached in Boston, Malden, Fitchburg and Lynn. He was the oldest member of the New England Conference.

Mrs. Elizabeth Upham Chace.

Mrs. Elizabeth Upham Chace, who became prominent throughout the country in anti-slavery days on account of her work in behalf of the negro, and was a leading advocate of woman suffrage, died at her home in Central Falls, R. I., yesterday. She had just passed her ninety-third year.

DISCUSS BRIDGES AND TUNNELS.

Resolutions affecting bridges and tunnels occupied the greater portion of the time of both branches of the Municipal Assembly yesterday.

In the Council the resolution authorizing the issue of $1,000,000 in bonds for the preliminary work on the bridge which will extend from Fulton Street, Manhattan, to Long Island City was repassed, owing to a defect in its passage last week. On the motion of Councilman Christman the Committee on Bridges and Tunnels was instructed to make an investigation of the Rainey bridge franchise.

The resolution adopted by the Board of Public Improvements last week asking the Board of Estimate to appropriate $50,000 for borings and soundings for a tunnel extending from the end of Whitehall Street to Hamilton Avenue, South Brooklyn, was adopted in both branches.

Col. Henry M. Robert, United States Engineer, the President of the New York Harbor Line Board, yesterday wrote Mayor Van Wyck that the board would hold a hearing at the Army Building to-day on the application of Bridge Commissioner Shea to the Secretary of War for the approval of the plans for the two proposed bridges over the East River.

AZTEC WORKS DUPLICATED.

Finest Collection of Them in the World Now at the Museum of Natural History.

New York has now the finest collection of objects illustrating the ancient civilization of Mexico and Central America in the world. A private view was given yesterday of the Mexican Hall of the Museum of Natural History, and those who were invited were more than astonished at the results of work that has been going on, unknown to the general public, for several years. Immense expense and energy were necessary to provide the reproductions of famous Aztec, Maya, and other monuments which may now be seen in the Museum. Innumerable difficulties confronted those who took the casts—explorations in localities that have been almost untrodden by men since the days of Cortes; the search for and digging out of immense stone objects from centuries' growths of underbrush or the ruins of temples and the transportation of the casts to port or railroad.

The public is indebted to several wealthy Americans for the opportunity now first offered of examining a complete series of reproductions of Aztec work. Dr. and Mrs. Le Plongeon supplied many of the objects in the Museum, obtaining the casts as the result of years of arduous labor in Yucatan. The Duc de Loubat, one of the highest living authorities on the civilizations of the Aztecs and Mayas, sent Dr. Seler on a special expedition to Mexico, and the results of this expedition are now on exhibition in the gallery, together with a number of original objects presented by the Duc. Still another expedition was sent out by the authorities of the American Museum of Natural History, while miscellaneous objects have been presented by William C. Whitney, Morris K. Jesup, and others.

One of the casts is too large to be placed in the gallery. It is the reproduction of the largest of the monoliths which stand amid the ruins of Quirigua, Guatemala. It stands twenty-five feet above the ground, and has been placed in the hall beneath the Mexican Hall. On entering the latter the most conspicuous object is the so-called "Great Turtle of Quirigua," an enormous mass of what seems like stone covered with hieroglyphs. To the right is a reproduction of the smallest of the Quirigua monoliths.

One of the most striking exhibits is a facsimile of the great "Calendar Stone," considered to be the most remarkable of Mexican sculptures. It is circular in shape, and covered with elaborate hieroglyphs, the centre consisting of a lion's head. On the right is a restoration of the sanctuary of the "Temple of the Cross," showing the position of the bas-relief known as the "Tablet of the Cross." An illustrated label at the side explains what has been discovered at present about this mysterious and wonderful temple at Palenque.

Only one of the reproductions of stone objects has been colored, although the originals sometimes show faint traces of pigments having originally been applied to them. The statue of Chac-Mool, found by Dr. and Mrs. Le Plongeon at Chichen Itza, was colored, and the reproduction in the Museum was painted by Mrs. Le Plongeon in exact fac-simile of it.

In the centre of the hall are cases containing reproductions of manuscripts of the ancient Mexicans and Mayas. The fact that any codices of these ancient civilizations have been preserved, when so much that was more durable has been destroyed, is one of the romances of archaeology. It appears that the Spaniards were struck with the fineness of the illuminations of some of the manuscripts, and carried them back to Europe. They were so widely scattered that they were of little use for purposes of study until they were reproduced in fac-simile. The Duc de Loubat had several volumes containing chromo-lithographed reproductions prepared at his own expense, and copies of these publications are to be found in the gallery, together with other reproductions, specially made for the Museum. One of the finest of the manuscripts is the pre-Columbian codex at Rome, known as "Codex Vaticanus, No. 3,773," which was reproduced for the Duc de Loubat. It is a ritualistic treatise which was used by priests. Other manuscripts are on astrology, magic, and arithmetic.

In a case at the end of the hall is a collection, obtained by the Lumholtz expedition, of pottery from the ruins of Casas Grandes, illustrating a culture approaching that of the ancient Pueblo people of Arizona and New Mexico. In another case are the Tarascan terra cotta figures and stone sculptures acquired by the same expedition. In yet other cases are various collections, including jade ornaments, copper implements, and pottery, all illustrating the culture of several of the ancient Mexican peoples.

The new gallery is the first portion of the west wing of the Museum to be thrown open to the public. The façade is now completed, but the remainder of the interior is still in an unfinished condition, and it is not yet decided when it will be filled with collections and opened.

YACHT CLUB OFFICIALS PLANS.

Changes in the Personnel of Flag Officers Contemplated.

Changes in the personnel of flag officers of the leading yacht clubs in the vicinity of New York will be the rule next season. With the single exception of the New York Yacht Club, whose board of officers will remain practically the same, the chief officers' flags of the principal organizations will fly from vessels that heretofore have not exhibited the broad pennants of flag officers. This state of affairs does not show any dissatisfaction on the part of the clubs, but rather emanates from the fact that the men who have served in that capacity have signified that the responsibilities of the positions have occupied too much of their time and have become too great to be borne continuously.

Frederick T. Adams, who has been the Commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club for the last two seasons, and who was one of the principal factors in the success of the club, has declined to serve again in that capacity, notwithstanding the efforts of the Nominating Committee, which requested that he serve for another year. Commodore Adams has declined, owing to the fact that his business requires his close attention during the coming year. It is probable that the nomination will be tendered to Benjamin M. Whitlock, present Vice Commodore.

Col. Austen, Secretary and Chairman of the Regatta Committee, has also signified his intention of retiring from active work in the club. Members feel that his loss to the club will be a serious one.

The ticket for the Larchmont Club has not as yet been made up, but rumors are rife that Commodore Postley, who has flown the blue pennant for the last three years, will retire. Commodore Postley has purchased the new twin-screw steam yacht Alberta, built last Summer for Mr. Edward A. Tower, and will spend the greater part of his leisure time on that craft, instead of the racing schooner Colonia, which, as the flagship of the Larchmonts, has won the lion's share of the prizes along the Sound during the last three years.

Commodore H. C. Rouse of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club has also signified his intention of retiring from the active management of that club. He probably will be succeeded by Colgate Hoyt, present Vice Commodore and owner of the steam yacht Tide.

CAPT. STERCKX INDICTED.

Georgeanna's Commander Gets Off with a Charge of Misdemeanor.

The United States Grand Jury found an indictment yesterday against Alphonse Sterckx, the charterer and Captain of the excursion steamboat Georgeanna, aboard which a riot, gambling, and a series of robberies occurred in this harbor on Oct. 7, the day of one of the international yacht races. The indictment simply charges a misdemeanor in operating the boat without a Government license, which is punishable under the Federal laws by a fine of $100. The Grand Jury, in a presentment which accompanies the indictment, says:

"The inquiry into the facts surrounding the alleged violation on the part of the said defendant shows to the Grand Jury that the conduct of the said Sterckx and others acting with him in the charge and management of the said steamboat, in wantonly permitting open and manifest gambling to be carried on without restraint on board said steamboat and assaults and robberies to be made upon various persons who were passengers thereon, and the open and lawless conduct of an irresponsible and vicious mob in turning the steamboat into a place for the perpetration of various offenses which amount to misdemeanors and felonies under common law, without restraint from and with apparent connivance of the said Sterckx and those associated with him in the management of the said boat, present facts for which there seems to be no jurisdiction in the Federal court to try or adequately punish."

To prevent similar occurrences in this and other ports of the United States the Grand Jury suggests that Section 4,488 of the Revised Statutes should be amended without

LEGAL NOTES.

INVALID BEQUEST.—By his will, made five days before his death, Bartholomew Fitzsimons gave the bulk of his estate to charitable and religious institutions. The bequest to the College of St. Francis Xavier, the principal legatee, yesterday was declared by Surrogate Varnum to be void, because in contravention of the provisions of the act of 1848. That statute declares that "no bequest to a religious corporation shall be valid in any will which shall not have been executed at least two months before the death of the testator." That act, not being a general law, has been held not to be binding upon corporations not organized under it, but St. Francis Xavier College was organized under the University act of 1813, and its amended charter, authorizing it to take real and personal property by will, makes it subject to all laws relating to devises and bequests. The bequests by the testator to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul are held to be valid, since by its charter it is not subject to the two months' provision.

PUBLIC LIGHTING.—A preliminary injunction order obtained at Special Term, in Kings County, by Joseph Blank in his suit as taxpayer, to restrain the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies of the City of New York from making contracts for the lighting of the streets and public places in any of the boroughs of the city until such contracts should have been expressly authorized by the Municipal Assembly, was recently reversed by the Appellate Division of the Second Department. Justice Willard Bartlett, giving the Court's opinion, held that it was the design of the framers of the charter that the Municipal Assembly should ordinarily exercise legislative powers over the subject of lighting, through the agency of ordinances of a general nature; while the administrative functions of the municipality in respect to lighting, involving a multitude of details, were to be in the hands of the Commissioner. If no such regulating ordinances as the charter provides for have been promulgated by the Municipal Assembly, the Court holds that the appropriate heads of departments can go on, nevertheless, and make such contracts as pertain to the ordinary administration of the City Government. "The public work or improvement" mentioned in Section 413 of the charter is held to relate rather to public works in the relation of betterments, and not at all to such a matter as public lighting, which must constantly be provided for from day to day and from month to month. The Court holds that the charter contemplates general rather than specific legislative action on the part of the Municipal Assembly for the regulation of contracts.

TITLE BY ADVERSE POSSESSION.—Lazard Kahn, on the first of April, 1898, contracted to purchase real estate in this city from Henry R. Mount for $22,250, and paid $1,000 for it on account. At the time of passing title Kahn was willing to pay the balance as agreed, but he refused to accept the title tendered on the ground that it was defective and unmarketable. He sued Mr. Mount for the $1,000 he had paid, and the expenses he claimed to have incurred in searching the title. In his answer Mr. Mount claimed the title was good, and asked that Kahn be directed to take title and pay the amount agreed upon. A judgment rendered on the trial at Special Term dismissing the complaint, with judgment for the defendant, directing specific performance of the contract, has been affirmed by the First Appellate Division. One of the alleged defects in the title was that Martinez Hegecamp, who owner the premises, at his death in 1833 had not disposed of it by will, and that Catherine Remsen, one of his three children, had not conveyed her interest in the premises to Mr. Mount or to any of his predecessors in title, and that such interest was still outstanding in her heirs. The Court holds, by Justice McLaughlin, that, as it was shown that the premises ever since 1853 had been occupied adversely to any claim on the part of Mrs. Remsen, who died intestate in 1879; that she never had been insane; that her two living daughters and three children of a deceased daughter were of full age and had been so for more than twenty years prior to the commencement of the action, and that the title of the defendant and his predecessors in interest from 1833 had not been disputed or questioned, good title had been acquired by adverse possession. No infants or insane persons, who, by conveyance or inheritance from Mrs. Remsen, could have any interest which had not been extinguished by the lapse of time. The other alleged defect was a party wall agreement, the covenants of which, the Court holds, were personal, did not run with the land, and were not binding upon the land itself.

VESTING OF TITLE IN NEXT OF KIN.—George P. Gordon, who died in January, 1878, by his will gave his residuary estate to his executors in trust, to invest and pay the income equally to his wife and daughter during their lives. At the death of either her share was to be paid to her issue, and if no issue living, the trust fund was to be disposed of according to a codicil which he stated in the will he contemplated executing, but which was never made. The will contained an imperative direction to his executors to sell all the testator's real and personal property as soon after his decease as it could be properly disposed of. The daughter died in May, 1890, and the widow in December of the same year, neither of them leaving issue. Eugene Gordon Doane brought an action against the Mercantile Trust Company, as executor and trustee under the will of Mary Agnes Gordon, the daughter, and others, to partition the testator's real estate in Brooklyn, including 155 Columbia Heights, but the complaint contained no allegation showing his right to bring such an action. He merely alleged his seizin of an interest in the real estate, with no facts to support it. A demurrer to the complaint, which was sustained by the Special Term and the Appellate Division of the Second Department, has now been affirmed by the Court of Appeals. The Court holds, Justice Bartlett giving the opinion, that under the direction of the will to sell the real and personal property, the real estate was converted into personalty at the death of the testator, and that the trust to invest the personal property and pay over the income, limited to lives, was no obstacle to the vesting of the principal fund in the testator's next of kin, as of the time of his death, in case of his intestacy as to the principal. The ultimate ownership of the principal was therefore to be deemed to have vested in the widow and daughter, as the testator's next of kin, as of the time of his death, to the exclusion of collateral relatives.

QUARANTINE OF COFFEE SHIPS.

Health Board Will Decide To-day as to Admitting Their Cargoes.

The Health Board failed again yesterday to reach a decision in the case of the coffee ships and their cargoes. After a secret meeting the Commissioners announced that they would hold another meeting this morning and announce their decision.

The steamer J. W. Taylor, which brought in the only cases of bubonic plague which have reached this port, sailed yesterday for Queenstown in command of her First Mate. She had been at Quarantine for nearly a month, and her cargo of coffee is now on lighters lying off Robbin's Reef. The steamer Lassell is still discharging her coffee in lighters, and the Ragusa and Roman Prince are awaiting at Quarntine the decision of the Health Board as to whether they may land their cargoes.

ORPHAN ASYLUM BLOCK SOLD.

Particulars of the Fifth Avenue Deal Withheld—Mr. Crimmins on Real Estate Investments.

The differences between the Committee of the Trustees of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum and the syndicate which has been negotiating for the purchase of the asylum block, at Fifth Avenue, Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, have, it is believed, been satisfactorily adjusted and the final contracts for the sale of the property will probably be signed within a day or two.

In any event, the state of the negotiations was such yesterday as to justify John D. Crimmins in making a statement that the property had been sold. Mr. Crimmins said that until final contracts had been signed he would not be at liberty to say anything in regard to the purchasers. They are, he added, a syndicate of which Richard M. Montgomery has acted as representative, although not the same syndicate as that with which the Trustees were negotiating when the sale of the property was prematurely reported about two months ago.

George D. Mackay, Chairman of the Committee of the Asylum Trustees, when questioned as to the status of the deed, recalled the premature reports referred to, and remarked that he had "stopped dealing in futures," and that when he sees a signed contract, he will be ready to talk. This, he said, would probably be within forty-eight hours.

Henry Seligman, whose name has been associated with the deal, said he was a member of the syndicate which has been negotiating for the property through Mr. Montgomery, but that as he had not seen the latter for several days, he could not speak as to the exact condition of affairs. Charles T. Barney, it is said, is also interested in the purchase.

The Madison Avenue front of the block will not pass into the hands of the syndicate. Regarding the price, no exact figures could be obtained yesterday, but it is known that for the entire block the asylum authorities have had an upset price of $2,500,000, and when the sale of the property was reported before, the consideration named was $2,550,000.

Commenting on the sale of the property, John D. Crimmins said:

"The syndicate purchasing the Orphan Asylum block, Fifth Avenue, Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, are considered men of the soundest judgment, many of the men having been identified with successful operations in real estate. In the face of the late decline in Stock Exchange securities, there can be no better evidence of confidence shown than in the purchasing of this block by men so well acquainted with general conditions.

"The substantial worth of real estate well located in this city as an investment, is occupying the minds of the most conservative men of wealth, and it may be expected that many in the near future will make investments in real estate, which when made, are not of the movable and fluctuating character of personal properties such as stocks."

SUES TO RECOVER $175,000.

Tradesmen's National Bank Brings Action Against Trust Company.

The Tradesmen's National Bank has brought a suit in the Supreme Court against the United States Trust Company to recover $175,000, claimed to have been obtained by false representations. John J. Adams, counsel for the plaintiff, moved yesterday before Justice Gildersleeve to strike out certain portions of the answer filed by the defendant corporation as irrelevant.

The large loans made by the bank to James Macnaughtan, who was its President for many years, ended in its suspending payment. The bank accepted as collateral security for a big loan stock valued at $510,000 of the Wool Exchange, an enterprise of Macnaughtan's. This sum was never actually paid in, Mr. Adams asserted, as capital of the Wool Exchange, and Macnaughtan got his brother, the Treasurer of the Wool Exchange, to draw a check on the bank for the $510,000, which certified it without ever really having received the money. He then took it to the United States Trust Company, the register of the Wool Exchange stock, which issued $500,000 of stock, and at the same time gave back a check payable to the order of the Cashier of the bank.

Then, Mr. Adams claimed, the United States Trust Company issued a certificate stating that $500,000 worth of stock in the Wool Exchange had been paid in, whereas nothing had in reality been paid. Justice Gildersleeve reserved decision.

FRANK D. CROFT RUN OVER.

Brother of Surveyor of the Port Injured by a Wagon in Harlem.

Frank D. Croft, brother of Surveyor of the Port Silas C. Croft, was knocked down by a horse attached to a milk wagon, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue yesterday, and severely injured. He was carried to his home, 32 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street.

Mr. Croft was crossing the street during a wind and rain storm. Having his umbrella raised, he did not see the horse until it ran into him. Two side wheels of the wagon passed over his legs. The driver then lashed his horse and escaped.

Mr. Croft's right leg was fractured at the ankle, the left leg badly lacerated, and the body bruised.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S COLLEGE.

Reception to Promote the Plan Held at the Catholic Club.

A reception to the Ladies' Auxiliary Board and the Associate Board of the proposed Trinity College for women at Washington was held at the Catholic Club yesterday afternoon. The object of the reception was to enable the members of the two boards to present to the Catholic families of New York an outline of the plan, and to enlist their sympathy. A large audience, made up principally of women, applauded speeches on the higher education of women by Archbishop Corrigan, who presided; United States Senator Carter, Miss Olive Risley Seward, and ex-Justice Joseph F. Daly.

Senator Carter said he hoped to see women taking up all branches of science in the near future. "If any man should say they could not discover new ideas in them," he said, "he ran away from home before his mother laid hold of him. Ignorance is not a necessary domestic virtue."

Miss Seward, speaking of the plan and scope of the institution, said it was a National affair, and would be under the charge of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, trained in American methods. Land had been purchased in Washington, ground broken, foundation and cornerstone laid, and the institution, the first of its kind in the world, in all probability would be opened on Oct. 1, 1900. A study had been made of all the prominent colleges for women, at home and abroad, and their best ideas would be used in the new institution.

SUDDEN DEATH ON BROADWAY.

Galveston Manufacturer and Austrian Consular Official Expires.

John Reymershoffer of Galveston, Texas, died suddenly in front of 812 Broadway yesterday afternoon. While out walking with his wife he complained of being ill and fell to the sidewalk. A call was sent to St. Vincent's Hospital for an ambulance, but before its arrival he died. The body was taken to the Mercer Street Station, where it was viewed by Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon, who said that he thought death was caused by Bright's disease. The remains will be sent to Galveston.

Mr. Reymershoffer was born in Austria fifty-six years ago. He came to this country when young, and for several years had been connected with the Austrian Consulate at Galveston. He was largely interested in the Texas Star Flour Mills at Galveston and also in cotton mills. He came to New York a week ago to meet his wife and daughter, who had spent the Summer in Europe and who returned on the steamer Trave.

Portrait of Whitelaw Reid.

While Whitelaw Reid was in France in the Autumn of 1898 the members of the staff of The Tribune conceived the idea of having his portrait painted for presentation to The Tribune Association. The suggestion was adopted, and Eastman Johnson was commissioned to make the picture. More than 200 persons, representing all departments of the paper, joined in supplying the sum of money required for the purpose, and most of these gathered yesterday in the main editorial room, where the portrait was informally presented to the association. It was afterward hung in The CAMPAIGN FOR THE CANALS.

Produce Exchange Committee Begins Its Work to Prevent the Loss of Trade to New York.

The "campaign of education" of the Canal Committee of the New York Produce Exchange was begun last evening by a meeting in the manager's room of the Exchange of the committee and representatives of commercial organizations of the city, together with members of the State Canal Commission. The session, which lasted two hours and a half, was private. When the meeting adjourned to 11 A. M. today Henry B. Hebert, Chairman of the Produce Exchange committee, said that, while no action had been taken, there had been a general discussion of the canal question, and that it was on a basis to harmonize action.

The Produce Exchange committee had made elaborate preparations for the conference, and those who attended it received a pamphlet on canal enlargement and a canal map, embracing the territory between Nova Scotia and St. Paul and Lake Superior, and the north of Kentucky, prepared under the direction of the committee. This pamphlet presented a summary and report on the diversion to other ports of inland commerce tributary to the Port of New York, the relation of the railroads to this diversion, and the practical means to restore to New York the commerce of the interior and permanently establish its preeminence in trade.

Those present representing the State Canal Commission were Col. J. N. Partridge, State Superintendent of Public Works; George E. Green, and John N. Scatchard. Also at the conference were representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and Transportation, the Merchants' Association, the Maritime Association, the International Steamship Companies, the Canal Boat Owners' Association, and the Mercantile Exchange.

On opening the proceedings Chairman Hebert made an address, in which he said that New York was suffering from loss of commerce, and that her competitors had traffic and terminal advantages which, if not nullified, would surely result in lowering the standard of this city as an importing, exporting, and financial centre. Of the Connors syndicate of Buffalo Mr. Hebert said:

"The Dominion of Canada is alive to the importance of securing, at the earliest possible moment, control of the export trade of the West, and we claim that once it is centred in Montreal it will be very difficult to divert it again to Buffalo and the Atlantic seaboard. Canada is most favorably situated for this traffic—with a canal system of 14 feet depth of water and only about 70 miles in length. Her position under certain conditions during the season of lake navigation is almost invulnerable—and that, doubtless, is what attracted the capital of the Connors syndicate.

"The purpose of this syndicate is not only to build up and enlarge the export trade of the Dominion via the Welland and St. Lawrence River Canals, but to make Montreal a competing point for Winter grain storage. This means a diversion of millions of bushels of grain from Buffalo, and is a great menace to that lake port in its monopoly of Winter storage. There is no reason why Montreal may not engage in this business and become a distributor of grain during the Winter months.

"Buffalo is directly interested in the outcome of the Connors deal. It means ultimate loss of trade to her merchants, and we may conclude that what is Buffalo's loss will be reflected in the decline of traffic on the various railroad systems that connect at that port. A nine-foot canal, in our judgment, will not counteract the Connors enterprise. This deal is probably but the beginning of other like schemes, as Quebec begins to have pretensions, and it may be only a question of time when that port will be in line for the commerce of the lakes."

A CHIVALROUS FOUR-YEAR-OLD.

Peter Jackson Ignores Broken Bones to Plead for Attention to His Little Girl Companion.

Peter Jackson, the four-year-old son of George Jackson of 433 West Fifty-fourth Street, and Agnes Sertingbecker, three years old, of 507 West Fifty-second Street, are playmates, and together attend the Industrial Kindergarten in Fifty-fourth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. Every morning Peter has been accustomed to call for the little girl and gallantly escort her to "school." Day after day they departed and returned without accident, until the parents of both felt certain that Peter was equal to any emergency and would keep Agnes and himself from harm.

The children left the kindergarten at noon yesterday to go home for luncheon. They got to Fifty-second Street and Tenth Avenue, where the street is torn up on account of the work of changing the motive power of the Tenth Avenue street-car line. There are a number of temporary bridges across the avenue over which the traffic at the noon hour is much congested. Peter waited until he thought it was safe to cross, and then, holding Agnes tightly by the hand, he essayed the trip.

Just then a baker's wagon bore down on them. Peter tried to turn back, but too late. Before he could pull his little companion to a place of safety he and she were trampled under the horse's hoofs and the wheels passed over them. The boy's left leg and left arm were fractured and he was seriously injured internally. Agnes had an arm broken and was also hurt internally.

When people ran to pick the children up Peter said: "I'm not hurt! It's Aggie. Please pick Aggie up. Her mamma told me to take care of her, and she'll be so scared."

Pretty soon an ambulance came, and the boy said to the surgeon: "Please, mister, look out for Aggie. I'm all right. It was only when Aggie" lay beside him in the ambulance that he would be quieted. They were placed side by side in little cots in Roosevelt Hospital, but later in the day Mrs. Sertingbecker called and took her little girl home. It is thought that both children will recover.

The driver of the wagon was arrested, but was paroled in the custody of his counsel by the Magistrate in the West Side Court pending the result of the children's injuries.

FOR A SUCCESSOR TO MR. PAYN.

Gov. Roosevelt Has a Number of Names Under Consideration as Superintendent of Insurance.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Gov. Roosevelt announced to-day that he was considering the names of Francis Hendricks of Syracuse, ex-Attorney General T. E. Hancock, also of Syracuse, and Hubert Cillis of New York City of the Germania Life Insurance Company, as candidates to succeed Louis F. Payn, State Superintendent of Insurance, whose term expires in February.

George W. Dunn of Binghamton, Railroad Commissioner, who was prominently mentioned as a candidate, is ineligible, because he holds office in an insurance company and has declined to sever his connections with the company. Both Messrs. Hendricks and Hancock saw the Governor today relative to the appointment.

The Governor declined to say whether in case the Senate confirmed his appointment of a successor to Superintendent Payn he would send in other nominations.

Later the Governor announced that he also had under consideration the name of Emmett Rhodes of Auburn, the representative there of the Equitable Life Assurance Company.

Subsequently ex-Senator Hendricks had a conference with the Governor, during which he said it would be impossible for him to accept the appointment on account of his private business.

New York Republicans were greatly interested yesterday in the reports from Albany that Gov. Roosevelt was considering the question of a successor to Superintendent Payn. It is understood that the Govin place of the present head of the Insurance Department, and there is much speculation as to who the appointee will be.

Superintendent Payn was in the city last night. When asked about the report that he was to be superseded, he said: "I know nothing about it. I am not in politics now, but am attending strictly to the business of my department."

It is asserted that the Governor could not expect the votes of any Democratic Senators to support his nominee, but a Tammany Senator declared yesterday that the Democratic Senators would not assist in any attempt to hold up one of the Governor's nominations. Well-posted politicians have expressed the opinion that the Senate will vote to confirm any man to succeed Payn whose name is sent in by Gov. Roosevelt. They argue that the majority of the Senators will be candidates next Fall for re-election, and are anxious to pass their local bills during the coming session. They add that a Senator who would oppose the Governor's wishes would not expect him to sign any local measures in which that Senator was interested.

Mr. Payn's friends feel very bitter over the matter, but they do not see any chance of defeating the Governor's will. They will not discuss the matter publicly, but in their confidential talks they make no secret of their determination to even the score when a favorable opportunity presents itself.

Child Ate Pills and Died.

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 12.—James Lorde, aged three years, died to-night as the result of eating twenty-one pills, which he found in his home. The pills were manufactured by a Brooklyn firm, and the boy's father had the agency for them here. Physicians were summoned at once, but the child died before their arrival. The physicians said the symptoms resembled those of strychnine poisoning.

RECALLS THE WEYLER REGIME.

Story Told by the Widow of Gen. Juan Lopez, Who Is on Her Way to Cuba with Her Children.

A story recalling the terrors of the Weyler régime in Cuba came out yesterday at the Barge Office, when the immigration officials took up the case of a Cuban woman and her children, who had arrived Monday on the steamship Wordsworth from Rio Janeiro, and who were bound for Havana. The woman was Señora Carmina Lopez and her children were Antonio, fourteen years old, and José, Albert, and Olga, ranging from eleven years down to four.

They were an uncommon family in appearance as compared with the army of Europe's peasantry which daily fills the place. They were well dressed and bore the evidences of the environment of wealth and culture. The señora was of middle age and of the characteristic Cuban type of woman, small in stature, her eyes large and black. The investigation showed that the woman was the widow of Gen. Juan Lopez, who was one of Weyler's victims, shot in the courtyard of the Cabanas for being a sympathizer with the cause of Cuba libre.

Gen. Lopez was the owner of a plantation about seven hours' ride on horseback from Havana. He was traveling when arrested and thrown into prison. Three days later his wife was torn from her home and children and put in the Cabanas. The children were placed in an institution in Havana. The entire family was never again to be together, for soon afterward the General was one of a batch of unfortunates led from their cells to be shot down by Weyler's soldiers.

Two months passed, and it was then through the tender solicitude of the nuns who had the privilege of going through the Cabanas that a means was devised by which Señora Lopez should escape. Two Sisters who had been in the United States had taken a particular interest in the position in which they found Señora Lopez. They were Sisters Geraldine and Marie. The scheme which they helped her to evolve was simple in conception but hazardous in execution.

Sister Geraldine was to visit the prison on a certain date, wearing two suits of nun's habit. The Señora was to done one of them and pass out. Sister Geraldine was to leave later, trusting to the frequence with which the nuns went to and fro to having the extra one pass without arousing suspicion.

There was an Argentine war vessel lying in the Harbor of Havana at that time. Just how the Sisters managed it is not known to the beneficiaries of their good work, but when the day came and the nun's dress had been assumed by Señora Lopez and she had passed safely out of her prison, she found at a prearranged rendezvous a guide, who took her off to the Argentina man-of-war, and when she was safe aboard she was suddenly surrounded by her flock of little ones.

The sisters had arranged that, too. The children had been brought from the institution, which happened to be that with which they were connected, and so when the warship sailed away, bound for Argentina, the mother and children went also. They were landed at Buenos Ayres, whence they proceeded to Rio Janeiro, where Señora Lopez had friends connected with the Government. This all happened three years ago.

Through her friends, the mother secured pupils whom she taught music, and thus helped to maintain her little ones. Latterly, the Spaniards having been driven from Cuba and affairs having become settled under the United States control, her friends were of the opinion that the property of her husband confiscated by the Spaniards might now be reclaimed.

The family arrived here with but little money; not enough, in fact, to pay their way to Havana, and the mother was in sore stress of mind when her case came to the attention of Father Henry of the Irish Immigrant Home. He immediately took them all to the mission home on State Street and later in the day secured tickets for them to proceed to Cuba by to-day's steamer.

INSURANCE COMPANIES WIN.

Ohio Supreme Court Dismisses Suits Against Alleged Combine.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 12.—The Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision dismissing the ouster suits brought by the Attorney General against the following insurance companies on the grounds that they had combined to fix rates:

St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company of Minnesota, Western Insurance Company, British-American Insurance Company, Home Insurance Company, Royal Insurance Company, Liverpool and London Insurance Company, London and Lancastershire Insurance Company, North British and Mercantile Insurance Company, Caledonia Insurance Company, Manchester Fire Insurance Company, and the Buffalo German Insurance Company.

The court dismisses the suits on the grounds that the evidence does not support the petition of the Attorney General. A similar suit against the fire underwriters is still pending.

PUGILIST DEFEATS HIMSELF.

"Jack" Moffatt, Middleweight, Broke His Arm on Opponent.

Only the force of his own blows was responsible last night for the defeat of Jack Moffatt of Chicago, in what was to have been a twenty-five-round bout at 154 pounds, with George Gardiner of Lowell, Mass., at the Broadway Athletic Club. The bout did not go further than the seventh round, for in that round Moffatt landed a left swing on Gardiner's head that broke his arm. Up to that time he had much the better of the fight.

Moffatt was anxious to continue the fight, and came up smiling at the call of time for the eighth round, but when Referee Charley White found that the arm was broken, he refused to let the bout proceed, and gave the decision to Gardiner.

INTERSCHOLASTIC ATHLETICS.

Association Urged to Take in Richmond and Bronx Schools.

The suggestion that the Interscholastic Athletic Association take in the schools in the Boroughs of Richmond and the Bronx was favorably received at a meeting of the association held at the Berkeley School, Madison Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, yesterday. A committee was appointed to confer with the Brooklyn association for an inter-city meet.

It was proposed to include in the list of sports over which the association will have jurisdiction skating and basket ball. The barring out as competitors in sports any student who may attend school under a scholarship was recommended. The report of the committee advised that the by-laws be changed so that hockey be governed by the rules of 1898 and basket ball according to the Young Men's Christian Association rules. The assignment of teams for the hockey schedule was adopted.

COLUMBIA BEATEN AT HOCKEY.

St. Nicholas Club Victors by a Score of 5 to 0.

The St. Nicholas Hockey Club team made a splendid showing last night at the St. Nicholas Skating Rink in a match with the hocky team of Columbia University. It was an exciting game, because of the strenuous but ineffectual efforts of the Columbia men to keep their opponents from scoring.

The St. Nicholas men, especially Barron, had the ball in hand from the start to the finish. In the first half they scored four goals, and in the second half of the play they added another. The Columbia men failed to score. The line up:

St. Nicholas.	Position.	Columbia.
Hayward	Goal	Glechen, Hudson
Campbell, Mortimer	Point	Lawrence
Miller	Cover Point	O'Dwyer
Conway	Forward	Henderson
Callender	Forward	Eyer
D. Gordon, K. Gordon	Forward	De Witt
Barron	Forward	Weeks, Wolf

Referee—Howard Walton. Score—St. Nicholas, 5; Columbia, 0.

BROOKLYN GUN CLUB TOURNEY.

Gale Aided Live Birds to Puzzle Expert Trap Shooters.

Notwithstanding the gale that swept across the plateau and the series of rain squalls that made the day particularly unpleasant from the trap-shooter's viewpoint, the special all-day shoot at live birds under the auspices of the Brooklyn Gun Club, at Dexter Park, proved thoroughly enjoyable to the large crowd of experts who assembled in response to the invitation of John Wright, the club Treasurer. Many club members were in evidence, and the birds, assisted by the strong wind, were the best that have been released from the traps this season. Nine events were decided before darkness brought the day's sport to a close. The scores:

First Event.—Miss and out; $2 entrance; all shooters to stand at 30 yards.—Feigenspan, 4; Banks, 4; Thompson 2; Moffey, 0.
Second Event.—Miss and out; same conditions.—Morfey, 2; Feigenspan, 2; Banks, 1; Thompson, 0.
Third Event.—Miss and out; same conditions.—Morfey, 3; Banks, 6; O. T. Roof, 6; Wise, 4; Remsen, 2.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Out of Town.

PAUL BLACKMAR.—Paul Blackmar, Director of Affairs under Commissioner General Peck for the Paris Exposition, confessed insolvency yesterday at Chicago and asked to be discharged of debts aggregating $33,126. His only assets are personal effects.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

MAX TURTELTAUB.—Max Turteltaub, residing at 668 East One Hundred and Forty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $852 and no assets. He was formerly in a picture frame business at Newark.

JONES & FRANK.—Daniel Jones and Hyman Frank, composing the firm of Jones & Frank, formerly at 72 Catharine Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $3,162 and no assets. The debts were incurred ten years ago.

T. B. MULLAN.—Judge Brown of the United States District Court has appointed Benjamin Barker receiver of the property of Thomas B. Mullan, grocer, of 1,477 Third Avenue, Manhattan, and 540 Sixth Avenue, Brooklyn, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed by creditors on the 5th inst.

W. E. SMITH.—William E. Smith, salesman, at 203 Pearl Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $10,737 and no assets. The debts are to two creditors, and were contracted as a partner in the firm of Pulver & Smith, wholesale dealers in leaf tobacco, formerly at 120 Water Street, five years ago.

JAMES HANSE.—James Hanse of 34 Park Row, a private detective, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $18,215 and no assets. He was formerly a partner in the firms of Hanse & Immig and Deering, Bergen & Co., dealers in plumbers' supplies, who dissolved in January, 1894, and all his debts are in connection with those two firms.

LOUIS C. EISEN.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Louis C. Eisen, grocer, of 88 Ridge Street, by two creditors—Hyman Blumberg, $440, and Samuel Lipshitz, $178. They allege that on Dec. 11 he transferred his stock of groceries and store fixtures by bills of sale to Jacob Kulla and Jacob Cohen for a pretended consideration. He has been in business since July, 1897.

SAMUEL FEINBERG.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Samuel Feinberg by the following creditors: M. Joseph & Co., $179; Cohen & Fine, $232; H. A. Rosenfeld & Co., $100, and Freedman & Co., $84. They allege that on Dec. 9 he admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts and a willingness to be adjudged bankrupt on that ground. It is said Mr. Feinberg was formerly in business at North Adams and Athol, Mass.

A. & H. ROSINSKY.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Annie and Hyman Rosinsky, doing business as A. & H. Rosinsky, manufacturers of cloaks at 371 Canal Street, by Hyman Brankea and others, for $800 unpaid wages due to thirteen workmen. They allege that on Dec. 9 the firm disposed of nearly all their assets, have not paid wages to workmen for three weeks, and are absent from the State and in hiding. They have been in business since February, 1897. Benjamin Barker has been appointed receiver of their property by Judge Brown of the United States District Court.

D. F. DEIKE & SON.—Henry and Edward H. Deike, doing business as D. F. Deike & Son, manufacturers of glue and gelatine at 602 and 604 West Forty-second Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with firm liabilities of $50,206 and firm assets of $31,173. Their place was known as the Knickerbocker Glue Works, and they had a branch office in Boston for several years. The business was established in 1827 by their father, Diederich F. Deike, who died in 1858, and the sons have carried on the business since. Henry Deike has individual liabilities of $7,538, secured, and assets consisting of a house at Mount Vernon valued at $8,000, mortgaged for $7,270. Edward Deike has individual liabilities of $13,280, secured, and no assets. The firm assets consist of machinery, $10,000; book accounts, $18,707; stock in trade, $1,500; horses and wagons, $750, and cash, $218. They have been reported slow pay for some time past on account of difficulty in collecting their accounts. Among the creditors are the West Side Bank, $12,000; John H. Mantz, $11,000; Anne C. Gobber, $9,934, and George Crowell, $3,190.

OF JOPLIN, MO.

CAPITAL STOCK - - $1,000,000

Divided into 1,000,000 Shares, Par Value $1.00 Each, Full-Paid and Non-Assessable.

This is the only zinc company in this country having its accounts supervised by chartered accountants, who also issue and certify as correct regular quarterly statements of earnings and profits.

Present actual net earnings 22 per cent per annum; the completion of four new 100-ton mills now under contract and in course of construction will increase this to 42 per cent on the entire capital.

300,000 SHARES Are Now Offered for Public Subscription at 75c. PER SHARE

To complete the balance of the purchase price and pay for the four new mills to be erected.

Beginning Jan. 1st, 1900, this company will pay regular monthly dividends of one per cent, with such extra dividends from time to time as the condition of the company shall warrant.

The company being in a paying position from the start, with immediate vast increase in its earnings assured, offers investors an unequalled opportunity of large returns, and practical certainty of rapid growth in the value of their holdings.

SEND FOR PROSPECTUS containing full details of the company's properties and earnings as certified by BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & CO., Chartered Accountants of New York, Boston, London, and Manchester, England.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS

The Magdeburg Fire Insurance Company of Germany has applied for admission to West Virginia.

A movement is on foot for the organization of a State association of local fire insurance agents in Massachusetts.

Negotiations are pending for the reinsurance of the Western business of the Traders' Fire Insurance Company of New York in the Palatine Insurance Company of Manchester, England. The Western department of the Traders' will be continued.

Orson Smith and Frank Lowden of Chicago have been added to the United States Board of Trustees of the London Guarantee and Accident Company to fill the vacancies caused by the deaths of ex-Gov. Ames of Massachusetts and George H. Wheeler of Chicago.

The Aachen and Munich Insurance Company of Germany has made an additional deposit of $50,000 in Cuba to comply with the new requirement increasing the deposit from $25,000 to $75,000. The company has also made its preparations for entering Mexico, including the appointment of a general agent in the City of Mexico for that country.

A formal announcement to underwriters has been issued by General Manager Burnett of the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company of London and Edinburgh that E. G. Richards will become his American manager on Jan. 1, and that Henry E. Bowers, who retires at that time, has been added to the New York Board of Directors of the company.

W. Peel Dawson, the London manager of the American branch of the Imperial Insurance Company of London, who has been in this city for several weeks inspecting the business of the company, will sail for England to-day. He will be accompanied by J. J. Courtney, the New York manager, and in the latter's absence T. D. Beifield of the Southern department will be in charge of the metropolitan office.

The insurance on the property of Josephine Slosson, at 19 John Street, which was damaged by fire Monday, was distributed as follows: On building—Agricultural, $2,500; United Fire, $2,500; Capital, $2,500; Continental, $2,500; Lumbermen's, $2,500; American Central, $2,500; North American of Boston, $2,500; Traders' of New York, $2,500; Magdeburg, $2,500; Commercial Union, $2,500; Newark, $2,500; Scottish Union and National, $2,000; Erie, $1,750; Security, $1,500. On machinery—American of New York, $2,000; Orient, $2,000. William J. Swan will adjust the loss.

Agent Charges Breach of Contract.

A damage suit for $378,000 for alleged breach of contract was commenced yesterday in the Supreme Court against the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, having offices in this city at 31 Nassau Street. The plaintiff is Arthur A. Mosher, who until recently was the manager of the Eastern department of the company. He alleges that in January, 1899, the company canceled the contract between them, and about the same time entered into an agreement with the Inter-State Casualty Company of this State, by which the Pacific Mutual took over all the business done by the Inter-State with the agents then in its employ. Mosher claims that he was damaged to the extent of $378,000 by the cancellation of the contract.

MARKET CONDITIONS.

A narrower market and a steadier one was in evidence yesterday. Liquidation did not further show on any consequential scale, and even operators for a decline seemed content to spend the day passively. Some covering of shorts showed, and there was some profit taking on purchases made in Monday's hysterical upset. Any new move, upon one side or the other, was undiscoverable.

Money market conditions were not in nervous state. Call rates were stiff on security market collateral, and sterling exchange rates staid close to gold exporting point. But in no important quarter does there now show any especial apprehension that ill-effects would be imposed by the shipment abroad of a moderate amount of gold. The country has the metal to spare—and it could be exported as just so much metal, as a commodity, classed as grain or provisions or cotton—part of regular National products.

Wall Street—the speculative contingent, at least—might work itself into passing excitement over gold shipments, but professional Wall Street is capable of that sort of performance on any account whatsoever—and such exhibitions prove not one thing that can do have been $5,977,200, an increase over the same period last year of $803,800.

In the case of Southern Railway, the earnings for the first week in December were $98,500, and since July 1 $13,780,500—a gain in the former case of $90,600 and in the latter of $1,488,460.

Missouri Pacific's increase for the first week in December was $17,000, with total earnings of $566,000, while since Jan. 1 the earnings have been $26,082,500, with an increase of $1,231,300.

GAS STOCKS DECLINE.

There was little new in the gas situation yesterday, save in respect to the trading in the stocks, which, though quiet, developed weakness in all the stocks.

On the Stock Exchange, where Consolidated Gas is traded in, that stock declined a full point and a half on the growing belief that the next meeting of the Directors the dividend will be passed.

SMALL BOND OFFERINGS.

The total disbursements at the Sub-Treasury yesterday for bonds were $454.16.

As for the past week, so yesterday, the bondholders were said to be in a waiting mood, still believing that Secretary Gage will shortly come forward with another offer of purchase.

ANTI-TRUST AGITATIONS.

The news that a very strong anti-trust bill had been introduced in the Virginia Legislature, following so soon after the Addyston Pipe case decision and the President's anti-trust reference, had rather a dispiriting influence in Wall Street yesterday. The action of the Virginia lawmakers seemed in some parts of the Street to be regarded as a forerunner of similar action in other States. Indeed, the Street even heard that anti-trust measures in other States were already being taken.

Not unnaturally the bears made what capital they could out of this new-found source of apprehension and fear.

DIRECTORS ARE CHEERFUL.

Notwithstanding the predictions to the contrary and the rather direful tales which from time to time have been heard affecting the property, the Executive Committee of the Western Union Telegraph Company has recommended the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent.

Directors of the company say that any report that their business is falling off is simply made out of whole cloth.

MANHATTAN DIVIDEND.

The Manhattan Railway Company's Directors declared yesterday the regular quarterly dividend of 1 per cent. It is payable Jan. 2. The books will be closed Dec. 15 and reopened Jan. 3. With the announcement of the dividend came the statement of Treasurer D. W. McWilliams that the dividend was declared on the company's earnings of a little over 1¼ per cent. on the stock. Of the dividend Russell Sage said: "It was more than earned. There should be no doubt of that. At the meeting we had Treasurer McWilliams's statement to this effect in writing. The meeting of the Executive Committee was an entirely satisfactory one. Everything was reported as in the most encouraging condition, with all the progress that can be expected in a work of such magnitude and cost toward electrical equipment. All the Directors were satisfied."

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend recommended by Western Union's Executive Committee.

Increase of $4,653,534 in exports of general merchandise from the port of New York for the week, as compared with the previous week, and increase of $1,533,296, as compared with the corresponding week last year.

According to Philadelphia advices, the ore railroad shipping docks at the head of the Lakes broke all records for November.

Said to be good authority for the statement that the Standard Oil Company has anticipated its dividend, which would ordinarily have been paid the latter part of this month.

First making-up day in the fortnightly settlement in the London market.

Falling off from 86,722 tons to 81,795 tons in east-bound shipments of dead freight from Chicago last week, attributed to the increase in freight rates.

Declaration of regular Manhattan quarterly dividend of 1 per cent.

Deficit of $1,254,075 shown by statement of outside banks, a decrease of $563,050, as compared with the previous week.

Capital of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Railway to be increased to $10,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the Davis Coal and Coke Company.

Increase of $21,408 in Colorado Midland's net earnings for October, making an increase of $57,942 since July 1.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call was 4@8 per cent., closing at 4 per cent.

Time money, 6 per cent. for all periods. Mercantile paper, 5½ per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $270,995,134; balance, $108,259,970; Sub-Treasury debit balance $181,510.

Money on call in London, 4½@5 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short and three months' bills is 6 per cent.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £17,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 228.50; Madrid, 28; Lisbon, 42.50; Rome, 2.50.

Spanish 4s closed at 66¾.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Prices opened weak on the Bourse to-day, owing to the unfavorable political and money situations. International securities declined. Rio Tintos were freely offered, but closed very weak on account of the indications of weakness in copper in the United States. Kafirs reopened, under sales due to unfavorable rumors in regard to the military situation in South Africa. Three per cent. rentes, 100f 50c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 31½c for checks. Spanish 4s, 72.35.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—Prices on the Boerse to-day opened fairly steady. Iron and coal mine shares improved, and Americans and Canadian Pacific were well maintained. The closing was dull, on the advance of check rate. Exchange on London, 20 marks 52 pfennigs for checks.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 12.—Prices on the Boerse opened fairly active on Berlin buying orders for local securities. The closing was easier, on discouraging advices from Western Boersen.

MADRID, Dec. 12.—Spanish 4s closed today at 75.90. Gold was quoted at 27.05.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Transactions in the market for outside securities yesterday were in smaller amount than on Monday, and prices were also less irregular. Recoveries at the close of the previous day were followed by reactions at the opening of the market yesterday, but the movements were less sharp. Later in the day the market became steady, and closed fairly strong in most quarters. Final quotations showed a few net gains for the day, but in most cases closing bids were slightly below those of the previous day. Amalgamated Copper was again the most active stock, with the exception of Bay State Gas, and in most other issues trading was confined to a few hundred shares. Distilling of America was the most active of the industrial stocks.

AMALGAMATED COPPER followed a course very similar to that which marked trading in it on the previous day, selling off sharply early in the day, and recovering during the afternoon. It opened at 80½, a half point advance, but as the stock was freely supplied above 80, the price soon dropped off a point, the lowest price touched being 79⅝. Sales on the decline amounted to about 2,000 shares, and on the purchase of about half of this amount of stock all the loss was recovered, and the price went a little above the best figure of the morning. Final sales were made at 80¾, and the closing bid was 80½, a net gain of half a point. Brokers stated that there was good buying of the issue, and as traders did not attack the stock, this buying resulted in the much stronger tone which Amalgamated showed at the close.

NEW AMSTERDAM GAS was weak, and both issues of the stock suffered substantial net losses. Sales in the common stock were made as low as 20¾, odd lots selling as low as 20½. Offerings of the preferred stock met with very little demand. Several lots of this issue were in the market at 46, the best bid at the close being 44, a decline of 2 points. Transactions in the bonds were only in small amount, and were made at 93½, the price at which they had sold on the previous day. Traders seem to be working on the bear side in the local gas stocks traded in on the curb. Bearish feeling in regard to these stocks has been increased by the developments of the past week, and the general feeling is that no settlement of the war can be looked for for some time to come.

STANDARD GAS preferred was weak. Several transactions in half lots of the stock were made at a decline of 10 points from the last sale, which was made late last week. Sales amounted to about 150 shares, all of which changed hands at 125.

BAY STATE GAS was active, but in less demand than recently has been the case, and the sales made brought about a decline to 1⅜. Over 1,000 shares changed hands at this figure just at the close, and the stock was freely offered at 1½.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA common sold down to 7½, and closed at 7⅜ bid, a net loss of five-eighths of a point. In the preferred stock, transactions in which amounted to about 500 shares, the prices ranged between 27½ and 27, and it was offered at the close at 27½, showing a net loss of 1 point.

COTTON.—With the exception of an occasional spurt of activity, speculation in the cotton market was the smallest in weeks, probably months. Commission house brokers had very few orders when the market opened, foreign representatives were quite purposeless, while traders for Southern interests were handicapped by an almost demoralized wire service to points south and west of Augusta. The market made a fairly steady start, with prices 1@4 points lower, latter in sympathy with unfavorable English cables. Before midday prices had sagged an additional 2@3 points on most positions. Scalpers were in absolute possession of the pit a good portion of the time, but were indifferent in the absence of incentive. The market at the close was steady, with prices 1@4 points higher. Southern spot markets were officially reported by wire as follows: Mobile, 7 3-16c; Savannah, 7¼c; Charleston, 7¼c; Wilmington, 7¼c; Norfolk, 7¾c; Baltimore, 7 11-16c; Augusta, 7⅞c; Memphis, 7⅞c.

WOOL.—BOSTON, Dec. 12.—The tone in the wool market was quieter this week, although sales foot up to a large average. Values, as a rule, are even stronger than last week, and dealers are sanguine that the top has not been reached yet. Territory wools continue to lead, and it is difficult to find any good or fine, medium, and fine below the scoured basis of 60c, and the range is up to 64½@65c, while many holders will not sell at this figure, but are asking several cents higher. Fleece wools are held firm, but few washed lots are being sold. The following are the quotations for leading descriptions: Ohio and Pennsylvania Fleeces—X and above, 38@39c; No. 1 and No. 2, 35@36c; delaine, 38@40c; No. 1 combing, 37@38c; No. 2 do, 35@36c. BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The market for wheat was a narrow one. For the entire session the variation in prices was only a fraction of ½c. The market opened a trace steadier, with May wheat at 74⅝c, against 74½c, the closing of the previous day. An easier feeling soon set in, as there was an entire absence of outside support, a fact partly explained by the derangement of the wire service, particularly in the West and South, which hindered orders. Before noon local selling carried the price from 74⅜ to 74½c. The news at hand during the forenoon lacked positive feature. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board, afloat, basis, were as follows: No. 2 red, 74c, spot; No. 1 hard, Manitoba, 79¾c, spot; No. 1 hard, Manitoba, 80¾c, early January; No. 1 hard, Duluth, 80¾c, Dec. 15 to 20; No. 1 hard, Duluth, 80¾c, early January; No. 1 hard, New York, 78¾c, spot; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 78¾c, nominal; No. 1 Northern, New York, 78¾c, spot; No. 2 Northern, Duluth, 76½c, to arrive.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 12.—Wheat, in store, No. 1 Northern, December, 62¾c; May, 66½c; July, 67¼@67⅝c. On track: No. 1 hard, 66⅝c; No. 1 Northern, 65c; No. 2 Northern, 61¾c.

COFFEE.—Following the selling movement in Brazilian coffee futures noted Monday, there was a quiet market at the opening yesterday morning, with prices declining 5@10 points on the call. Mixed with local selling there was some selling for foreign account, the explanation of which was the generally unfavorable run of the cable news, including large receipts at Brazilian ports, Havre, Hamburg, Rio, and Santos markets were all lower. The weakness extended to the local spot market, and reports from "the Street" had also had a depressing effect. Business was slack, and by noon sales had reached only 12,000 bags, with the market at that hour till showing the opening loss of 5@10 points. In the afternoon the situation was not materially changed. The market closed quiet at a net loss of 10@15 points. Total sales were 13,000 bags.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
December	5.95	5.95	5.95	5.80@5.83

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—GEORGE MACCULLOCH MILLER and another as trustees, etc., plaintiffs, against FRANKLIN NOBLE and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the 18th day of November, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 4th of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by McVickar and Company, auctioneers, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the building thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Second Ward of the City of New York, designated on a Map filed in the County Clerk's Office as Lot 4, Number Seven, to which lot with the building thereon is known as Number Two Hundred and Thirty-three (233) Front Street, bounded northwesterly in front by Front Street, southeasterly in the rear by lot marked Number Six upon the above-mentioned Map, northeasterly by a lot of ground formerly leased by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New York to David Lydig, and by the said Corporation leased to the executrix and executors of the last will and testament of Philip M. Lydig, deceased, by indenture of lease bearing date the first day of July, in the year 1876; southwesterly by a lot of ground formerly belonging to Thomas Hillen, Jr., containing in breadth in front and rear Twenty-eight (28) feet, three (3) inches, and in depth on the northeasterly side Thirty-seven (37) feet and four (4) inches, and on the southwesterly side Thirty-eight (38) feet, three (3) inches, be the said several dimensions more or less. Being the same premises which were conveyed to Samuel H. Drew, one of the parties of the first part to said mortgage, by William J. Roome and wife and Leslie M. Daniel, by deed of conveyance bearing date the sixteenth day of June, 1862.

The above mortgaged premises being subject to a certain agreement dated February 13, 1862, made between William J. Roome and others and Dennis Doyle, recorded March 3, 1862, Liber 9 of Conveyances, Section 1, Page 332, affecting the northerly wall of said premises.—Dated New York, December 13th, 1899.

THREE TRAINS WRECKED

Fatal Early Morning Crash on the Pennsylvania Road.

RAN ON DIFFERENT TRACKS

Engineer, Fireman, and a Brakeman Killed—Accident Near Schalk's Station.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 12.—Three lives were lost as the result of a freight train wreck which piled the cars of three freight trains in a heap and blocked the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad for several hours near Schalk's Station early this morning. The trains involved were running on different tracks.

The killed are:

SPEIGLER, CHARLES, engineer, of Jersey City.
HEINCKER, JOHN M., fireman, of Newark.
ZEGBAUM, HENRY, brakeman, of Elizabeth.

The engineer and fireman were dead when taken out of the wreck. Zegbaum was scalded, and was taken to the Wells Hospital, in New Brunswick, where he died at 10 o'clock this morning. He was thirty-five years old. He leaves a wife and two children. Heincker was twenty-one years old and was unmarried.

A coupling between two cars midway in Schedule Train No. 442, west-bound, parted. The engine with the first part of the train speeded on until it was some distance in the lead. Near Schalk's Station the engineer got his train slowed down. He felt that the detached section would be well under control by that time, but it crashed into the first section. The impact forced the first section along the track at bounding speed, but derailed the first car of the second section.

That started the trouble. A half dozen cars were thrown over on the east-bound freight track, directly against the twelfth car of the passing extra freight train No. 1,665, east-bound. The twelfth car and those following it were hurled over into Track No. 1. On that track a special fast freight train, No. 942, was running east, and a minute later plunged into the wrecked cars of Train No. 1,665, adding its engine and a heap of cars to the débris.

The engineer and firemen of the first east-bound train were the ones instantly killed. Zegbaum, the head brakeman of that train, was standing on top of a car when the crash occurred. He was caught under the engine.

In all thirty cars with the freight they contained were piled over the four tracks of the road. The wreck blocked through traffic until about 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. The first train to get through was the Chicago Limited. The engineer of this train was John A. Heincker, father of the fireman who was killed in the wreck.

Assistant Freight Train Master Shepp of the Pennsylvania Railroad, by order of General Manager Frank L. Sheppard, gave out the official statement of the wreck.

THE TILE TRUST SUIT.

Non-Members Tell of the Difficulty in Buying Goods.

Alfred Steckler, counsel for Peter J. Kiernan, who is suing the Tile, Grate, and Mantel Association of New York in the Supreme Court for $25,000 for ruining his business by an alleged boycott, expressed himself yesterday as well satisfied with the evidence obtained during the day.

Kiernan was again taken in hand by counsel for the defense and was subjected to a lengthy cross-examination to break down his direct testimony. He denied Treasurer Kohler of the American Encaustic Tiling Company ever told him his trade was undesirable. When the witness was asked whether he had not been dunned by Robert Rossman to pay his debts he replied: "I told Mr Rossman I would not pay him until he promised to sell me tiles. He did promise and I paid him $25 on account, but he still refused to sell me anything."

Benedickt Fischer, President of the American Encaustic Tiling Company, swore the first time he ever saw a copy of the association's constitution and by-laws was about ten days ago. He had never met any tile manufacturers at meetings of the association, and he did not know whether or not his company paid dues to the association. Witness said he was always willing to sell to any one who paid his bills, whether such person was a member of the association or not.

Emil Kohler, Treasurer of the American Encaustic Tiling Company, swore he had never been ordered not to sell goods to non-members. When asked whether his company refused to sell tiles to non-members Mr. Kohler said they would not sell to all strangers, even for cash. They refused to sell to Kiernan because he was not prompt in paying his bills.

The next witness, Henry Wright, a tile setter, said before 1897 he could buy tiles wherever he wanted, but afterward Mr. Kohler had refused to sell to him. He applied to Mr. Rossman, who also refused to sell when he learned that witness was not a member of the association.

John Walsh, a fender maker, said that, although he had been expelled from the association, he was able to buy tiles from one of the members.

"Did you not get the tiles through a third party?" asked Mr. Steckler. Witness admitted having done so. The case will be continued to-day.

Quality

It is the high quality of Royal Baking Powder that has established its great and world-wide reputation.

Every housewife knows she can rely upon it; that it makes the bread and biscuit more delicious and wholesome—always the finest that can be baked.

Never experiment with so important an article as the human food

It is economy and every way better to use the Royal, whose work is always certain, never experimental.

There are many imitation baking powders, made from alum. They may cost less per pound, but their use is at the cost of health.

A VERDICT AGAINST CRIMPS.

Position of Shipping Commissioner Dickey Sustained in a Case Tried in Maryland.

Shipping Commissioner Dickey yesterday received from Commissioner of Navigation E. T. Chamberlain at Washington, copies of a report of the United States District Attorney of the Maryland District on a recent verdict in the matter of shipping seamen.

The case was against three crimps, each being fined $100. The crimps had shipped the men on a British vessel on a sliding scale of wages, the men to receive the nominal sum of 1s. for the first ten days, and $25 a month thereafter. The crimps received $8 a head for providing the vessel with the men. The voyage was one of only fourteen days, and the seamen received $3.17 each for their services. The Court instructed the jury that if it was satisfied that the contract as to the shilling was not the real and genuine contract, but a device to conceal a breach of the law, the verdict should be guilty. The jury came to a verdict of guilty in five minutes.

Commissioner Dickey was much pleased with the decision, as it is in accord with the stand which he has taken ever since the new shipping law went into effect. The law establishes the conditions under which a seaman may allot a portion of his wages for debts contracted before sailing, and forbids the acceptance by any one of any remuneration for shipping a seaman, either from the seaman or any one acting in his behalf. Despite all safeguards thrown about the procedure of shipping seamen by the law and the regulations which the Commissioner of Navigation is empowered to make and has made, it is generally understood that the crimps, aided and abetted by other parties interested in the contracts, have succeeded in evading the law.

In the case of seamen shipping on American vessels it is known that the sailor has been benefited by the operation of the law and the fights which grew out of its inauguration between shipping masters and owners, despite evasions, but in the case of British vessels there is said to have been no improvement. This has been in part due to the difficulty of getting at the facts, as the seamen on British vessels are shipped by the British Consuls, and it is a somewhat delicate matter for United States officials to interfere. The law, nevertheless, relates to foreign as well as to American vessels. Vice Consul Smithers holds that British sailors shipped before him make no allotment, and that the law is not broken, but sailors are quite frequently shipped with the shilling stipulation, and it is the general belief that the crimps receive a sum from the agent, master, or owner.

PATIENT LEAPED FROM WINDOW

Effects of Fall and Pneumonia Killed Samuel Layton.

Samuel Layton of Plainfield, N. J., died at Christ Hospital, Jersey City, Monday night. He was visiting Jersey City friends, and on Thursday last was prostrated by pneumonia.

While at the hospital he became delirious, and on Sunday night, during the temporary absence of the nurse, he leaped from a second-story window. His left leg was broken and his scalp badly cut. Death was the result of the disease and the fall. The victim was a veteran of the civil war.

FOUR FIRES IN THE BRONX.

One House, Twice Ablaze, Destroyed—Two Others Badly Damaged.

Some live coals in a stove in the rear of the two-story frame dwelling at 2,345 Jackson Avenue, Bronx Borough, fell out on the floor yesterday morning and set fire to the carpet and woodwork. The firemen extinguished the blaze after $1,000 damage had been done. The house was occupied by Michael O'Malley and his family.

The firemen were rolling up their hose lines after the fire, at 7 o'clock, when another blaze was discovered in the two-story and attic frame building at 7 Trafalgar Square. The house is occupied by Howard Crowley, his housekeeper, and three children. The house of Policeman Hogan of the Tremont Station, at No. 5, caught fire, and $1,500 damage was done to it. The Crowley home was damaged to the extent of $2,000. Mr. Crowley had a bass drum filled with rare coins, and in searching about the ruins after the fire discovered the drum, but the coins were gone.

While the second fire was being extinguished another fire started in the O'Malley home. Some sparks in the embers had ignited papers. All the engines in the vicinity were at the other fire, and an engine had to be brought from a distance so great that the house could not be saved.

Fifth Brigade Staff Appointment.

Brig. Gen. George Moore Smith of the Fifth Brigade, N. G. N. Y., has appointed as Surgeon on his staff ex-Assistant Surgeon General Nathan S. Jarvis, who served ten years in the United States Army. Col. Jarvis entered the United States service as an Assistant Surgeon, Oct. 14, 1887, and served until July 1, 1897, when he resigned. He served five years in the Fifth Maryland before joining the United States Army.

THE HOSPITAL COLLECTION.

Favorable Reports to the Saturday and Sunday Association.

A largely attended meeting of the Trustees of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association was held yesterday afternoon in the United Charities Building. Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, President of the Woman's Auxiliary of the association, reported upon the preparatory work for subscriptions to the Woman's Fund. For the last two years the proceeds of a concert at the Waldorf-Astoria, netting each season about $2,000, have helped to increase this fund. This year, owing to the difficulty of obtaining talent, it was deemed advisable to omit this feature, and the hope was expressed by Mrs. Baylies that the patrons of the fund would increase their subscriptions sufficiently to make up the loss.

Mrs. James Speyer, Treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary, reported that a large number of the patrons had sent in their subscriptions without waiting for the appeal just issued, and that the prospects for a large return were promising. F. F. Cook, the general agent, reported upon the general preparatory work in the trades, Exchanges, and professions, and for the church collections on Hospital Sunday. So far as he could gauge the situation, he said, the promise was for the largest collection in the history of the association.

SHOT HIMSELF IN HIS OFFICE.

Stephen P. Anderson, a Wealthy Harlem Builder, Committed Suicide.

Stephen P. Anderson, a wealthy architect and builder, committed suicide in his office on the top floor of the Hamilton Bank Building, at 213 to 217 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, yesterday morning by shooting himself in the head.

Mr. Anderson was about forty-two years old. He lived with his wife at 160 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street. The couple have no children. He appeared to be in a pleasant frame of mind when he entered his office yesterday. The janitor's wife heard the shot soon afterward, and her husband and a policeman found Mr. Anderson sitting in a chair dead.

It is believed that his mind had been affected through insomnia. His father, while insane, committed suicide in New Jersey thirty years ago. His sister died while insane two years ago. It is understood that he had no financial troubles, and had a rating credit of $50,000.

For eighteen years he had been a builder in Harlem, and had erected many flats and office buildings. For a long time he was a partner of Webster White.

CONGRESS.—The debate on the Currency bill was continued in the House yesterday. Among those who spoke in opposition was Representative Sulzer of New York. The Republican Senators will caucus to-day to agree upon their committee appointments. The House will adjourn on Dec. 20 to Jan. 3. Senator Lodge yesterday introduced a bill to provide for the laying of a Pacific cable.—Page 5.

FOREIGN.—The British forces under Gen. Lord Methuen have met with a disastrous defeat in an attack upon the Boers' position four miles north of the Modder River. The losses on both sides are said to have been heavy. The fighting began on Sunday evening and was renewed Monday morning. Dispatches describing the battle say that the British troops found it impossible to reach the enemy's trenches in the face of the awful fire poured in upon them. Two hundred of the Gordon Highlanders were mowed down. The Black Watch regiment also suffered severely. British Gen. Wauchope was killed. Dr. von Miquel, the Kaiser's adviser, yesterday replied to Dr. Lieber, who on Tuesday criticised the Kaiser in the Reichstag. The naval debate continued, a National Liberal asserting that it was America against whom the German power should be strengthened. Russians criticise Von Buelow's speech. German worsted, woolen, and silk spinners will establish branches in the United States. The American Art Association in Paris yesterday gave its annual concert in the form of a minstrel show. A Ministerial crisis is imminent in Spain.—Pages 1 and 7.

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN ALIVE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 13. — Robert O'Grady, supposedly dead and buried in a Chicago cemetery, and whose life policy had been paid by an insurance company, is alive and at present an inmate of the National Soldiers' Home in this city.

The circumstances of the case have come to light through the prosecution for fraud of six Chicago persons, including Margaret Sheehan, a niece of the veteran, by the general counsel of the Knights and Ladies of Security. In December last a man died at 387 West Monroe Street, Chicago. His death was recorded, a burial permit secured for the body by J. O'Brien, the undertaker, and it was placed in a grave in Forest Home Cemetery.

A Robert O'Grady was insured in the Illinois Council, No. 420, of the Knights and Ladies of Security, and when the man, at 837 West Monroe Street, died, insurance on O'Grady's life was collected by the officers of the Illinois Council.

The real Robert O'Grady, who has been located here, says he did not know that his life was insured. He asserts, however, that Margaret Sheehan is his niece, but he does not know much about her. He says he never lived at 837 West Monroe Street, where the supposed Robert O'Grady died.

CHASING AGUINALDO THROUGH THE CLOUDS

Major March Pursues the Fugitive Over the Mountains.

IS PUSHING ON TO BONTOC

Defeats Pilar in a Wonderful Fight 3,000 Feet Above the Sea.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—The following dispatch, dated Cervantes, Dec. 5, has just been received from a correspondent with Major March's batallion:

"Major March, with Capts. Jenkinson and Cunningham, Lieuts. Tompkins, Rucker, McClelland, and Power, and 125 men, is about starting for Bontoc, the principal town in the Province of that name to the northeast, through an absolutely desolate country and over a mountain 10,000 feet high. He is pursuing Aguinaldo, whose escourt, now reduced to fifty men, is known to be there.

"According to the natives Aguinaldo intends to disguise himself and to take a circuitous trail toward Bayombong, Province of Neuva Vizcaya.

"Major March, with 300 men, arrived at Cervantes, in the heart of the Tilad Mountains, on the evening of Dec. 3, about twenty hours behind Aguinaldo, who had believed he had found an inaccessible refuge. On Dec. 2 the American commander had a wonderful fight in a cloud-enveloped mountain pass 3,000 feet above the sea, completely routing Gen. Gregorio del Pilar's force of 200 picked men in a position almost strong enough to rival Thermopylae.

"Gen. Pilar died at the front of his men, urging them to make a stand until the ball of a sharpshooter pierced his head. His followers tried to carry away the body, but were compelled to lay it down.

"Two of the Americans were killed and were buried by their comrades where they fell. The others, carrying nine wounded, camped for the night on top of the mountain, an eminence of 4,000 feet, suffering greatly from the cold. In the morning they moved down the trail to Dugaqui, where they learned that Aguinaldo, with a few men and three women, all carried on litters borne by Igorrotes, had passed along the same trail to Cervantes, where he was during the fight. A runner had brought him the news of the death of his chief of staff. He was greatly affected and prepared instantly for flight.

"Gen. Concepcion, with six officers, who had deserted Aguinaldo, surrendered when Major March reached Cayan, Province of Lepanto.

"On arriving at Cervantes Major March's battalion was without food, except rice, and had only a small supply of ammunition. Major March secured five days' rations, made arrangements for his sick and wounded, and, having chosen twenty-five mounted and one hundred unmounted men, resumed the chase at daybreak to-day."

The latest reports show that fifty of the enemy were killed and that many were wounded. The Americans also captured 100 prisoners, 200 rifles, several cannon, a quantity of provisions, and some money, and released a number of Spanish prisoners. The latter report that some American officers and several men who had been taken prisoners were conveyed from Laoag to Tarcova, where, they add, Gen. Tinto, who is severely wounded, had arrived.

The navy co-operated successfully with the army on the west coast.

Released Spaniards to the number of 2,200, including Gen. Pena, are awaiting transportation at Laoag and Vigan.

Major March liberated 575 of these, including 150 friars.

NAVY TAKES A PROVINCE.

Gen. Tirona Surrenders Cagayan to Capt. McCalla.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—Gen. Tirona, commanding the Filipinos in the Province of Cagayan, surrendered the entire province at Aparri on Dec. 11 to Capt. McCalla of the United States cruiser Newark. Capt. McCalla appointed him Civil Governor of the province, subject to the approval of Gen. Otis.

The surrender was with the honors of war. Capt. McCalla reviewed the insurgents, and Gen. Tirona reviewed the naval forces. The Americans presented arms while the insurgents were stacking theirs.

Capt. McCalla has communicated with Major Batchellor's battalion of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, which is now ninety miles south of Aparri.

The gunboats Princeton and Helena have entered the Aparri River. The latter will take supplies for Major Batchellor, and the former will bring 300 surrendered rifles to Manila.

Lieut. Col. Howze reports definitely that Gen. Tino is conveying American prisoners north. Bruce of the First Nevada and Edwards of the Yorktown were rescued near La Paz. Howze is rapidly pursuing Tino with Penn's battalion of the Thirty-third Infantry."

The naval account of the operations of the ships in Luzon is contained in two cablegrams received to-day from Admiral Watson at Cavite. The first reads as follows:

"Burwell reports that the Wheeling landed a naval force and a detachment of troops, Kaiser commanding, sixteen miles north of Laoag, Northwest Luzon, and attacked the city yesterday, releasing 1,500 Spaniards. Am holding at the request of Gen. Young. No casualties."

The second cablegram read:

"Gen. Tirona, commanding Filipinos, unconditionally surrendered Aparri and Cagayan Province to Capt. McCalla of the Newark on the 11th of December. Princeton and Helena at present in the river. All arms and ammunition surrendered. Tirona surrendered from patriotic motives, to prevent further bloodshed. He was appointed Civil Governor by Capt. McCalla, subject to the approval of Otis. The Helena was dispatched up the river with stores for Batchellor's troops, ninety miles south of Aparri. Aparri and Engana lighthouses relighted."

FILIPINO LEADER A PRISONER.

Mabini, the Head and Front of the Insurrection, Is in Gen. MacArthur's Hands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Gen. Otis had some stirring news to report to-day from Manila, his advices going to show that the insurgents are, as he predicted a few days ago, at the end of their resources from a military point of view, and are melting away before the rapid advance of the American troops at all points. His cablegrams were as follows:

"Manila, Dec. 13.

"Fifty men of the navy and fifty men of the army transported by the navy took Laoag on the 10th inst. Gen. Young, with staff, followed next day. He reports Howze, with Penn's battalion of the Thirty-fourth followed by a portion of the Thirty-third Infantry, passed north to Pidding, east of Laoag. March's battalion of the Thirty-fourth was at Cayan, Province of Lepanto, on 7th inst. The Third Cavalry was along the coast and in the mountains pursuing the enemy.

"Young states his extreme northern force passed over mountains, driving the insurgents under Gen. Tino, who was badly wounded, killing fifty and wounding many. He made large captures of rifles and property with all insurgent transportation, and released all the Spanish prisoners in that section to the number of about 2,000. Our casualties were two wounded. Our troops are still pursuing the remnant of Tino's command.

"March's battalion of the Thirty-third reports from Cayan, Lepanto Province, on the 7th inst., that he has destroyed Aguinaldo's body guard, killed Gen. Gregorio Pilar, received the surrender of Gen. Concepcion and staff, killed and wounded fifty-two insurgents, released 575 Spanish, including 150 friars, and captured considerable property. His loss was two killed and nine wounded. My information is that Aguinaldo has disguised his individuality, abandoned his troops, and is hiding in the Province of Benguet."

In his second dispatch Gen. Otis says:

"Admiral Watson informs me that the Province of Cagayan surrendered unconditionally to Capt. McCalla of the Newark on the 11th inst., all arms being surrendered. Major Batchelor is ninety miles south of Aparri; command in good condition. Navy will take supplies to Batchelor in launch at once. This surrender doubtless includes the Province of Isabella.

"Gen. Bates at Zamboanga reports affairs there satisfactory. Nearly all rifles surrendered. MacArthur at Bayambang reports that he holds as prisoner of war Mabini, the ablest of the insurgents, and founder of the late Government."

The Secretary of War regards the information conveyed in Gen. Otis's dispatches to-day as the most important that has come to hand in months past. Most important of the items is the capture of Mabini, reported by MacArthur from Bayambang. It is believed that the Filipino leader was trying to make his way across country from Bangued, where he had been obliged to part company with Aguinaldo a fortnight ago, and was endeavoring to reach the east coast of Luzon.

The members of the Philippine Commission, now in Washington, declare without reserve that Mabini was the head and front of the insurrection. Aguinaldo was only a figurehead, but Mabini was the brain and the directing power behind him. He is a paralytic, an old man, but of extraordinary ability, and his counsels are always conclusive with the Filipinos.

Mabini was concerned in the first uprising against the Spaniards. For a short time he wavered upon Aguinaldo's breach with the Americans, but finally cast his fortunes with the insurrection, and was President of the council. He was also the financial strength of the movement, for without his backing, Aguinaldo would have had no credit in that circle of adventurous capitalists in the East who stand ready to venture investments in revolutionary movements against great risks for large odds.

Next in importance to the capture of Mabini in the developments of the campaign was the bold stroke of Capt. McCalla of the Newark in capturing the whole Province of Cagayan. With MacArthur holding the Province of Isabella adjoining, and Young's holdings on the opposite or western shore of the upper peninsula, the American forces are now in technical occupation of the whole northern end of Luzon from a point just north of the Gulf of Lingayen. McCalla, posted at the port of Aparri, the only good port on the northern end of the island, commands the greater part of the whole length of the Rio Grande affording entrance by boats to a full third of the interior of the island.

It is up this river that Capt. McCalla is sending steam launches carrying supplies to Major Batchelor. The latter officer, with a few negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, has just completed one of the most daring marches connected with the present campaign. Detaching his little force from MacArthur a week ago, he drove straight through the centre of the island, northward, cutting loose from his communications and bound to reach Aparri or be captured or killed in the attempt. Capt. McCalla's advices indicate that he has succeeded, being now within touch of the navy on the north shore.

Bates's report from the Southern archipelago has allayed the apprehension excited for the security of things there growing out of the agitation caused by the misleading publications of important insurgent victories.

Altogether, the advices contained in to-day's dispatches have given great satisfaction to the officials of the War Department.

WAS LOGAN KILLED BY HIS MEN?

No One Will Assume Responsibility for the Report.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Col. Long, the Quartermaster in charge of army transportation at San Francisco, who was recently instructed by Quartermaster General Ludington to investigate the report published in certain newspapers that Major John A. Logan, United States Volunteers, had been killed by his own soldiers as an act of revenge, reports to the Quartermaster General by telegraph to-day that he has mailed a report of the result of the investigation.

Col. Long says that Koppitz, the freight clerk who was alleged to have made the allegations, denies officially and positively making any such statement to a newspaper representative or to any other person.

"Capt. Coulling can find no one on the ship," says Col. Long, "who made such remarks, and is satisfied that, if made, it was by some irresponsible party."

TREATY WITH JOLO'S SULTAN.

Agreement to Assume Sovereignty, Made by Gen. Bates, Is Now Before the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The following is the text of the agreement made between Gen. Bates and the Sultan of Jolo, known as the Jolo treaty, which has been sent to the Senate by the President:

Agreement between Brig. Gen. John C. Bates, representing the United States, of the one part, and his Highness the Sultan of Jolo, the Dato Rajah Muda, the Dato Attik, the Dato Calbi, and the Dato Joakanain of the other part; it being understood that this agreement will be in full force only when approved by the Governor General of the Philippine Islands and confirmed by the President of the United States, and will be subject to future modifications by the mutual consent of the parties in interest.

Article I.—The sovereignty of the United States over the whole Archipelago of Jolo and its dependencies is declared and acknowledged.

Art. II.—The United States flag will be used in the Archipelago of Jolo and its dependencies on land and sea.

Art. III.—The rights and dignities of his Highness the Sultan and his Datos shall be fully respected; the Moros shall not be interfered with on account of their religion; all their religious customs shall be respected, and no one shall be persecuted on account of his religion.

Art. IV.—While the United States may occupy and control such points in the Archipelago of Jolo as public interest seem to demand, encroachment will not be made upon the lands immediately about the residence of his Highness the Sultan unless military necessity requires such occupation in case of war with a foreign power; and where the property of individuals is taken due compensation will be made in each case.

Any person may purchase land in the Archipelago of Jolo and hold the same by obtaining the consent of the Sultan and coming to a satisfactory agreement with the owner of the land, and such purchase shall immediately be registered in the proper office of the United States Government.

Art. V.—All trade in domestic products of the Archipelago of Jolo, when carried on by the Sultan and his people with any part of the Philippine Islands, and when conducted under the American flag, shall be free, unlimited, and undutiable.

Art. VI.—The Sultan of Jolo shall be allowed to communicate direct with the Governor General of the Philippine Islands in making complaints against the commanding officer of Jolo or against any naval commander.

Art. VII.—The introduction of firearms and war material is forbidden, except under specific authority of the Governor General of the Philippine Islands.

Art. VIII.—Piracy must be suppressed, and the Sultan of Jolo and his Datos agree to heartily cooperate with the United States authorities to that end, and to make every possible effort to arrest and bring to justice all persons engaged in piracy.

Art. IX.—Where crimes and offenses are committed by Moros against Moros, the Government of the Sultan will bring to trial and punishment the criminals and offenders, who will be delivered to the Government of the Sultan by the United States authorities if in their possession. In all other cases persons charged with crimes or offenses will be delivered to the United States authorities for trial and punishment.

Art. X.—Any slave in the Archipelago of Jolo shall have the right to purchase freedom by paying to the master the usual market value.

Art. XI.—In case of any trouble with subjects of the Sultan the American authorities in the island will be instructed to make careful investigation before resorting to harsh measures, as in most cases serious trouble can thus be avoided.

Art. XII.—At present Americans or foreigners wishing to go into the country should state their wishes to the Moro authorities and ask for an escort, but it is hoped that this will become unnecessary as we know each other better.

Art. XIII.—The United States will give full protection to the Sultan and his subjects in case any foreign nation should attempt to impose upon them.

Art. XIV.—The United States will not sell the Island of Jolo or any other island of the Jolo Archipelago to any foreign nation without the consent of the Sultan of Jolo.

Art. XV.—The United States Government will pay the following monthly salaries in Mexican WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN.

Unmarried Workers of Boston Organize to Prevent the Employment of Married Wage Earners.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—An organization has lately been formed in the city among unmarried working women to prevent the competition of married women who are partially provided for. They include workers in restaurants, department stores, and factories, and their methods are to secure the promise of employers that they will employ none but unmarried women, with such exceptions as may be offered in favor of women who have lost their husbands or are otherwise needy.

Several employers have told the leaders in this movement that their claims were just, and have, therefore, offered to support their cause. Mrs. E. J. Ames, Factory Inspector for the Commonwealth, said:

"As a Factory Inspector I have specially observed the married women. An action of woman against woman would be the bitterest thing in the world. Rather let women do as men have done for their protection in industrial life. Let them form trades unions."

Mrs. Micah Dyer, President of the Charity Club, said:

"In this organization against married workers there is a chance of antagonizing women. Those who are doing an injustice should be told so quietly, but women ought not to go against one another. Women must pull together."

Prof. Sedgwick, curator of the Lowell Lectures, said: "It would be difficult to make any distinction among married women. Some unmarried women are working to support an aged parent, but many married women are working to support their children."

Mrs. Lucia Mead said: "I do not want to pass any snap judgment on the matter, but if the women who are interested in the movement would like my advice, I would be glad to give it to them."

SETBACK FOR MR. BENEDICT.

Compelled to Give Up Improving His Indian Harbor Property.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 13.—E. C. Benedict has been obliged to give up some contemplated improvements about his Indian Harbor property, which would involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, because a neighbor, Isaac Cypher, will not take less than $10,000 for his property, which Mr. Benedict says is not worth more than $1,000.

After Mr. Benedict erected his house at Indian Harbor and improved the grounds there, he sought to clean up the adjoining places. All the fishermen's houses north of the grounds were bought up and removed. Across the small inlet west of him is a row of eight houses, and his agent has been negotiating for their purchase. As Mr. Cypher has refused anything less than $10,000, Mr. Benedict has declared all the other bargains off, and will give up the contemplated improvements.

ONE CENT MORE ON APPEAL.

Newark Woman First Got Five Cents in Land Damage Award.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Louise Badenhop, who was recently awarded 5 cents by a commission appointed to assess damages in connection with the opening of Peshine Avenue, took an appeal, and the case came up to-day in the Circuit Court before Justice Depue.

It was claimed by the city that a former owner of the land had dedicated the strip [illegible] to the use of the public, and that Mrs. Badenhop came into possession of it by warranty deed. It was shown that Mrs. Badenhop had paid $596.38 in taxes and assessments on the property, and Justice Depue directed the jury to return a verdict for her in the sum of 6 cents.

AUCTION SALE FOR LEGATEES.

Justus Morris Leaves a Family Clock Which Must Be Bid For.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 13.—The will of Justus Morris, who at one time owned nearly all of Broad Street, was admitted to probate to-day. The testator leaves his farm and furniture to his wife, who is some fifty years his junior, and whom he married a few years ago.

An odd provision of the will is that an old family clock shall be sold to the legatee who bids the highest for it. Another provision is that a monument not to exceed $500 shall be erected over his grave.

NO BATHS FOR VETERANS.

Water Is Too Scarce at Fitch's Sailors and Soldiers' Home.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 13.—Water is scarce at Fitch's Home for Sailors and Soldiers, a State institution at Noroton Heights, and orders have been promulgated by Superintendent Coe forbidding any one in the home to take the weekly baths heretofore deemed imperative.

An artesian well is the only supply for the 500 veterans, and the continued drought has caused the water to be very low there. The State appropriation of $500 made by the last Legislature for another well has not been used, and the neglect is now felt.

Monday was pension day and 200 veterans took their money and left for a short time, until the water is more plentiful they say.

SEEK TO PUNISH ARMOUR & CO.

Firm to be Sued for $1,500,000 in Penalties if Evidence Is Found.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—A meeting was held to-day of the parties concerned in the collection of evidence on which to base a case against Armour & Co. of Chicago to recover $1,500,000 in penalties alleged to be due the State for bringing oleomargarine into the State contrary to law. Judge C. H. Waltz is the referee. The State was represented by Judge Evans of Rome. Mr. Kimball of Tracy, Boardman & Platt and Ira A. Place appeared for the Armour Company.

The freight registers of the New York Central Railroad were examined this morning. No entries could be found in them showing the receipt by the company at this city of any packages from Armour & Co. during the years 1893 to 1898. After the books had been examined Judge Evans said the way bills must have been spirited away. The next meeting will be held at Utica Jan. 16.

CLAIMS A LARGE ESTATE.

New Jersey Woman Says Husband Died Under Another Name.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Sarah Pangborn, who lives in poor circumstances in a cottage on Lake Street, has laid claim to one of the largest estates in Williamsport, Penn. She declares her husband, Stephen Pangborn, and William Scott Allen, a prominent and wealthy business man of Williamsport, were one and the same person.

Allen left a wife and three children in Williamsport, who also lay claim to the estate.

Stephen Pangborn married in 1861 Miss Sarah Giles. After the birth of a daughter there were some high words between husband and wife, in which Mrs. Giles sided with her daughter. The quarrel resulted in a separation, and Pangborn left home. His wife never saw him again. He occasionally came to Plainfield and saw his child, but made no attempt at reconciliation, according to Mrs. Pangborn.

Allen married the daughter of one of the leading citizens of Williamsport. There were three children, two girls and a boy, who now live at Lacaeyville, Penn. Allen, while hunting with a party of friends in Western Pennsylvania in 1859, was accidentally shot.

METHUEN SUFFERS DISASTROUS DEFEAT

Repulsed with Slaughter in an Attack Upon the Boers.

Gordon Highlanders Decimated by Enemy's Rifle Fire.

British General, Wauchope, Among the Killed — Imperial Troops Forced to Fall Back to the Modder River.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Gen. Lord Methuen has met with a disastrous defeat in an attack upon the Boer positions at Magersfontein, four miles north of the Modder River. It is estimated here that Lord Methuen's forces amounted to 11,000 men, and perhaps to more. No reliable estimate of his losses has yet been received. They are believed to have been at least 450.

Among the British killed was Gen. Wauchope, who died leading his troops.

The British casualties also included the Marquis of Winchester, Major of the Second Battalion Coldstream Guards, who was killed, and Col. Downham of the First Battalion Gordon Highlanders, who was mortally wounded. Among the wounded were Lieut. Col. A. D. Codrington and Capt. Sterling of the Coldstream Guards.

It is known besides that 293 wounded British, including 27 officers, have arrived at Orange River from the front, and a telegram from Lord Methuen, dated Modder River, Dec. 12, would indicate that others of his wounded fell into the hands of the Boers.

METHUEN'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

Yesterday afternoon the War Office received the following dispatch from Gen. Methuen, dated Tuesday, Dec. 12:

"Our artillery shelled a very strong position held by the enemy in a long, high kopje from 4 until dusk Sunday. It rained hard last night. The Highland Brigade attacked at daybreak Monday the south end of the kopje. The attack was properly timed, but failed. The Guards were ordered to protect the Highlanders' right and rear. The cavalry and mounted infantry, with a howitzer artillery battery, attacked the enemy on the left and the Guards on the right, supported by field artillery and howitzer artillery.

"They shelled the position from daybreak and at 1:15 I sent the Gordons to support the Highland Brigade. The troops held their own in front of the enemy's intrenchments until dusk, the position extending, including the kopje, for a distance of six miles toward the Modder River. I, to-day, am holding my position and intrenching myself. I had to face at least 12,000 men. Our loss was great."

Later he telegraphed:

"As the Boers occupied their trenches strongly this morning, I retired in perfect order here, where I am in security.

"I have gathered from some of the prisoners and from our men with the ambulances, who talked with the Boers, that the enemy's losses were terrible, some corps being completely wiped out.

"The Boers have been most kind to my wounded."

The position Lord Methuen assaulted is thus described by a correspondent:

"Magersfontein Range terminates on the east with an abrupt saddle rock, some 150 feet high. Boer intrenchments run around the whole front. The position is some two miles long, due east and west. The western ends of the trenches follow the contour of the kopjes and afford a retreat."

FIGHTING BEGAN ON SUNDAY.

The fighting began, according to press dispatches received here, early Sunday evening. The Guards and the Highland Brigade moved from the Modder River camp, marching in the night in a northeasterly direction. The objective of the Highlanders was the eastern spur of the Boer position, the Guards following the bank of the river, while the Yorkshire Light Infantry moved along the riverside. Just before daybreak the Highlanders arrived within 200 yards of the Boer intrenchments, at the foot of a hill. Not suspecting that the Boers were in the vicinity, the British were still marching in quarter column, in close order, when they met a terrible fire from the flanks. About 200 of the Highlanders were mown down.

The troops reformed under the shelter of some rising ground and gallantly held their position. Later the Gordons arrived and the troops gradually worked their way until within 300 yards of the Boer positions, displaying the greatest gallantry. In the meanwhile a naval gun at the Modder River, the howitzer batteries, and the Horse Artillery opened a terrific fire, enfilading the trenches and searching every portion of the Boer position. In the meanwhile, the Boers, on the open ground directly in front, moved with the object of making a flank attack. But this was frustrated by the Guards and artillery.

The Black Watch Regiment, on reforming, was only able to muster 160 men. The Boers also lost heavily in the trenches, and also in the wire entanglements, when they came into the open in an attempt to make a flank attack on the British.

The terrific British artillery fire provoked no response from the Boer rifles until nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Gordon Highlanders formed up to renew the attack on the intrenched kopje. They advanced with the utmost gallantry to attack the Boers, close to the place where lay their dead and wounded comrades of the Highland Brigade.

The enemy opened with a heavy shrapnel fire as the British advanced, and it was found physically impossible to take the Boer trenches. The British got within 200 yards, but could not get nearer. It was here that Col. Downham fell.

BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS.

The Boers had had free recourse to barbed wire entanglements, which offered great obstacles even after the damage inflicted by the British artillery fire. The greatest bravery was displayed by both officers and men.

A detachment of Boers posted among some thick bushes to the east maintained a most destructive fire on our right. With the remarkable talent for taking cover which the Boer always displays they were, generally speaking, virtually invisible; and, although the enemy's artillery was practically silenced, his rifle fire was so persistent and concentrated, as well as usually accurate, that it was absolutely impossible for the British infantry to take the position by assault.

At the first advance of the Highlanders the Boer shooting, probably owing to the darkness, was somewhat high. Otherwise the British losses would have been still heavier.

SEEN BY JULIAN RALPH.

Julian Ralph, describing the battle in a special dispatch to The Daily Mail says:

"The Boers were intrenched at Magersfontein, four miles north of Modder River. At dawn Monday the Highlanders advancing across the veldt were suddenly subjected to a murderous fire from the trenches about two hundred yards in front. The greater part of the fearful loss of the day was thus suffered in a single minute.

"Startled and overwhelmed, the brigade retired quickly, but soon rallied and retained their position. This was on the left.

"On the right the Guards' Brigade advanced across the veldt against other trenches and fought an invisible foe for fifteen hours.

"At 11 in the morning the Gordon Highlanders were sent forward. The Boers allowed them to pass one line of trenches and then enfiladed them. We raked the Boer trenches with artillery throughout the day. The fighting only ceased with nightfall."

Another special correspondent of The Daily Mail at Modder River, describing the fighting, says:

"The Boer trenches extended far beyond the kopje into the open plain. Those on the plain were hidden by screens of bushes. Those near the kopje were guarded by a double line of barbed wire. Evidently they feared our storming and bayonet attack.

"We raked the kopje and trenches with an intense, well-directed fire of thirty guns, including a naval gun and a howitzer battery, both using lyddite. I believe they effected severe damage. The Boer prisoners report that one lyddite shell fell among forty men, only five of whom escaped unhurt. Other shells burst in the enemy's laager, causing its complete destruction.

"The Boers are in still larger force than we found them at Modder River, outnumbering us by almost three to one. The Transvaalers are apparently dominating in their military councils, although in a minority."

ALARM FELT IN LONDON.

As the day progressed and the driblets of information leaked out in London, the extreme gravity of Gen. Methuen's position was more fully recognized, and the possibility of his isolation created no small alarm in military circles. It was thought in some quarters that he ought to retrace his steps to Orange River before his lines of communication were seriously severed.

Gen. Wauchope's death was much deplored. He rendered notable service at the battle of Omdurman, for which he was thanked by both houses of Parliament.

A pathetic circumstance was that Gen. Wauchope's wife was among the inquirers at the War Office a few minutes before the telegram announcing his death was posted.

The Stock Exchange to-day closed grave and anxious. There was considerable nervousness as to the outcome of the settlement, and there were rumors of further failures. Consols were weak and Kafirs were more depressed than at any time during the present year.

There was little excitement noticeable at the War Office, but at the clubs and hotels there was considerable gloom, with a feeling that the brief announcement that a large number of wounded had arrived at Orange River indicated that Gen. Methuen's losses were the most severe yet reported.

LONDON LOOKS TO BULLER.

Alarm is beginning to be expressed in many quarters as to the situation of Gen. Methuen. As The Westminster Gazette says:

"If England ever needed a victory it is now, and it is to Buller, the soldier, strong, cool-headed, and reticent, that the country looks for this victory."

The other papers are abusing the Government for its "complacent optimism" and inability to grasp the strength of the opposition it had to overcome in South Africa.

Considerable significance attaches to Gen. Methuen's statement that he is entrenching himself, indicating fear that the Boers may follow up their advantage, adopt the offensive, and attack him. Indeed the gravity of the situation from the British point of view can hardly be overestimated. Gen. Methuen's long lines of communication to De Aar are most vulnerable. Should they be cut, Gen. Methuen will find himself in a very tight place, if only from lack of supplies.

The latest advices from Gen. Gatacre show no anxiety is felt for the safety of his remaining troops, who have been withdrawn to good positions along the railroad south of Molteno. It is said that Bushman's Hoek is impregnable. The Boers decline to

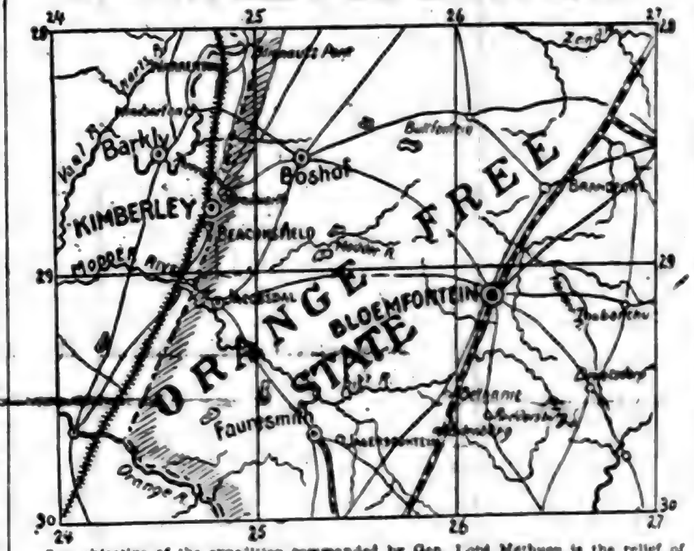
MAP SHOWING SCENE OF LORD METHUEN'S DEFEAT.



The objective of the expedition commanded by Gen. Lord Methuen is the relief of Kimberley, which was invested by the Boers of the Orange Free State soon after the beginning of hostilities. The first engagement of the troops under Gen. Methuen with the Boers was on Nov. 23 at Gras Pan, about thirty miles north of the Orange River. Another battle was fought on Nov. 28 at Modder River, about twenty-five miles south of Kimberley.

The British succeeded in crossing the river, and it was expected that they would be able to push on at once to Kimberley; but Lord Methuen found that his troops were so weakened by the fighting that reinforcements would be necessary. Magersfontein, the scene of the last battle, is four miles north of the Modder, near the line of railroad to Kimberley.

MRS. MOLINEUX'S NAME UP

Mr. Holt, Co-Employe of Barnet, Witness at the Poison Trial.

PROVES DEAD MAN'S WRITING

E. H. Barnet, Mr. McIntyre, and Expert Kinsley Other Witnesses—Mr. Osborne's Mysterious Visitor.

William J. Kinsley, the chief handwriting expert for the prosecution in the trial of Roland B. Molineux for the murder of Katherine J. Adams, was on the witness stand during the greater part of yesterday's session, telling the jury the points of similarity between the admitted handwriting of the defendant, the Barnet and Cornish requests for medicinal remedies, and the address on the poison package received by Cornish. Mr. Osborne managed to get in the testimony of several witnesses tending to strengthen the deductions of the expert, in spite of the fact that he said on Tuesday that he would not do this unless some more witnesses dropped from the clouds.

The interpolations consisted of Robert S. Holt, Jr., an employe of the firm with which the late H. C. Barnet was at one time connected; Edmund H. Barnet, a brother of the dead man, and Assistant District Attorney McIntyre. Mr. Holt was put on the stand a few minutes before the noon adjournment for the announced purpose of identifying a letter sent by H. C. Barnet in 1897 to the Holt firm, which letter was to be used by the expert to point out that the man who wrote it could not have written the requests for medicines and marriage guides signed with his name.

Incidental to Mr. Holt's testimony, Mr. Osborne brought into the case the name of Mrs. Molineux, who was Blanche Chessebrough before her marriage to the defendant in November, 1898, and to show that she had visited the rooms of Molineux and Barnet in the Knickerbocker for the purposes of comparison of handwriting. Mr. Weeks then cross-examined.

"Where do you live?"

"At 287 Lexington Avenue."

"Did you live there in November, 1898?"

"I did."

"Did a person from another city call on you there?"

"Yes."

"Was it a woman?"

"Yes."

"How long did she remain in your house?"

"Two days."

The witness said he intended to remain in the city, and could be found whenever wanted. Mr. Osborne took up the re-direct.

"Do you know the defendant?" he asked.

"I do."

"Where did you meet him?"

"At the Knickerbocker Athletic Club."

"Who introduced you to him?"

"Mr. Barnet."

"The same Barnet referred to here?"

"Yes."

"Did his relations with the defendant seem friendly?"

They did."

"And continue so until the time of his death?"

"As long as I knew him."

Mr. Weeks cross-examined again, and drew out that the witness had seen Mr. Barnet in the clubhouse during his illness both in his room and in the library. Then Mr. Osborne tried again.

MRS. MOLINEUX BROUGHT IN.

"Did you ever know Mrs. Molineux?" he asked.

"Not as Mrs. Molineux."

"Under what name did you know her?"

"Under the name of Miss Chesebrough."

"In whose rooms did you meet her?"

"I met her in Mr. Molineux's room, and also in the gymnasium of the club."

"Did you meet her in anybody else's room?"

"Yes."

"In whose room?"

"In Mr. Barnet's."

"Why didn't you say so?" said the District Attorney, and was about to dismiss the witness when Mr. Weeks started in again.

"Who was present in Barnet's room when you saw Miss Chesebrough there?"

"Mr. Barnet, Mr. Carr, Mr. Bushnell, and others."

"Was that upon the occasion of an entertainment in the gymnasium of the club?"

"It was."

"On the occasion that you saw Miss Chesebrough in Mr. Barnet's room had you a lady with you?"

"I had."

"You and the lady had left the entertainment?"

"Yes."

"Because of dissatisfaction with it?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Barnet and Miss Chesebrough had left the entertainment for the same reason, had they not?"

"They had."

"You went to his room for your wraps, did you not?"

That was my reason for going there."

"The ladies left the room, leaving you and Mr. Barnet there?"

"We left, leaving Miss Chesebrough and Mr. Barnet there."

"Was the lady who accompanied you a relative of yours?"

"She was."

SAW MRS. MOLINEUX TWICE.

"Was that the only occasion you saw Miss Chesebrough with Mr. Barnet?"

"I think I saw her dining after that with Mr. Barnet, Mr. Carr, and others."

"Was that before the time you saw her in his room?"

"It was."

Mr. Osborne was not yet satisfied, so he began the examination again.

"Were Miss Chesebrough and Mr. Barnet left alone in his room?"

"They were."

"Was there a bottle of champagne there?"

"There was. At least, a part of one remained."

"Did you go to Barnet's funeral?"

"I did."

"Did you see Miss Cheseborough there?"

"I did not."

"Was she there?"

"I don't know."

"Who drank that champagne?" asked Mr. Weeks, coming into the breach again.

"We all drank some."

"Did the lady with you drink any?"

"She was asked to, but declined."

"There was no doubt about her being in that room?"

"None."

"Were the doors open?"

"They were."

"On other occasions of that sort, were you not in the rooms of other members with ladies?"

"Yes."

"Was it not a custom on such occasions to open the rooms of members to ladies?"

"It was."

Mr Osborne's "five-minute witness" having been on the stand for an hour was then allowed to depart.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF McINTYRE.

At the opening of the afternoon session Assistant District Attorney McIntyre took the stand. "When and where did you first meet Mrs. Adams?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"In the early part of 1897, in my office, at 61 Park Row."

"Who introduced you to her?"

"Mrs. Rogers, whom I had met two or three days before."

"Who introduced you to Mrs. Rogers?"

"She was sent to me by a gentleman who was a member of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club."

"Was it Cornish?"

"No."

"You had met Cornish?"

"Yes."

"Through the same person?"

"That I cannot remember."

"How long had you known Cornish?"

"Since 1898."

"Were you ever counsel for Cornish?"

"No."

"For Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Rogers?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever meet Edwin F. Rogers?"

"Yes."

"As a result of your meeting with him did you draw up separation papers between him and Mrs. Rogers?"

"I did," answered the witness after an objection by Mr. Osborne had been overruled.

THE DEATH OF MRS. ADAMS.

Mr. McIntyre went on to say that to the best of his knowledge Mrs. Adams lived at that time at 61 West Eighty-sixth Street. He said he had never called at this house, but he had called on the dead woman when she lived at the Adelaide, in Park Avenue, but always on business. He said he never went to the Eighty-sixth Street house until the day of Mrs. Adams's death.

"What time on Dec. 28 did you see Cornish?"

"It must have been about 3 o'clock."

"You had a conversation with him then?"

"Yes; for about an hour."

"After that did you go to the Coroner's office?"

"No. I will tell you about that. When I got back from lunch on that day I found a message on my desk telling me that a Mrs. Rogers had committed suicide, and that I should send the Coroner to the house. I inquired, but the Coroner knew nothing of the matter. Afterward I was asked if I had not been mistaken, and was told that at the same address a Mrs. Adams had committed suicide. That came to me through an undertaker who came to the Coroner's office for a permit. Cornish called that afternoon."

"While he was there was any one else present?"

"No one who had anything to do with the matter."

"You sent out for no one?"

"No."

Mr. McIntyre said he made an appointment to meet Cornish that night, but it was not kept. He went to the Adams flat that night, and on his first visit saw Mrs. Rogers, Mr. Hovey, Policeman Palmer, and another officer. He came back half an hour later and Mrs. Hovey and young Mr. Adams were there. The last time, he said, he entered the house in company with Dr. Weston.

TOOK NOTHING FROM THE HOUSE.

"Did you take anything from the house either time you left it?"

"I did not."

"When did you next see Cornish?"

"On Dec. 29 at the club."

Mr. McIntyre said that he had seen Cornish frequently since that time and had talked with him about the case. He said he had also talked with Hovey, and admitted that he had arranged with the latter that his compensation should be $5 a day and mileage when he came from Connecticut to testify.

Mr. Kinsley, who was on the stand all the rest of the day, testified first as to resemblances between the different handwritings, admitted and disputed, and the address on the poison package. Finally Mr. Osborne handed him a letter and asked him if he knew whose handwriting it was in. He said he thought he did.

"Have you seen Cornish write?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes."

"Where?"

"In your office."

It was then brought out that Mr. Kinsley had entered Mr. Osborne's office several times while Cornish was writing and that Cornish had on these occasions handed the samples he was supposed to have written

Court, brought out that Mr. Kinsley was a paid expert in the City's employ when the Cornish writings were made. At this point Mr. Kinsley, who still held the alleged Cornish letter in his hand, said:

"I should prefer that Cornish's writing be proved in another way."

RULINGS AGAINST OSBORNE.

Mr. Osborne glared at the expert and told him to answer questions and not volunteer. Mr. Weeks asked the witness if he was in Capt. McClusky's office when Cornish wrote some samples for Mr. Carvalho, and he said he was not. Mr. Weeks pressed his objection as to the qualifications of the witness to prove Cornish's handwriting, especially as Cornish was in the court and so better evidence could be had.

The Court sustained Mr. Weeks and Osborne tried again with another piece of Cornish's writing. He said he wanted to have it compared with the alleged bogus Cornish letters. The Recorder ruled against him again, and Mr. Osborne was visibly annoyed. It was the first important ruling against him during the trial.

Mr. Barnet then took the stand to identify the letter written by his deceased brother, and Mr. Kinsley at the close of the session compared the Cornish letter asking for a remedy with the poison address, thus being allowed to compare two pieces of disputed handwriting. He gave it as his opinion that both were written by the same hand.

Mr. Osborne at 4 o'clock asked for an adjournment. He said he had made an important engagement. The Recorder told him that he must not do that again, and the session went on until 4:30.

Directly after the close of the session Detective McCafferty took a man to Mr. Osborne's office and it was said that this was the person with whom the appointment had been made. It was also said that he would be a witness in the case and would give important testimony.

The conference in Mr. Osborne's office lasted some time, during which it was said that Mr. Osborne obtained a statement from the stranger. Who he is or what his connection is with the case the District Attorney refused to divulge.

The trial goes on this morning.

May be a Molineux Witness.

Mrs. William Steele of 14 Seidler Street, Jersey City, may be a witness in the Molineux trial. Mamie Melando lived with her early in the year. She told Mrs. Steele she knew Molineux and always called him "Roland." She showed Mrs. Steele a bundle of letters and said they were from Molineux. One of them was written on blue paper. Mrs. Steele advised Mamie not to show the letters. Mamie received a letter the day Molineux was arrested. She said some one had to be put in jail and that Molineux had been selected. She went to Newark the next day and came home with a roll of money.

ADVOCATES THE WHIPPING POST.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—A strong effort is being made to locate the blame and find a remedy for the prevalence of crime in Chicago. Some claim it is the fault of the Police Magistrates in allowing desperate criminals to escape on trivial charges. The State's Attorney's office thinks the fault lies chiefly in the misapplication of the indeterminate sentence law. The Police Magistrates blame the police and attribute the escape of many criminals to the poor quality of detective service.

Then the claim is made by some that the persons interested in the prosecution of criminals are lax. The claim has also been made that the habitual criminal looks with indifference on even a mild sentence in the penitentiary.

The establishment of harsher punishment is advocated and the revival of the whipping post is suggested by so great a criminal authority as William A. Pinkerton.

"General Superintendent of Police Joseph Kipley said: 'If the law as it appears on our statutes is properly enforced it provides at present for a severe punishment. No punishment however, in my mind, is too severe for the man who deliberately holds another up on the street and robs, or attempts to rob, him."

PAYN TO FIGHT GOVERNOR

Intimates that the Senate Will Confirm No Other Man.

TALKS WITH CHAIRMAN ODELL

Views of Republicans on His Ability to Hold the State Superintendency of Insurance.

State Superintendent of Insurance Louis F. Payn had a long talk yesterday with Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee. After he left Mr. Odell he talked freely concerning Gov. Roosevelt's reported intention to appoint a new man in his place in February next, when Mr. Payn's term will have expired. Mr. Payn, however, believes that he will be able to remain after the expiration of his term of office through his alleged ability to prevent the confirmation of any other nomination by the Senate.

"Many persons have been proceeding on the line of belief that you are the only man whom the Senate will confirm," said a reporter.

"You won't have to get off that line," was his positive reply.

This was taken by those politicians who heard of it as an open declaration that Mr. Payn will certainly resist any attempt of the Governor's to appoint another man Superintendent of Insurance. Just how far he will be able to carry out his plans is regarded as problematical by those who follow affairs in the Republican organization. Local supporters of Mr. Payn assert that he will be able to prevent the confirmation of any man whom the Governor may name.

On the other hand, there are those who say that the Governor will win the fight, as he will refuse to sign local measures for Senators who oppose his wishes. These same persons say that while Mr. Payn has many friends in the Senate, they would hesitate about following out a course which would injure them with their constituents.

Republicans of all shades of opinion agree that the fight between the friends of the Governor and Superintendent Payn will not prove beneficial to the interests of the party organization in the State, whatever the result may be. Coming in a Presidential year it is pointed out that it cannot fail to have an effect on the party vote. It came out yesterday that Mr. Payn has collected a number of commendatory letters from insurance companies which his friends in the Senate will make use of when the time comes.

Mr. Payn said that the Governor would have to reappoint him if he practiced what he advocated about civil service reform.

"I am not a civil service reformer," said the Superintendent.

"I never had any faith in those ideas, and I have not become converted yet. Civil service reform is the main plank in the Governor's platform. He has always stood for it and taken advantage of every occasion to proclaim his faith in it.

"As I understand the subject, the essential idea in civil service reform is that when an office holder performs his duty faithfully he should be retained in office, whether he was personally agreeable to the appointing power or not. Now, nobody has ever charged that I have not performed faithfully my duties as State Superintendent of Insurance. I cannot see, therefore, why I should not be reappointed if the Governor intends to carry into effect his own civil service reform ideas.

"Understand, I know nothing about the Governor's intention, except what I have read in the newspapers. I have read that he offered my place to Francis Hendricks, an excellent man, and that he has other names under consideration. All this may be true, or it may not. I simply want to make the point that if the Governor carries out his own platform, he will reappoint me.

"The Governor has taken an oath of office; so have the Senators, and so have I. I assume, therefore, that all will act conscientiously and without prejudice. If I had an insurance case before me, and was a friend of one of the interested persons and not on speaking terms with the other, I would decide the case on its merits, and not allow personal prejudice to interfere. I think the Governor should act in the same manner. Hatred and prejudice should not enter into a case of this kind. A man should act squarely. It should be the rule for all public men.

"Regarding confirmation, I would be confirmed by practically unanimous vote. I would be supported by all the men whose votes I wanted—whose votes would be a credit to me. There are a few men whose votes I would not care for. I do not speak of Democrats. I respect the Democrats and love the Republicans, but I have no use for Mugwumps and their kind. I do not need their votes and do not expect them. I am a Republican—a stalwart Republican, but I want noth'ng to do with Mugwumps."

Mr. Payn said he had not discussed the question of reappointment with Gov. Roosevelt, Senator Platt, or Mr. Odell. "My talk with Mr. Odell this morning," he said, "was in reference to the make-up of certain Assembly committees. As Superintendent of Insurance, I am interested in the composition of the committees which deal with the affairs of my department."

Hubert Cillis of the Germania Life Insurance Company, whose name Gov. Roosevelt has announced he has under consideration for Mr. Payn's place, declared yesterday that he knew nothing of the matter. "Nothing has been said to me," said he. "I know the Governor pretty well. I saw him last Friday, but he did not mention anything about the matter to me. My only information on the subject comes from the newspapers."

Large Private Wire House Guilty of Connection with Bucket Shops.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Edward Leland of the firm of Leland & Ware, which in its line did the biggest private-wire business in the country, was expelled from the Chicago Stock Exchange to-day on the general charge of indulging in methods detrimental to the interests and contrary to the rules of the institution of which he had been a member only a year.

The accusation is that he had telegraphic relations with bucket shops and firms on the black list of the Exchange. Neither Leland nor his partner seemed to have been able to convince the Board of Governors that the business was conducted strictly in accordance with regulations. Within half an hour after Mr. Leland had retired Secretary Wilkins announced that Mr. Leland had been expelled and that his name would be posted immediately.

Both Messrs. Leland and Ware decline to discuss the trial further than to say that the former had made all the defense of which he was capable on short notice. It is asserted that the payments by the firm to the Western Union Telegraph Company for wire connections amounted to $200,000 annually. This was for circuits that embraced Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and New Orleans.

Boy Drowned in Harlem Mere.

The four-year-old son of William Pitterton, janitor of a flathouse at 5 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, was lost yesterday afternoon and the police found his body later in the Harlem Mere. It is supposed the child was playing alone and fell into the lake.

furnish the names of the killed or wounded. They say they buried the dead and are sending the prisoners to Bloemfontein.

The Boer loss on Sunday is reported to have been four killed and nine wounded. Probably this is correct, as no genuine attack was delivered by Gen. Cronje's troops, who were completely surprised while in column. The British, apparently simply rushed up the nearest hill without orders or knowing where the enemy was. It also appears that the British were so exhausted that they were unable to accomplish anything. They had been on the move since 4 A. M. Saturday, traveling by train, in open trucks, in the broiling sun, to Molteno. After an hour's rest they proceeded on a long march over the most difficult, unknown country.

BOERS' REPORT OF THE BATTLE

Burghers Hold Their Positions and Capture Forty-one of the British Soldiers.

PRETORIA, Monday, Dec. 11.—An official report says: "A battle at Modder River began yesterday with cannon firing, heavy fighting proceeding from 3:30 o'clock in the morning until 9:30 o'clock, with cannon, Maxims, and rifles. A bombardment began at 4:30 o'clock, and the fighting still continues. A balloon has just arisen above the British positions, where it remained ten minutes, and descended. There were heavy rains during the night."

At 9 o'clock this morning a further report was received from Modder River. A dispatch rider brought word that all the Boer positions had been maintained, and that forty-one British prisoners had been taken. At 9:30 o'clock it was reported that the heavy cannon fire had somewhat abated.

The British are constantly using their balloon. The fighting was still going on at noon.

LEADING BURGHERS ARE KILLED.

Prominent Pretoria Citizens Lose Their Lives in Battle.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A special dispatch from Pretoria, by way of Lorenzo Marques, says:

"While the battle of Magersfontein was proceeding, the Free State artillery engaged an armored train along the railway line toward Belmont.

"Forty-one prisoners, belonging to the First Battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, have just traversed Jacobsdal.

"In the attack on Surprise Hill three leading Pretoria townsmen were killed and several others wounded, causing great sorrow here."

DEFEAT HUMILIATES LONDON.

British Press Sorrowfully Admits that Methuen's Reverse Is the Worst of the War.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Each important battle seems to bring a worse reverse for the British, and the papers this morning sorrowfully admit that Lord Methuen's check at Magersfontein is the most serious event the war has yet produced. The Morning Post says:

"We have had our day of humiliation appointed for us. Let us accept it humbly and soberly and be better and stronger for the lesson it has taught us. This last reverse will make us a fresh butt of Europe. There never was a more apt occasion to prove to Europe what we are worth."

All the papers comment upon the extreme gravity of the situation and upon the momentous decision Lord Methuen now has to take—whether to remain at Modder River or to retire on Orange River. The Times says:

"At least 30,000 additional men must be sent out. The entire available reserve must be called up, and the militia and volunteers turnod to account. Efforts must be made to increase the local colonial forces, and further offers of troops from Canada and other colonies must be sought and accepted."

The Standard, which comments upon the "seemingly astonishing numbers of the Boers," is driven to the conjecture that a substantial portion of the Boer commandoes has been recruited from the Cape Dutch.

All eyes are now turned hopefully to Gen. Buller, who, taking into account the troops with Gen. White in Ladysmith, has altogether 30,000 men.

The Standard adds:

"At this moment there must be few men in Her Majesty's dominions who have as great a weight of care upon them as Gen. Buller carries on his shoulders."

GEN. WAUCHOPE DIES FIGHTING

One of Great Britain's Noted Soldiers Killed in the Action Near Modder River.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The War Office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Forestier-Walker:

"CAPE TOWN, Tuesday, Dec. 12.—Methuen wires that Gen. Wauchope was killed in action yesterday."

Major General Andrew G. Wauchope, Companion of the Bath and Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, was about fifty-three years old. He entered the army in 1865, after being graduated from the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. His first active service was in the Ashanti War, which he went through as a Lieutenant. He took part in the Egyptian war of 1882, and the Soudan expedition of 1884, being present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and most of the other important engagements. He was mentioned several times in dispatches to the War Office for his gallantry in the field both in the Ashanti and African wars.

After the Soudan war he took part in the Nile expedition of 1884-1885, and in 1888 became a Colonel. In 1898 he was the Brigadier General commanding the First Brigade of the Egyptian expeditionary force. He rendered excellent service in this capacity, and earned the frequent praise of Lord Kitchener.

Gen. Wauchope won the medal with clasp of the Ashanti expedition. A medal with two clasps was awarded to him after the Soudan campaign, and after the Nile campaign he was brevetted Lieutenant Colonel for bravery. In the Egyptian campaign of 1882 he won the bronze star and the medal with one clasp.

The Wauchopes are a famous old Scotch family, the present head of the house being Sir John Douglas Wauchope, who was formerly an officer in the Royal Scots Regiment. Gen. Wauchope was in command of the regiments of Highlanders in Gen. Lord Methuen's column. It is said to have been the great ambition of his life to command the famous "Black Watch," and his ambition was realized in this campaign, but he paid for it with his life.

Gen. Wauchope twice contested Midlothian against Mr. Gladstone. He had, of course, no hope of being successful at either time, but he succeeded in lowering Mr. Gladstone's majority at the latter election, and earned the thanks of the Conservative Party for the hard fight which he made against the Liberal leader. He achieved his greatest success in the battle of Omdurman, for his part in which he was thanked by both Houses of Parliament. He was one of the most popular officers in the British army, and was well known in London society.

MORE TROOPS ARE CALLED OUT.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—It is understood that the War Office yesterday (Wednesday) decided, in consequence of Lord Methuen's losses at Magersfontein, to mobilise an DISCONTENT IN CAPE COLONY.

Resentment Over the Policy of the British Government.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Times says:

"There is great dissatisfaction with the condition of affairs at Delagoa Bay. Lourenzo Marques is rapidly developing into a regular Transvaal emporium, and is becoming the headquarters for Transvaal agents of every description, who are able to communicate freely with other agents and with Europeans.

"The difficulty of preventing the importation of machinery and materials required for the State-worked mines, explosives for the Government factory, and even of actual ammunition, has been enormously increased by the practical impossibility of conducting thorough searches of foreign vessels professedly conveying food.

"The course adopted by the Imperial Government is regarded as tending seriously to prolong the war and to benefit foreign shippers at the expense of the British, who, in any case, are not able to trade with the enemy. Delagoa Bay, in the present state of affairs, is more useful to the Boers than if it were actually in Transvaal territory."

GEN. BULLER'S ADVANCE BEGUN.

Foreign Attaches Leave Cape Town for the Front.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Gen. Buller's advance in the direction of Colenso seems to have actually commenced. The Military Attachés have left Cape Town to join Gen. Buller, via Durban.

Gen. White reports, under date of Dec. 12, that there are thirty-two cases of enteric fever at Ladysmith.

There are renewed reports of a Cabinet crisis at Cape Town, where it is said that Gov. Milner is about to act, in consequence of disclosures involving the Ministry's loyalty.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—A dispatch from Frere camp, dated Tuesday, Dec. 12, morning, says:

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The War Office to-day received the following message from Gen. Forestier-Walker:

"Gatacre is moving from Bushman's Hoek to Sterkstroom to-day. The Magistrate at Sterkstroom wires that the situation there has slightly improved. Many of the missing have turned up.

"French reports that a detachment of cavalry, with two guns of the Horse Artillery, reconnoitered the enemy's position yesterday, at Quiltontein and Vaalkop, eight miles north of Arundel. They shelled a farm and drove the enemy from Vaalkop. The Boer loss was one killed and several wounded. Our casualties nil."

Mashona's Agents Make Explanation.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Bucknall Brothers of London, managers of the American-African Line, have written to the morning papers setting forth the fact with respect to the cargo of the British steamer Mashona, Capt. Johnstone, which left New York Nov. 2 via St. Vincent Nov. 16, for Algoa Bay, laden with flour for the Transvaal, and which was captured by the British gunboat Partridge. They say that the cargo was loaded in New York by a regular shipper, and that, under the American law, they were unable to refuse to carry the flour.

SKETCHES OF DEAD OFFICERS.

The Marquis of Winchester, killed near Modder River, Monday, was the premier Marquis of England. The title was granted in the reign of Henry VIII., but the family of Paulet was famous as early as the thirteenth century. The peer who has just died was one of the most promising young noblemen in England. He was a gallant soldier, and also a man of the most advanced ideas with regard to the duties of the land-holding class to their tenants—ideas which he carried into effect among his own dependants, although the Paulets have in recent years become a greatly impoverished family.

Augustus John Henry Beaumont Paulet, fifteenth Marquis of Winchester, Baron St. John, and Hereditary Bearer of the Corps of Maintenance, was born Feb. 6, 1858. He was a son of the fourteenth Marquis, who married the Hon. Mary Montagu, a daughter of the sixth Lord Rokeby. The late peer was educated at Eton, and after passing through the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, became a subaltern in the Coldstream Guards. The fourteenth Marquis died July 4, 1887, but the new peer did not resign his commission, as is the usual custom on succeeding to an important a position, probably on account of his financial inability to keep that position up properly.

Lord Winchester, however, took an interest in the political duties attaching to his position, and attended the debates in the House of Lords frequently, though he seldom spoke. He was a Conservative in politics, and a member of the Carlton Club. His only other club was the Guards.

The late peer was unmarried, and the title and estates go to his brother, Lord Henry William Montagu, who was until a short time ago a Lieutenant in the Third Battalion of the Hampshire Regiment. He was born in 1862.

Lord Winchester fought with distinction in the Nile expedition of 1884, being one of the small detachment of guards which was allowed to go to the front.

Lieut. Col. William Robert Codrington of the Eleventh Hussars, was the eldest son and heir of Sir William Codrington, Bart., the head of a famous old Scotch house, as famous in France as in Scotland. His father owns two splendid chateaus in France, besides a mansion at Rennes.

Lieut. Col. Codrington was born April 18, 1857, and was one of the youngest officers of his rank in the British Army. The next heir to the title is his brother George.

IRISHMEN TO JOIN THE BOERS.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 13.—The Plain Dealer to-morrow will say:

A party of twenty-five young Irish-Americans have left this city to join the Boers in their fight against Great Britain. At New York these young men, who are mostly veterans of the Spanish-American war, will join about 300 other Irishmen, and the entire party will sail from New York on Saturday for Paris. In the latter city the men will join an Irish regiment being formed to go to the assistance of the Boers. The recruits from this country come largely from Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and other cities. Five hundred more Irish-Americans will follow to Paris in a couple of weeks. Plans have already been made for the entire regiment of 1,000 to reach the scene of the fighting.

Major William J. Gleason, one of the best-known Irish-Americans in this city, said to-day:

"This movement has been on foot among the Irish in Cleveland for about three weeks. In two weeks another party from here will leave for New York to enlist in the service. This uprising means a mighty blow against England. All over the country the Irish are now joining with the Dutch, and the sending of volunteers to South Africa will be continued.

"We have tried to keep this movement as quiet as possible."

REGIMENTS WHICH SUFFERED.

The Gordon Highlanders, who suffered severely in the recent battle near Modder River, is the most famous organization in the British Army, and has been commanded by some of the most famous officers.

The organization comprises the Seventy-fifth and Ninety-second Regiments of foot. The former regiment was raised in 1787, and the Ninety-second in 1794, by the Marquis of Huntly, afterward the last Duke of Gordon, and the story is familiar to every WAR LEADS TO A SUICIDE.

Patriotic Englishman, Hearing of Reverses, Jumps from a Window.

Because of the reverses which have befallen British arms in South Africa, and thoroughly convinced that England will be beaten by the Transvaal, Daniel A. Weber, an Englishman, jumped out of his window on the fourth floor of 208 East Eightieth Street, last night and was killed.

He was fifty-seven years old, and lived with his son, Daniel, and the latter's wife. The man had been long out of work, and his efforts to get employment had been futile. The war reports from South Africa for the last two weeks gave him still greater reason for melancholy. Loyal to the core to the English Army, every report of a defeat or disaster to it made him more and more disconsolate. The reports yesterday of Gen. Methuen's repulse broke his spirit.

"I'm afraid the Boers will win," he said last night at the supper table, to his son. The latter took a more hopeful view of it, and, after trying to cheer his father up, he retired. The son had hardly fallen asleep when a neighbor pounded on the door and informed him that his father had jumped out of the window. The son ran down stairs and found his father's body in the centre of half a dozen neighbors and some policemen. Death had been instantaneous.

Off for His Post at Pretoria.

Adelbert S. Hay, son of the Secretary of State, who has been appointed United States Consul at Pretoria, Transvaal, to succeed Conseul Macrum, yesterday sailed on the American Line steamship St. Louis. Mr. Hay said he has been instructed to observe strict neutrality. Mr. Hay, who is twenty-three years old, was graduated at Yale last year. He has been in the Philippines since the Filipino insurrection began and has also spent several months at the American Embassy in London.

EPIDEMIC OF TYPHOID FEARED.

Alarming Condition of Affairs in Jamaica Due to Uncompleted Sewer System.

An alarming condition of affairs exists in Jamaica, Queens Borough, where the physicians fear there will be in the Spring an epidemic of typhoid. Many houses are uninhabitable and the clerks in the Queens County Clerk's office have been able to do only a few hours' work each day. This state of affairs is due to the manner in which the sewers have been looked after.

Two years ago the village spent $100,000 for the laying of sewer mains. It was planned that the sewage was to be disposed of in works to be located near Jamaica Bay. Before the work was completed it was found there was not money enough to build the disposal plant. The Trustees decided to finish the sewers and let the City of New York finish the job.

While the sewers were being built connections were run from the sewer to the curb line. Some of the houses were connected, but when it was found there was no outlet to the sewer orders were given that no one should use the connections. This order has been continuously violated. Some of the householders, it is alleged, have extended secret connections to the pipes at the curb line.

The result is that the sewer pipes all over the village are becoming clogged with sewage. About fifty of the heaviest taxpayers of Jamaica have taken hold of the matter to see if something cannot be done. A committee consisting of County Clerk John H. Sutphin and John J. McLaughlin has been appointed to carry the matter into the courts. The sum of $50,000 has been appropriated by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Municipal Assembly for the completion of the sewers and the disposal works, but the whole matter has been held up in the Corporation Counsel's office because Mr. Whalen has rendered an opinion that under the charter the city has authority to build sewers only and not disposal works.

LITTLE GIRL BURIED AT SEA.

Rosa Vajda, a child who was coming to this country to spend Christmas with her father, died at sea on the Red Star Line steamship Southwark, which arrived yesterday from Antwerp. She was buried at sea. Her father came here several months ago to prepare a home for his family, and is now living in Passaic, N. J.

The little girl was accompanied by a woman who was a friend of the family, coming here also to join relatives. Rosa's death was due to apoplexy.

ROOT MAY BE SET ASIDE

West and South Oppose a New Yorker for Vice Presidency.

WOODRUFF YET IN THE FIGHT

While This State Probably Will Get the Republican Vice Presidential Nomination, It Is Not Certain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Despite all reports to the contrary, the question of the Republican nomination for Vice President is not yet settled, and one proof of it is that new booms are continually cropping up. The latest is that of Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn, whose claims to the nomination seem to rest on the fact that he comes from Bryan's State. Mr. Root's greatest danger lies in the fact that the West and South are not yet reconciled to the presentation of the honor to New York, and the claims of several candidates will come before the Republican leaders before the matter is settled. This may cause the bringing out of a new man.

There is, however, reason to believe that the next Republican Convention will be unique in that both candidates will be fixed upon before the convention assembles.

Inquiry among the Republican leaders who are considering the availability of Vice Presidential candidates develops the following reasons for Secretary Root's undoubted advantage in the race. In the first place, he is immensely helped by the fact that there is no fight over the Presidential nominee. The certainty of President McKinley's renomination does away with all necessity for deals and bargains, and it also neutralizes to a certain extent the influence of State leaders. No State leader can threaten the Administration with defeat in the convention, and the Administration has no need to conciliate any delegation by offering it the nomination for Vice President.

With no reason for taking into account ordinary political considerations, the friends of the Administration are free to make their selection for other reasons, and the sentiment among the leaders is that the nominee should be a man of National reputation. This is the trouble which nearly all the candidates except Secretary Root find confronting them the moment they enter the field. The sentiment has taken root everywhere among the leaders, and every candidate except the Secretary of War has trouble with it. This is especially the case when the field is narrowed down to New York candidates.

For these reasons the members of the National Committee and other Republican leaders believe that Root will be nominated. It being admitted even by Westerners that New York is sure of the place. He is in the lead, but of course his nomination is not certain. It has just begun to dawn on politicians from other States that the candidacy of Lieut. Gov. Woodruff is not a joke. That Mr. Woodruff is still a candidate is proof of itself that the race is still open. Several prominent politicians from other States have suddenly awakened within a short time to the fact that Mr. Woodruff is to be reckoned with. It is now being recalled that although he has never entered a political race when his case did not seem to be hopeless, he has never been defeated for a nomination, and that he is the first political leader who has ever accomplished the feat of wiping out all opposition to the machine in Kings County and making that faction-torn district solid.

All these considerations are leading people to wonder if he would enter upon a canvass which he knew to be hopeless. He has abandoned his former hustling methods of campaigning and is conducting a still hunt.

One thing that may change the present situation is the fact that influential people believe that Mr. Root would be more useful to President McKinley as Secretary of War that as Vice President. But in any case, it is practically certain that the Republican nomination for Vice President will go to New York.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

New York and Philadelphia May Combine Against Chicago—Delegations Arriving in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Depew and Lieut. Gov. Woodruff will deliver the principal speeches for New York before the Republican National Committee on Friday, when there will be a hearing for the different cities which want to secure the National Convention. New York is now represented here by a number of advocates, but the main body of the committee will not be here until to-morrow.

The Chicago delegation arrived at 4:30 o'clock and took rooms at the Shoreham. They will open headquarters to-morrow. The New York and Philadelphia headquarters adjoin each other at the Arlington, and the banners and decorations of the two Eastern cities amicably mingle. There is an impression that in case Chicago appears to have an unmistakable lead, the two cities will combine and make a joint fight for the East. Nobody will admit this as yet, and New York and Philadelphia both claim that they are in the fight to stay.

The usual Chicago tactics are being pursued. Although the delegation has been in town only a few hours and has no headquarters, everything about the Shoreham has a Chicago flavor, as the Arlington there is nothing outside the committee rooms to indicate that a fight is being made for the National Convention, but everywhere in the Shoreham Chicagoans are busy talking about the merits of their city, and it is hardly possible to pass it without becoming convinced of their presence.

The Philadelphians have been working in a quieter manner, but working hard. They claim a majority of the National Committeemen now in the city, and Senator Penrose and the Pennsylvania representatives are confident that Philadelphia is already sure of the convention.

H. C. Payne's proposition to alter the basis of representation in the convention is beginning to play a part in the fight of the cities. Mr. Payne's scheme has met with so much favor that the Southern Committeemen feel obliged to put up a hard fight against it, and there is already talk to the effect that they may combine with one of the cities which want the convention and make a deal for its support. The impression seems to be that such a deal will be in the interest of Philadelphia.

Mr. Payne said to-night that of twenty members who have arrived quite two-thirds were in favor of sending the convention to Chicago.

FAVORS ENFORCED SUFFRAGE.

Central Republican Club Considers a Resolution Aimed at Voters Who Neglect Their Duty.

At a meeting of the Central Republican Club of the Thirty-first Assembly District held last evening at its clubhouse, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street and Lenox Avenue, Alderman Elias Goodman introduced a resolution recommending legislation that would have the effect of bringing negligent voters to the polls on election day. Ex-Assemblyman Samuel Scott Slater presided, and, after routine business had been transacted, Alderman Goodman's resolution came up under the head of the report of the Committee on Political Affairs.

The preamble of the resolution states that there is a deplorable spirit of neglect manifested by citizens who profess public spirit, and therefore it was resolved that legislation ought to be enacted making it imperative on all citizens to register and vote; that it should be made an offense for every citizen to refuse or neglect to vote; that all persons not voting shall be compelled in some way to serve those who do or give the voters some kind of an advantage; that legislation be enacted making the officials select jurors first from lists of citizens who do not vote, and that such jurors in that way selected shall be assigned to courts where the pay is only nominal.

The Committee on Political Affairs was instructed to investigate and see if it be prudent to advise a modification of the civil service laws to the extent that citizens who register and vote shall have a slightly higher rating than other applicants for public places.

The resolutions were received with hearty applause and several members spoke in favor of them. It was the sense of the meeting that the resolutions be adopted at once, but the Committee on Political Affairs did not desire this action at present. The matter was referred back for further consideration.

A resolution was offered by ex-Assemblyman Slater and adopted that suitable resolutions be drafted, expressing the sympathy of the club in the death of Edward C. Stone, and that they be presented to his parents. Mr. Slater was appointed Chairman of the committee.

Sixteen new members were elected, making the membership of the club 490.

ALLEN APPOINTED SENATOR.

Gov. Poynter of Nebraska Names Him to Fill the Vacancy Caused by the Death of Mr. Hayward.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 13.—Gov. Poynter has appointed ex-Senator Allen to fill the Senatorial vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Hayward.

Last night Gov. Poynter wired ex-Senator Allen to come to Lincoln for a conference. Allen came down from his home at Madison on the morning train, and went immediately to the Capitol. They were closeted together in the Governor's private room for some time. When the conference was over Gov. Poynter announced that he had decided to appoint the ex-Senator to the place, and that his commission would be made out as speedily as possible. The newly appointed Senator announced his intention of proceeding to Washington at once and assuming the duties of his office.

It is said the appointment of Allen was made certain by the receipt of a telegram from Bryan by the Governor, in which Bryan urged that good faith and party expediency demanded Allen's appointment. In announcing the appointment of Allen, The World-Herald publishes the following card from its proprietor, Mr. Hitchcock:

To the many earnest friends who so generously and enthusiastically supported me in my recent candidacy for the Senatorial appointment at the hands of the Governor, I herewith tender my thanks.

I cannot honestly deny that I have been deeply disappointed, and I feel most keenly the sting of ingratitude, but above all I have been deeply moved by the unexpected and almost unanimous support of the people of Douglas County and the generous indorsement of representative men in all parts of Nebraska.

William Vincent Allen was born in Midway, Madison County, Ohio, Jan. 28, 1847. When he was ten years old he removed with his family to Iowa, and was educated in the common schools there. Afterward he became a student at the Upper Iowa University. During the civil war he served as a private in the Thirty-second Iowa Infantry, after which he read law, being admitted to the Iowa bar in May, 1869. He practiced law in Iowa until 1884, when he removed to Nebraska, engaging in the same profession there.

In 1891 Mr. Allen was elected Judge of the District Court of the Ninth Judicial District of Nebraska. The following year he became permanent President of the Populist State Convention, and in 1893 he was elected to the United States Senate as a Populist, serving until the expiration of his term. Last March the Governor of Nebraska tendered to Mr. Allen a vacant District Judgeship, thus restoring him to the position which he held before he became a Senator.

Mr. Allen was a Democrat while a resident of Iowa. He signalized his removal to Nebraska by becoming a Republican, and remained in full association with that party until the middle of 1891. He was a member of the Republican State Convention in 1890, and was an earnest supporter of Lucius D. Richards in the three-cornered Gubernatorial campaign, which ended in the election of James E. Boyd, the Democratic candidate. The McKinley and Force bills drove Mr. Allen out of the Republican Party. He was the first Senator not a Republican ever elected from Nebraska, and his choice was the result of a combination, after a long and bitter fight, of the Democrats and Populists.

BRYAN APPROVES THE CHOICE.

Says the Appointment Should Give Universal Satisfaction.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 13.—When asked today by an Associated Press correspondent as to what he thought of Mr. Allen's appointment as Senator from Nebraska, Mr. Bryan replied:

"I think the appointment of Mr. Allen ought to give universal satisfaction. He made a good record in the Senate, and last year had the unanimous support of the Fusion members of the Legislature. I think that in making this appointment the Governor acted wisely. There are several Democrats in the State who would have filled the office acceptably, but the fact that Allen was last year the choice of all three parties makes him the logical man for the place. I have no doubt that a Democrat will be chosen next year to succeed Senator Thurston, and that will give our State a Populist and a Democrat in the Senate."

BOSTON REPUBLICAN BY 2,084.

Full Returns Show that a Very Heavy Vote Was Cast.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—Revised returns from all the wards and precincts in the city show that Thomas N. Hart, the Republican candidate for Mayor, was elected here yesterday by a plurality of 2,084, his total vote being 40,678, while that of the Democratic nominee, Gen. P. A. Collins, was 38,594. The total vote for the four candidates for Mayor, including besides those of the Republican and Democratic Parties, the men who headed the Socialtst Democratic and the Socialist Labor tickets was 81,135. This is the largest vote ever cast at a municipal election in Boston.

Complete returns give the Republican candidate for Street Commissioner, Edward W. Presho, a majority of 142 over John H. Duane, who was nominated by the Democrats. Mr. Duane declares that he will ask for a recount. The Board of Aldermen stands eight Democrats to five Republicans. There will be a recount in the Fifth District, where Michael J. O'Brien was elected by a majority of less than 100 over his Republican opponent. The Common Council will stand 42 Democrats, 33 Republicans. Of the eight members of the School Board elected, four were nominated by the Democrats, two by the Republicans, and two by both Republicans and Democrats.

A very pronounced verdict was given by the voters in answer to the proposition to relay the car tracks on Tremont Street, which were removed when the subway was opened. The majority against the question was more than 25,000.

The total license vote shows a majority of about 20,000 for license, and the eight-hour day for city employes was indorsed by a majority of more than 46,000, or by a vote of about 3 to 1.

EXTRA SESSION IN MICHIGAN.

Gov. Pingree Issues a Call to the Legislature to Meet Dec. 18.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 13.—Gov. Pingree to-day sent out a call for an extra session of the Legislature to convene Monday, Dec. 18, to "consider the submission of an amendment or amendments to the Constitution, which will permit the enactment of laws which will provide for the equal taxation of all property by the assessment of the same at its cash value, and such other matters as shall be submitted by special message."

The call for the special session tells of the passage of the Atkinson Railway Taxation bill by the last Legislature, and that it was declared unconstitutional last Spring by the State Supreme Court, and says that because of that decision a Constitutional amendment is necessary "before laws can be enacted providing for equal taxation of all property."

Fatal Wreck on the Jersey Central.

ALLENTOWN, Penn., Dec. 13.—Passenger Train No. 18 on the Jersey Central Railroad, east-bound, due here at 8:57 o'clock this evening, ran into the hind end of an extra coal train, also east-bound, opposite Laury's, between Siegfried and Treichler's. Engineer Fred F. Yeomans, Fireman William H. Smith, and Baggage Master Thomas Herth of the passenger train, and Flagman George Hann of the coal train were buried under the wreck and killed. The passengers were severely shaken up, but none were seriously injured.

DEFEAT FOR DR. MAXWELL

His Report and the Board's Attack to Issue Together.

PRESIDENT ROBERTSON WINS

He Again Denounces the City Superintendent of Schools—President Burke Talks of Robbery.

The Board of Education at its meeting yesterday afternoon had another heated discussion over City Superintendent Maxwell's first annual report, which contains a severe criticism of the Brooklyn local committee school system. At the previous meeting of the board it was decided by a close vote to file but not to print the report. Dr. Maxwell's friends alleged that this filing was virtually a suppression of the report. A determined effort was made, therefore, by them yesterday to get the board to reconsider its action and to print the document.

Commissioner J. Edward Swanstrom, a Brooklyn representative, who had spoken and voted for the report at the meeting on Nov. 22, reopened the question.

"Our action in regard to this annual report," he said, "was a small piece of business. It held us up to public scorn. I move to reconsider that action."

Commissioner Robertson, who is President of the Brooklyn School Board, said that, as Dr. Richardson, the Chairman of the Committee on School System, was absent, the matter should go over. To vote on it in his absence would be an act of discourtesy to Dr. Richardson. Personally, he was willing to vote on the question.

"Mr. Maxwell's attack," he said, "has simply proved to be a boomerang. The press, the teachers, the best citizens of Brooklyn, all will take the same view of it. It seems to have been a prearranged attack for some legislative purpose."

Commissioner Swanstrom said the motion had to be made then or it could not be made at all. Commissioner Van Hoesen raised the point that Mr. Swanstrom had no right to make the motion, as he had voted with the minority at the previous meeting. President Little ruled that Mr. Swanstrom's motion was out of order.

CALLS BOARD'S ACTION SILLY.

"It is not true," said Commissioner Maxwell, "as stated by Mr. Swanstrom that the best citizens of Brooklyn uphold the boards' action. Wherever I have been in Brooklyn I've heard the action declared ridiculous. It's not only that, but it's small, stupid, and silly. I'm not afraid to print any criticisms Mr. Maxwell chooses to make."

Commissioner Burke, President of the Richmond School Board, moved that the report be taken from the file. Commissioner Swanstrom offered as an amendment that 1,000 copies be printed. Commissioner Robertson offered as a substitute that the same number of copies of the report of the Committee on School System be printed and that to each copy of the annual report a copy of the committee's report be affixed. This committee report accuses Dr. Maxwell of failing to make good his charges against the school committee system, although offered ample opportunity to do so.

"I don't think we have any right to do this," said Commissioner Swanstrom. "We can't add anything to the Superintendent's report."

"Why not affix the photographs of the committee while you are about it," said Commissioner Maxwell.

"I wish," said Commissioner Robertson, "to have his failure to substantiate his charges go out with these charges. I don't consider this a petty matter. The committee report shows that the Superintendent failed to come forward like a man and make good his assertions."

Commissioner Swanstrom wished to amend his substitute, but ex-Judge Van Hoesen objected on the ground that it was an amendment to an amendment to an amendment, and the Chair so ruled. A vote sustained the Chair's ruling.

ATTACK ON DR. MAXWELL.

Then the yeas and nays on Commissioner Robertson's substitute were taken. In explaining his vote Mr. Robertson accused Dr. Maxwell of inconsistency. He said that at a committee meeting in the old Brooklyn City Hall in 1896, Dr. Maxwell had expressed a high opinion of Brooklyn's school system and a not very good one of New York's school system. He said he knew that Commissioner Swanstrom felt keenly the position the Superintendent had placed himself in and expressed himself as quite amused at the attitude of Commissioner Maxwell. He read from an interview with Senator Ford in THE NEW YORK TIMES to show how high an opinion 'this boon companion and champion" of the Superintendent had of Brooklyn's school system. Mr. Robertson added that Dr. Maxwell had gone out of his way to attack the Brooklyn school committee system, his object being to centralize school government.

"I am glad," said Mr. Robertson, "that the record shows his criticisms have been resented by the very men who practically placed him where he is to-day."

Ex-Judge Van Hoesen said he had voted at the last meeting to print the annual report, but he had no objection to sending out the committee's report with it. He had found in Dr. Maxwell's report language that might easily be construed into an attack upon the private character of members of the board, who were not obliged to stand mute under such grave charges, but should be allowed the privilege to defend themselves. The Superintendent probably did not intend to say that all the members were guilty of corruption, but his language could be so construed.

The vote was as follows on Commissioner Robertson's motion to print 1,000 copies each of the annual report, and of the school system committee's report, and to affix them: Ayes—Adams, Dresser, Griffin, Kittel, Livingston, Moriarty, Robertson, Van Hoesen, and President Little.—9. Nays—Burke, Maxwell, and Swanstrom—3.

Superintendent Maxwell, although present throughout the discussion, took no part in it. His position does not entitle him to a vote in the board meetings.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Finance Committee made a report showing that the Board of Estimate had made the following apportionment of the school fund for 1900: Manhattan and the Bronx, $7,053,441.90; Brooklyn, $4,108,747; Queens, $537,626.11; Richmond, $278,310. The apportionment, according to the aggregate school attendance, would give the following figures: Manhattan and the Bronx, $7,074,876.59; Brooklyn, $4,059,584.80; Queens, $650,904.03; Richmond, $242,809.59. Under this distribution, which is according to Section 1,065 of the charter, Manhattan and the Bronx get $21,434.60 more than the Board of Estimate's appropriation; Brooklyn gets $49,212.20 less, Queens get $83,277.92 more, and Richmond gets $35,500.41 less.

Commissioner Burke said something ought to be done to remove the stigma placed on the Richmond School Board by the Board of Estimate. This report of the Finance Committee, he said, showed that Queens must have been shamefully treated for 1899. Richmond Borough had asked for 1899 only what was honestly needed. Under ironclad laws it was compelled to pay high wages to Principals, teachers, and clerks. Money to which it was entitled had been taken from it this year, and now it was again to be robbed of $35,000. It was a clear case of robbery. He would not mince words. Richmond had only one drawing master, no manual training school, no music teachers, while the other boroughs had all the latest fads and fancies. Manhattan and the Bronx, for instance, had 1 supervisor of music, 24 assistant supervisors of music, and 261 teachers of music, but Richmond could not get even common school money. Attacks had been made upon the Richmond School Board, who received no pay for their services, by well-paid officials, who based their attacks upon misinformation. Unless Richmond got money her schools would be—in fact, they now were—in a deplorable condition.

"I have been moved," Mr. Burke went on to say, "by the piteous appeals to me of the Richmond teachers. We have been robbed under the cover of the law. If they want to cut down expenses, why don't they select the ward men, and not the teachers, for victims? Brooklyn may have a surplus of $7,000 left from our money voted to it. Even that will afford us some relief."

RELIEF IN LEGISLATION.

President Little said he had pointed out this very danger last February. The only relief, he said, was in legislation. Dr. Maxwell said it was unjust to Queens and Richmond to count the corporate school attendance in the aggregate attendance.

A long and lively correspondence between Superintendent Maxwell and State Superintendent of Instruction Skinner was read. Mr. Skinner called for an alphabetical list of the teachers employed in this city. Dr. Maxwell replied he had not the clerical force to fill the blanks forwarded by Mr. Skinner. Mr. Skinner said the School Principals could make out the blanks. Dr. Maxwell replied that they couldn't. He said that it seemed Mr. Skinner wished to find out what graduates of the College of St. Francis Xavier had been granted licenses to teach and informed him teo only had received licenses and only one was teaching. Mr. Skinner said that this was a gratuitous assumption on the part of Dr. Maxwell. What was wanted was an alphabetical list of the 10,500 teachers, with data concerning them.

Dr. Maxwell requested that five additional clerks be appointed in his office for a period not to exceed three months, the aggregate of whose salaries shall not exceed $400 per month. The board on motion of ex-Judge Van Hoesen referred the matter to the Finance Committee.

NOVEMBER PAY ROLLS READY.

Increases for Teachers—Veterans Benefited Under Gaynor's Decision.

Auditor Cook of the Board of Education said yesterday afternoon that the pay rolls of the teachers in Manhattan and the Bronx Boroughs for November, under the compromise arrangement between President Little and Controller Coler, had all been audited and certified by him, and that the teachers would probably receive their checks to-day or to-morrow. He has not yet received the Brooklyn pay rolls for November. The situation in Queens and Richmond Boroughs, he said, was unchanged.

President Little yesterday sent a communication to Acting Secretary Bussey of the School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx, calling his attention to Justice Gaynor's decision in favor of the Brooklyn teachers, and saying that it covered the controversy in these two boroughs also. He therefore requests Mr. Bussy to have the supplementary pay rolls prepared at once. These pay rolls, President Little adds, should be for the amounts due the teachers under the schedule of May 17, less the amounts that have been paid to them on account under the understanding arrived at between the Corporation Counsel, the Controller, and himself.

These pay rolls, it is understood, will include all the Ahearn law increases since April 25, 1899, the date on which the law went into effect, and the salaries under the equalizing schedules adopted in these boroughs on May 17 and in Brooklyn on July 1.

Among those who will benefit by Justice Gaynor's decision are twenty-nine veteran teachers, who will be retired on Jan. 1 next on account of physical disability. They will now be paid under the Ahearn law's provisions. The teachers are Caroline Hopkins and Sarah F. Miller, appointed in 1849; Mrs. Mary H. Brandon, appointed in 1853; Dorothea Dixon, appointed in 1853; Charlotte Pollock, appointed in 1856; Josephine Walker and Irene M. Gahagan, appointed in 1858; M. Louise Waring, Ianena Z. Brown, Adelaide M. Tuers, and E. Isabella Youngs, appointed in 1861; Bridget F. McCullon, Sarah Armstrong, Clarise I. Hoyt, and Josephine China, appointed in 1863; Eugenia Mayereau, Sarah J. Tooker, Mary L. Parsells, and Louisa Vandervoort, appointed in 1864; Anna M. Cullen, Rebecca M. Nichols, Sarah Durell, and Jennie G. Cunningham, appointed in 1865; Lucy Gamble, appointed in 1868; Elizabeth Commerford and Margaret Hosford, appointed in 1867; Sarah E. Baker and Margaret E. Dodd, appointed in 1868, and Margaret Reilly, appointed in 1869.

FIGHT FOR STATE FUND.

Justice Beach Grants an Order Against Board of Education.

Justice Beach yesterday signed an order directing President Little and the other members of the Board of Education to show cause on Monday next, in the Supreme Court, Special Term, why a writ of mandamus should not be issued compelling them to apportion among the several School Boards of this city the sum of $1,180,749.13 received from the State School Fund. The order was granted to Magnus Gross, first assistant teacher in School No. 6, Eighty-fifth Street and Madison Avenue, and Chairman of the Committee on Teachers' Interests of the New York Teachers' Association.

In his affidavit Mr. Gross alleges that the State School Fund was not devoted as the law directs exclusively to the payment of teachers' salaries, but was diverted to other purposes.

In an appended affidavit Lewis L. Delafield, counsel for the Teachers' Association, states he was informed at the Controller's office that the school money received from the State had been paid into the "general fund for the reduction of taxation," and that no part of it has been used to pay teachers' salaries.

If this suit results in favor of the teachers the city hereafter will have to apply this State school money exclusively to the payment of teachers' salaries. It will provide enough money to pay the teachers' salaries in full for 1900. If the suit fails the Board of Education under the appropriation for 1900 will have to make a wholesale reduction in the present salary schedules.

Chicago Brokers Bankrupt.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—A petition in bankruptcy was filed by Luther C. Humphrey, a broker, to-day. His debts are $108,792, contracted when he was in business in Lincoln, Neb. Petitions were also filed by Linis R. and Frank C. Giddings, brokers, the debts being $130,573 and $114,197 respectively.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Rain or snow to-night or to-morrow; winds north.

The storm in the north has practically disappeared, and the pressure is generally high throughout the country, except in the West Gulf States, there being a moderate depression central in Southeastern Texas, as a result the temperatures are comparatively low, except in the Gulf, Middle, and South Atlantic States, having fallen since Tuesday night 6 to 22 degrees. They range from 15 to 30 degrees in the Northwest to about 12 degrees below the seasonal average in the Middle Mississippi Valley. During the past twenty-four hours there have been snows in the lake regions, and from the Middle Mississippi Valley through Colorado and New Mexico, and also Montana. In the Pacific Coast and plateau regions the weather has been fair, except light snow in the middle and northern plateau, where the temperature continues quite low. There will be snow to-day in the northern portion of Texas and the Middle and West Gulf States, and rain on the southern portions. There will be snow to-day in Western Tennessee and Western Kentucky. Fair weather to-day in the Atlantic States will be followed by rain to-night or to-morrow, except snow in New England. In the lake regions and the Upper Ohio Valley, and in the West generally, fair weather will prevail. It will be much colder to-day in the West Gulf States, cooler in the northern portion of the East Gulf States, and the Middle Atlantic States and New England. It will continue cold generally during to-morrow and Saturday east of the Mississippi River, except in Florida, and will be warmer to-morrow in the extreme West and Northwest. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will be fresh and mostly north to east.

	—Weather Bureau—		—TIMES—
	1898.	1899.	1898.	1899.
3 A. M.	30	40	32	42

HOW HE RECOVERED HIS WATCH.

Stolen from Him on a Trolley Car, Found Under a Fence.

George White, a druggist of 280 Stewart Avenue, Jersey City, boarded a trolley car in front of his store last evening to go to his home on the Hill. A minute later he found his watch, valued at $125, missing. Two men had left the car just after he boarded it, and he had brushed against them in entering.

He alighted and met them walking along Newark Avenue. Pelleshan Coughlin arrested one of them, who gave his name as Thomas McCormack of 272 Ross Street, Brooklyn. He at first denied the robbery, but later, while proceeding to Capt. Cook's, weakened and said the watch was hidden under a fence on Newark Avenue. It was recovered.

Warrants in Paterson Wreck Case.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 13.—Warrants were issued to-night by Coroner Yates for the arrest of George W. Cappell, the conductor, and William Snedeker, the rear-end brakeman of the Buffalo Express, which was wrecked at the Barclay Street station here Nov. 29. The warrants are based upon the verdict of the Coroner's jury, returned early this morning. Surprise is expressed that the railroad company and Engineer Riordan of the Phillipsburg accommodation train, which ran into the Buffalo Express, were not included in the verdict.

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

Meritorious Bits of Art

IN the Basement, near Broadway, we've an art store that appeals to those of refined tastes. strange to put it that way? It is necessary.

Choice pieces of sculptured marble from Italy; handsome bronzes from ə; bits of ceramic beauty from all countries noted for china and porcelain g and decorating.

It is a busy place, especially now, but a careful, orderly place for all -a store frequented by nice people looking for nice things for gifts.

This isn't the only store carrying such stocks, but it is the only store we of that sells such goods at prosaic, fair prices.

There are pieces of Royal Vienna ware at $3 and at $400—and be- Marbles at $5 to $125—we're only talking of smaller pieces. Plates and $12 a piece, and many between-prices.

These gilt tables with Vienna placque are noticeably handsome. ɔ $55. The Dresden cabinets are $35 to $70.

The finest onyx pedestal is $200. This one is $65, and there are others.

Pieces of Vienna glass are giveable. $1.75 to $17.50.

These German plaques are of cameo-like beauty, but inexpensive, $12.

And you can't tell a thing about any of these bits of beauty until you seen them.

Pillows and Draperies Beats all how a little artistic skill, or simple good taste can change the commonplace to the beautiful. There has been much time wasted in pillow making—the sofa pillow was a tedious evolution that had to be taken care of.

Now-a-days, decorative stuffs are drawn over down cushions and the pillow is beautiful. It's the know-how. We heard an artist say that a store corner here where pillows were almost heaped (just as samples) looked like a studio. A good many fine effects are gotten now in burnt leather.

But it is simply a matter of choosing—and you're apt to choose six or eight once you get started. $1.50 to $26.75 a piece.

Furs for Gifts We never did so much fur business—in pieces sold or in dollar's worth—as we have so far this season. And that, despite the fact that the weather has been too warm to be an incentive to fur wearing. Why?

It must be that we sell furs satisfactorily — most satisfactorily — and that more and more of New York has come to take this fur store at its full.

It is a store, manned by fine talent, stocked sensibly and bountifully—not a mere department.

If It's a Present for a Man:

Perhaps you've decided it shall be a gift of utility, but have got no further. Let us suggest. Why not something to wear—something in which usefulness, comfort and elegance are all happily combined? Say a house-coat. There's the kind that will please in this carefully chosen assortment—they're all in good taste.

House Coats at $3.75 to $16.50. At the first price, cotton-and-wool mixtures in light and dark colorings. Some of tricot, satin bound, at $4.50. And at $5 to $10, at least fifty patterns of double-faced cloth. There are velvet coats at $10—exceptionally fine ones at $16.50. The latter in brown, blue and black, made up in excellent style.

Dressing Gowns—No less varied a gathering of these. Choose at $10 to $35—coverts at the lower price, elegantly trimmed silk crepon gowns at the higher price. And lots of other well made, tasteful garments at prices between those extremes.

Bath Robes—Soft, warm, luxurious garments. Some of eiderdown at $2.75—some of rich imported blankets at $18 and $20. Other eiderdown robes at $4 to $7. And some domestic blankets at $8 and $9. Of Terry cloth a half dozen good kinds—$3.75 to $10. Wool-filled Terry robes at $13.50 and $18.

Mackintoshes—These are dependable—rain-proof. The seams are sewed, then cemented. Made in box-coat style—the correct shape. The newest patterns. $3 to $22.50.

Neckwear—All the shapes, of course. All good patterns, too. And plenty of material, too, from which we will make up a tie to your order. Those ready-to-wear at 25c. to $4.50. Excellent choosing at the lower prices—styles as good as any. The generously large De Joinvilles are of very fine quality and are $3, $3.50 and $4.50.

Suspenders—A collection of wholly new effects—novel and pretty. One kind has sterling silver buckles, some frosted, some burnished, others oxidized; the suspenders are silks, barathea and ottoman in fancy weaves; prices are $2 to $4. An elegant sort with gold-plated buckles at $4 to $6. Plenty less expensive, and yet pretty enough. 50c, $1 and up to $2.

WOOD IS TO GOVERN CUBA

Directed by the President to Relieve Major Gen. Brooke.

CHANGE TO BE MADE AT ONCE

Retiring Governor Will Proceed from Havana to Washington and May Be Sent Later to Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—By direction of the President Major Gen. Leonard Wood, United States Volunteers, was to-day assigned to the command of the Division of Cuba, relieving Major Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army.

Major Gen. Wood will in addition to his duties as division commander, exercise the authority of Military Governor of the island.

On completion of the transfer of the command, Major Gen. Brooke is ordered to repair to this city and report to the Adjutant General of the army for further orders of the Secretary of War. He will be accompanied by his authorized aides.

In relieving Major Gen. Brooke the President desires to express his high appreciation of and thanks for the faithful and efficient service rendered by that officer as Military Governor of Cuba.

Secretary Root said this afternoon that Gen. Brooke had been ordered to Washington, but beyond that it had not been settled with regard to his assignment. His presence in this city is desired by the President for the purpose of securing information in regard to the actual condition of affairs in Cuba. Although Secretary Root would not admit it, the impression prevails that Gen. Brooke will be assigned to the command of the Military Department of the Lakes, with headquarters at Chicago, a position held by him prior to the outbreak of the Spanish war and known to be agreeable to him in every respect.

Gen. Wood called at the War Department this afternoon and personally thanked Secretary Root for the honor conferred upon him by his selection as Military Governor of Cuba. He said that he would start for Havana at once, and if possible, would leave New York City to-morrow.

CUBANS ARE INDIFFERENT.

Havana Press Says Change Is Not Important.

HAVANA, Dec. 13.—Anticipating the appointment of Gen. Wood to succeed Gen. Brooke, the Cubano says:

"We do not care a straw who rules Cuba, if the island is not to be independent. However, the nomination of Gen. Wood would have one advantage. It would mean that the present advisers of Gov. Gen. Brooke would cease to hold offices in which, either from lack of knowledge or lust of power, they have not advanced the welfare of Cuba."

The Discusion says:

"A mere change of Military Governors cannot signify any great change in the methods of governing Cuba. Gen. Brooke's administration has been inspired in all important respects by President McKinley, who is not at all likely to modify the general methods of conducting the Government."

MAY COMBINE NAVAL BUREAUS.

Secretary Long Would Abolish Several Departments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Secretary Long has taken the first step toward carrying out his project for the consolidation of the naval bureaus under one head, and has prepared a bill to be introduced immediately in Congress for that purpose.

The bill proposes to consolidate the Bureaus of Construction and Repair, Steam Engineering, and Equipment under one bureau, to be called the Bureau of Ships. Its duties are to be those which now pertain to the three existing bureaus above named.

In the bureau there are to be two divisions, one of construction and the other of machinery. The Chief of the Bureau of Ships is to be appointed from the list of line officers or Naval Constructors, not below the grade of Commander. The Chief of the Division of Construction is to be appointed from the list of Naval Constructors and the Chief of the Division of Machinery from the list of line officers having skill as engineers.

The Hydrographic Office, which now by law is under the Bureau of Equipment, is to be under the supervision of the Assistant Secretary. Other offices, such as the naval observatory, purchases of coal, &c., are not referred to in the bill, because under the law as it is at present they are subject to distribution by the Secretary of the Navy. The act is to take effect July 1, 1902, at the beginning of the then fiscal year, before which time the present head of construction will have retired and the terms of office of the heads of the other two bureaus will have expired.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Texas sailed from Fort Monroe to-day for Havana to bring back the remains of the Maine victims, which are to be reinterred in Arlington Cemetery.

The Dolphin will arrive at Trinidad Jan. 6.

The Lancaster sailed to-day from Barbados for Trinidad.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—The battleship Iowa and the cruiser Philadelphia sailed to-day for the south coast. The cruiser Albemarle will meet them at Magdalena Bay and there will be a month of target practice.

DR. VIRGIN'S RESIGNATION.

Congregation of the Pilgrim Church Reluctantly Accepts It.

After vainly endeavoring for a week to induce the Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Virgin to withdraw his resignation, the congregation of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Madison Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, met last night and reluctantly voted to accept it.

The congregation met last week, and the pastor's resignation was considered. He had served twenty-eight years, and asked permission to lay down his burdens. A committee of the most prominent men in the congregation was appointed to wait on Dr. Virgin and see if he could not be induced to reconsider his resolution. After several conferences with the pastor, the committee was obliged to report failure to accomplish its mission. Dr. Virgin had insisted on the acceptance of his resignation.

A committee was appointed last night to draw up suitable resolutions expressing regret at the termination of Dr. Virgin's pastorate and appreciation of his labors. The question of his successor has not yet been considered.

PRESENTS INSTEAD OF JAIL.

Long Island Man Gives Food to Needy Family of Would-Be Thief.

GLEN COVE, L. I., Dec. 13.—The residents of this section do not know whether to praise or condemn George H. Townsend. There have been many robberies recently, and meetings have been held to consider means of ending them.

Mr. Townsend, who has kept a close watch upon his poultry house since his loss of half a hundred fine chickens a short time ago, heard a noise in the yard Monday night, and armed with a shotgun went to investigate. He saw a man among the poultry, and raising the gun cried: "Throw up your hands!"

The would-be thief slowly walked toward the farmer with his hands above his head. Mr. Townsend recognized the man, and then marched him to the house for the purpose of having him identified by the members of his family. The man begged to be released, and said that he was only trying to get something for his family. Mr. Townsend released him with the warning that if he was ever caught again he would be prosecuted.

Mr. Townsend yesterday investigated the man's story and found it true. He then sent to the man's family a barrel of potatoes and a barrel of turnips. Many of his neighbors praise Mr. Townsend's good heartedness, but say he should have held the fellow and then played the good samaritan toward his family.

Cornell-Columbia Debates Arranged.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 13.—At the meeting of the Cornell Debating Council, held tonight, it was decided that Cornell will meet Columbia in a series of annual debates for the next three years, and that the first debate will be held in Ithaca in April. Relations with the University of Pennsylvania were broken off, owing to the failure of representatives of Cornell and Pennsylvania to reach a satisfactory agreement regarding eligibility rules for the speakers. Cornell has met Pennsylvania in debate for the past five years.

TO HONOR WASHINGTON'S MEMORY

Elaborate Ceremonies at Mount Vernon To-day in Observance of the Centenary of His Death.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Elaborate preparations have been made for the celebration to-morrow of the hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. Many visitors from a distance, especially among the Masonic fraternity, have arrived in the city to participate in the ceremonies. Four separate and distinct events have been planned for this locality. The Masons and the Red Men will conduct solemn exercises separately at Mount Vernon. The main Masonic services at Mount Vernon will be held at noon at the mansion where President McKinley is expected to deliver an address. Two wreaths are to be placed on the tomb, one of oak, coming from the Earl of Londesborough, Past Grand Senior Warden of Masons in England, and the other of evergreen from the vicinity of the home of John Washington in England.

The Red Men's exercises will take place in the afternoon. At night the latter organization will have a large meeting at Convention Hall, where a large number of addresses are to be made and an oration will be delivered by Senator Depew. The local patriotic societies will combine in a religious service in the Church of the Epiphany at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, where the oration will be delivered by David J. Hill, Assistant Secretary of State.

An appropriate celebration will take place in Lafayette Square Opera House at night under the auspices of the George Washington Memorial Association.

To-night the Grand Lodge of Masons of Virginia had a celebration and banquet at Alexandria, Va., which was largely attended.

Assistant Secretary Allen to-day, acting as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, presented to Grand Master Duke of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, a historic gavel which is to be used at Mount Vernon to-morrow on the occasion of the exercises in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. The head of the gavel is made from the historic elm under which Washington took command of the American Army and the handle is made of a piece of the old South Church, the whole silver mounted and suitably inscribed.

WILL BE OBSERVED IN NEW YORK.

Religious and Other Ceremonies to Commemorate the Day.

The one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington will be observed to-day in Greater New York. The chief feature of the commemoration here will be the services in St. Paul's Chapel under the auspices of the General Society of the Cincinnati and the New York State Society of the Sons of the Revolution. The church, in which Washington worshipped during the period of the first Congress held under the Constitution, has been decorated inside and out for the occasion.

The services will begin at noon. The Secretary of War has ordered that during its continuance five-minute guns are to be fired from Castle Williams. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, Chaplain of the Sons of the Revolution, will conduct the services, and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Mancius R. Hutton of Rutgers College, Senior Chaplain of the Society of the Cincinnati.

The members of the societies will enter the church in procession from the Vestry House at 11:45 o'clock. Major John H. Holland, Grand Marshal, will lead the way. Following him will be the Committee of Arrangements.

Among the invited guests who have signified their intention of being present are Major Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Major Gen. Roe, Adjt. Gen. Avery D. Andrews, and John Alsop King.

The musical programme will be by a picked choir of twenty-two voices.

At 2 o'clock services under the auspices of the Washington Heights Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will also be held in the council chamber of Washington's old headquarters, now called Earle Cliff.

The Daughters of the Cincinnati will hold commemorative exercises at Delmonico's at 3:30 o'clock. Miss Fanny Schuyler will preside. Addresses will be made by Prof. William M. Sloane of Columbia University, John K. Wise of Virginia, Everett T. Tomlinson, and Capt. Richard H. Greene, Historian General of the Mayflower Society, and others.

On all the public schools of the five boroughs the National flag will be half-masted, and the hour from 2 to 3 o'clock will be devoted to appropriate public exercises.

MRS. WILCOXSON A SMOKER.

Woman Who Is Suing for a Separation Uses Cigarettes—A Bit of Unfinished Verse.

Mrs. Phoebe Wilcoxson, who is suing her husband, Martin Niles Wilcoxson, for a limited divorce on the ground of cruelty, was still on the stand under cross-examination when the case was continued yesterday in the Supreme Court. C. W. Zaring, counsel for Mr. Wilcoxson, questioned her about a visit to Glengariff Castle, Scotland, and especially about a Capt. St. John Parker, who was there at the time. "Were you not in the company of Capt. Parker frequently when your husband was not present?" he asked.

"I was not."

"Do you not know that Mrs. White requested Capt. Parker to leave the place where you were stopping because of your conduct?"

"I did not know that she did."

"Well, you know he left, don't you?"

"Yes, I know he left."

Mr. Zaring was curious about a visit the couple made to Ostend, and Mrs. Wilcoxson's life there. "Weren't you frequently in bathing there with an Indian Prince named Maharajah Carpatalla?"

"Only when my husband was along."

"Didn't the mother of a young Hungarian named Barstai write a letter to your husband's mother asking her to use her influence to keep you from being so friendly with him, as ill would rule him?"

"Not that I ever heard of."

"While you were visiting Mrs. Gen. Thomas Fraser at Chatham, didn't you become so well acquainted with the General that you called him 'Tommy'?"

"No."

"Do you smoke cigarettes, Mrs. Wilcoxson?"

"I sometimes do."

"What brand do you prefer?"

"I don't know. I am not a habitual smoker. I don't know much about the brands."

Mr. Zaring wanted to know about a voyage from England to America in which a Mr. Douglass was a fellow-passenger with the Wilcoxsons. "Weren't you very friendly with him on that voyage?"

"Not especially so. There is less formality in acquaintance on shipboard than on land." Mrs. Wilcoxson could remember no occasion when she asked Mr. Douglass to go and get her hairbrush.

"Were you not in love with a man in England when your husband asked you to come to America to live?" counsel asked.

"No."

"Will you swear that you are not in love now with a man in England—or in Ireland?"

"I am not."

Mr. Zaring asked if she did not have in her pocketbook on one occasion a slip of paper with a little bit of verse beginning:

"There was a young lady forlorn,
Who wished she had never been born."

Counsel did not finish the verse, which was written by a woman who went under the title of Countess and was described as "a very gay woman" by Mr. Zaring.

Mary C. McCarthy, formerly a maid in the Wilcoxson family, in Orange Knit, was called and testified about rude treatment by the husband to his wife. Mr. Zaring asked if she knew of an occasion when a man called on Mrs. Wilcoxson and climbed over the wall to get out of the grounds, the lodge gates having been closed. The maid admitted she heard of it, but the answer was ruled out. She was then asked if Mrs. Wilcoxson had spoken to her about the incident.

"She only said that it was very silly for him to do it when the lodgekeeper was waiting to let him out," was the reply.

The case will be continued to-day.

Jumped from Train to His Death.

Tobias Petersen, twenty-six years old, of 126 Summit Street, Brooklyn, was instantly killed last evening at Eleventh Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, by a New York Central Railroad passenger train. Petersen, who was a passenger, jumped from the train at Thirty-ninth Street. He fell under the cars and the wheels passed over his head.

Followed Pal Out of Window and Died

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 13.—Mary Mangra, thirty-five years old, fell from a third-story window at her home in Kearney to-day and was killed. She was throwing out a pail of water, when she missed her balance and landed on her head. She leaves a husband and six children.

HT ON CURRENCY BILL

y Democrats Speak in Opposition to the House Measure.

SULZER TALKS AGAINST IT

York Representative Says Substitution of Gold for Coin in Government Bonds Is Dishonest.

SHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The currency de- in the House lasted from 11 o'clock morning until 10:30 to-night, with a re- of three hours for dinner. The pres- for time to speak continues, as most of members desire to make contributions e literature of the occasion. Much of wever, seems to be for home consump-

Bell (Pop., Col.,) was the first speaker y. He opposed the bill, devoting much s time to an argument against its ing features.

Wheeler (Dem., Ky.,) said he desired quit the Republicans, at least in his ct, of the charge of a change of front. the battle was waged squarely by the allists on the one side and the gold metallists on the other, and the bi- lists piled up a majority of 15,000.

Fowler, (Rep., N. J.,) who was a ber of the Banking and Currency Com- e of the last Congress, said he would for the bill because of the gold declara- in the first fourteen lines, notwith- ing what followed.

Lacey (Rep., Iowa,) in supporting the said he was astounded to hear the gen- an from Missouri (Mr. De Armond) de- that the Republican triumph of 1896 won by the purchase of Democratic s.

oes the gentleman contend that Mc- y could have won without the recalci- gold Democrats?" asked Mr. Berry, Ky.)

e won, perhaps with the aid of those n the gentleman denominates recalci- Democrats," replied Mr. Lacey. "But were not bought or scared. No more rable body of men ever stood up to be ted than the gold Democrats of 1896."

Proceeding, Mr. Lacey said the Demo- c gains in the present House came from England, New York, New Jersey, and land, where the Chicago platform had trampled under foot.

ot in New Jersey," interposed Mr. (Dem., N. J.)

Perhaps not there, but certainly in other es."

Benton (Dem., Mo.,) said he stood the Democratic and Populist Parties in r-ending opposition to extending the ers of the National banks.

Fox (Dem.,, Miss.,) argued that the tment of the pending bill would in- se the value of all obligations, public private.

Pierce (Dem., Tenn.,) said that, al- gh an advocate of free silver at 16 to 1, ould not see that free coinage of silver involved in the provisions of the pend- measure. It simply proposed to continue existing conditions. He read from a ch of Mr. McKinley when a candidate 96 declaring that there was no purpose withdraw the greenbacks from circula- and then challenged the other side to that the pending bill would in effect ound and retire the greenbacks. In the se of his remarks he denominated wer Cleveland the arch enemy of silver of the Democratic Party.

He perverted the principles of his y," said Mr. Pierce, "and prostituted high in its councils with promises of and power."

he Democrats greeted this utterance applause.

Burton, (Rep., Ohio,) in support of bill, declared that the adoption of the standard by the progressive nations of earth was inevitable. That was the of events.

Hamilton (Rep., Mich.,) said that the ument in favor of the pending bill was argument after the fact. The people in had returned a verdict against the leg- tion of value into a dollar, and in favor dollar that could cross the ocean with- shrinking when it came in contact with water.

Cushman (Rep., Wash.,) said that in ng for the pending bill he would voice sentiment of his people. He was for the standard. Remembering the promises prophecies of the Democrats in 1892 1896, if he were a Democrat, he said, he ld be keeping still in six different lan- ges. Since the inauguration of Mr. Mc- ley, he said, everything—commodities, r, humanity, and the flag—had risen, pt the Democratic Party. That had steadily going down hill. [Laughter applause.]

Sulzer, (Dem., N. Y.,) in opposing the protested vigorously against the haste which it was being considered. He he favored sound money, hard money, and silver, and declared that it was onest to change the contracts made by Government with the bondholders by stituting "gold" for "coin."

announced himself unequivocally for Chicago platform, which, he said, was best platform ever adopted by the Dem- tic Party. (Democratic applause.) The Mr. Sulzer said, would create a Na- al bank trust.

Cowherd (Dem., Mo.,) argued that the would inevitably result in the sale of ions of bonds to secure gold.

fter some further remarks against the by Mr. Otey (Dem., Va.,) and Mr. nes, (Dem., Tenn.,) Mr. Hill (Rep., an.,) concluded the day's debate with an porate argument in favor of the gold ndard. The gold supply, he said, was idly approaching, if it had not already ched, the point where it met all the de- nds. Within six years $969,000,000 in d coin had been added to the world's ply. He declared that he was in favor the international banking system. The se agreed to a resolution for a holiday nesday from Wednesday, Dec. 20, to dnesday, Jan. 3.

Richardson (Dem., Tenn.,) asked r to-morrow in order that the members ht participate in the Washington Me- rial service. Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.,) ected.

Moody (Rep., Mass.,) asked unani- us consent that a committee of five mbers be appointed from the House to a committee of three from the Senate, be present at the unveiling Jan. 18 of statue of Daniel Webster, presented to City of Washington by Stilson Hutchins.

Bailey (Dem., Texas,) asked why the s should be suspended to do honor to illustrious American when the House just refused to do honor to George shington, the centenary of whose death to be made the occasion of memorial rcises to-morrow. He objected.

hereupon, at 5 o'clock, the House re- ed until 8 o'clock.

the night session the feature was a racteristic speech by Mr. Linney, (Rep., C.,) the only Republican who voted for Teller resolution in the Fifty-fourth gress in explanation of his change of his tion in favor of the gold standard. The standard has stood the test of experi- e, he claimed, and had proved itself the l standard.

e other speakers were Messrs. Robin- (Dem., Ind.,) Kleberg, (Dem., Texas,) ly, (Dem., Va.,) Connie, (Dem., Mo.,) r, (Dem., Ind.,) Kitchen, (Dem., N. C.,) Henry, (Dem., Texas,) all against the At 10:30 the House adjourned until 'clock to-morrow.

BILL FOR A PACIFIC CABLE.

Lodge Introduces One in the Senate—Other Measures.

ASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Lodge , Mass.,) to-day introduced a bill to de for telegraphic communication be- tween the United States of America, the Hawaiian Islands, Guam, the Philippine Islands, Japan, and China, and to promote commerce. The proposed measure authorizes the Postmaster General to contract with an American cable company for the payment by the United States of North America of not exceeding $400,000 a year for twenty years for the electrical transmission of official messages of the United States to Honolulu, Guam, Manila, Hongkong, and some point in Japan. The cable must be in operation by Jan. 1, 1903. The bill further provides for a duplicate line of cable in order that there shall be no interruption of communication. The amounts received by the cable company from the United States shall be used only for repairs and renewals of cables, &c.

The company must at all times be capable of fulfilling its contract or forfeit the payments by the United States, and if the company fails to transmit the Government messages during a period of two years the Government's obligations shall cease. After twenty years Government messages shall be transmitted at half rates forever. In case of war the Government may take possession of the lines and stations of the company.

Mr. Gallinger (Rep., N. H.,) presented a bill for the codification of the pension laws. It is proposed that the work shall be done by a commission consisting of jurists and members of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Perkins (Rep., Cal.,) introduced a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to change the material use in the construction of the dry docks at League Island, Pennsylvania, and Mare Island, California, from timber to concrete or stone at an increased cost for the two docks of not exceeding $700,000.

A resolution was adopted on motion of Mr. McMillan, (Rep., Mich.,) calling upon the Secretary of War for information as to how many days the St. Mary's Canal was blocked during the past season of navigation, and requesting his opinion as to the desirability of constructing additional canals.

The session of the Senate consumed only a few minutes.

SENATE COMMITTEES OUTLINED.

Chairmen Selected for Those Relating to New Possessions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Republican Senators will hold a caucus to-morrow to receive the report of their committee appointed at the last caucus to make new committee assignments. The committee also will report the creation of four new committees, and that they have made an arrangement with the Democratic committee for increased Republican representation upon the thirteen principal committees. The four new committees with their Chairmen are:

On the Philippine Islands—Senator Lodge of Massachusetts.

On Puerto Rico and the Pacific Islands (except the Philippines)—Senator Foraker of Ohio.

On Our Relations with Cuba—Senator Platt of Connecticut.

On Coast and Insular Survey—Senator Foster of Washington.

The two vacancies on the Finance Committee will be filled by the appointment of Senators Spooner and Hansbrough, Republicans. Senator Wolcott will fill the vacant place on the Committee on Foreign Relations, Senators Bacon and Money having been already appointed to this committee at the instance of the Democrats. Two more Republican Senators go on the Committee on Judiciary, Fairbanks and Simon. Three of the four vacancies on the Committee on Appropriations go to Senators Carter, Warren, and Wetmore.

The committee announcements will be made at to-morrow's session of the Senate unless the Democrats ask a postponement, as the appointment of Senator Allen of Nebraska necessitates a recasting of their assignments.

ROBERTS AGAIN ON TRIAL

Witnesses Testify as to the Utah Man's Marital Relations.

PLURALITY OF WIVES SHOWN

Mormon Representative Cross-Examines Witnesses and Objects to Much of the Evidence Introduced.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The committee of the House of Representatives which is investigating the case of Mr. Roberts of Utah opened its doors at 10:30 to-day to begin the examination of witnesses. A large number of spectators were on hand, including several ladies. Mr. Roberts occupied a seat at the foot of the committee table, while flanking him was the delegation of Gentiles—the Rev. Dr. Iliff, Mr. Schroeder, and others—here to direct the case against the Utah member-elect.

When Chairman Tayler (Rep., Ohio,) called the committee to order and asked what witnesses would be heard Mr. Roberts arose and asked as to his status before the committee, making a short statement in line with the argument contained in his brief, which has been published.

Mr. Tayler responded that all of Mr. Roberts's rights had been fully looked after and protected, and at the very threshold of the inquiry there was no proper question which had not been raised.

Mr. Tayler then asked Mr. Schroeder of the Gentile delegation what witnesses he would call.

"Does this man appear as attorney?" asked Roberts, as Mr. Schroeder stepped forward.

"He will examine witnesses," explained Mr. Tayler.

"Then I wish to introduce the court record relating to him," said Roberts.

Mr. Tayler said this had already been passed on Saturday, and Schroeder had been recognized.

Charles Austin Owen was then called. He gave his residence as Salt Lake City, aged forty-two. In response to questions by Mr. Schroeder, he said he knew the general reputation in Salt Lake City of the status of "Dr. Maggie C. Shipp Roberts." Her professional sign read "Dr. Margaret C. Roberts."

Her name appears similarly in the City Directories. The witness said also that the general reputation of the status of Roberts and Dr. Maggie C. Shipp Roberts was that they maintained the relation of husband and wife. While the questions were being put as to Mrs. Maggie Roberts, Mr. Roberts interrupted with the objection:

"What this lady may have done is immaterial in the absence of any showing that it was at the direction of B. H. Roberts."

Mr. Schroeder said later testimony would bring out the materiality of the questions, and Mr. Tayler ruled that the competency of the questions could be judged by the subsequent testimony.

Mr. Roberts then cross-examined the witness. The questions were asked rapidly, and sometimes savagely. It was brought out that, in addition to being a civil engineer, Mr. Owen was the correspondent of a New York newspaper. Mr. Roberts's questions brought out that the witness had no personal knowledge as to Mrs. Maggie Roberts or Mr. Roberts, based on talks with them, but his information was general and common repute.

"I want to know," asked Roberts, "if the general reputation you have been testifying to obtains since March 4, 1899." "It does."

"And what is that reputation?" "That Maggie C. Shipp Roberts is the plural or polygamous wife of Brigham H. Roberts."

"On what acts is this general reputation based?" inquired Roberts. "No specific acts, but generally accepted reputation," responded Mr. Owen.

There was also considerable testimony on court prosecutions throughout the State on which the witness had information. As his evidence closed, Mr. Roberts asked to have all this testimony struck from the record, as the witness was unable to testify to his own knowledge.

Mr. Schroeder said the answer to this was that the witness testified of his own knowledge as to the general reputation which existed.

The Chairman permitted the testimony to stand.

Mr. McEwen of The Philadelphia North American was examined as to a recent interview with Roberts, signed by him, (McEwen.) In this Roberts spoke of his "wives," referring to them as "good and true women," toward whom obligations had been incurred prior to the enactment of the polygamy law.

"Was not this conversation in reference to general conditions?" asked Mr. Roberts.

"Oh, no, Mr. Roberts," answered the witness, directly addressing his interrogator. "You spoke of general conditions, and used your own case to illustrate."

Capt. Elias H. Parsons of the Quartermaster's Department, United States Volunteers, testified to an incident occurring in 1890, while he was in Salt Lake City. About 9 A. M. some one asked him to call up on his telephone Dr. Maggie Shipp Roberts. On going to the telephone and calling up the house, a man's voice answered.

"Who is this?" Capt. Parsons asked over the telephone. "B. H. Roberts," was the reply.

On cross-examination Roberts asked: "Do you know B. H. Roberts's voice?" "I do not."

"Did the answer over the telephone say 'Brigham H. Roberts'?" "No; simply B. H. Roberts."

"Is there not a Bolivar Roberts in Salt Lake City?" "Yes, but I would know Bolivar Roberts's voice at any time, and it was not his."

Mr. Roberts said he would later ask to have this testimony stricken out as irrelevant and not on personal knowledge.

The Rev. Dr. Iliff, a Methodist missionary of Utah, testified that the general reputation as to the status of Celia Dibble Roberts was that she was the plural wife of Brigham H. Roberts. On cross-examination Mr. Roberts sought to show that Dr. Iliff was hostile to the Mormons, the witness stating that his hostility was to the polygamous feature of Mormonism. Dr. Iliff referred to an article by Roberts defending polygamy.

Dr. Iliff went into the historical features of the contest against polygamy, the Utah Constitutional Convention, the attitude of Gov. Welles, and the Welles-Roberts discussion on polygamy. Roberts asked why he had not been prosecuted under the Utah laws as a result of the agitation.

Dr. Iliff said he was not a law officer, and could not answer that. He denied that there had been an intentional withholding of prosecution in Utah in order to get up a propaganda in the East, and thus increase the contributions for missionary work.

The Rev. G. W. Martin, a Presbyterian minister of Nanti, Utah, testified as to the reputation of the polygamous status of Celia Dibble Roberts and Margaret C. Shipp Roberts toward Brigham H. Roberts. He saw statements to this effect in the Salt Lake City newspapers, and heard of no denials. The polygamous status of Mr. Roberts was a matter of common repute. It was also reputed that twins were born to Celia Dibble Roberts.

On cross-examination, the witness said he did not personally know Celia Dibble Roberts or Maggie C. Shipp Roberts, but his information came from general repute and the press, and gave him positive convictions.

Mr. Martin stated that Mr. Eldridge, the Republican candidate against Roberts, was reputed to believe in polygamy. In answer to Mr. Roberts, witness stated that many Mormons believe in polygamy, but did not practice it. He did not know whether Mr. Eldridge practiced polygamy or not.

Mr. Schroeder stated that this was all the evidence at hand until witnesses arrived from Utah.

At 1 o'clock the committee went into executive session, prior to adjourning for the day.

In the course of the hearing Mr. Tayler stated to Roberts that the latter's demurrer had been overruled, all questions being taken into consideration for determination later.

Husted Will Declared Valid.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 13.—The contest over the will of William A. Husted was settled to-day by Judge Robinson, who declared that the will should stand. The document was drawn in 1888, when Husted was eighty-eight years old, and later he added a codicil. He left out certain grandchildren, while to one daughter, Mrs. John Andrews, he gave an extra share. Her husband, who is a lawyer, drew the will, and undue influence on his part was alleged. The Greenwich Probate Court Judge, John F. Close, threw out the will in 1890, and an appeal was taken. Judge Robinson ruled to-day that Husted was in full possession of mental faculties when he made the will.

A Wanamaker Explanation & a Wanamaker PROMISE

AND A HINT AT THE END!

The sale of the Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas at the Wanamaker Store makes both the explanation and the promise timely and desirable.

You have bought more sets than you led us to expect—we had delays in filling your orders of which we told you about a month ago. Your answer was to order more heavily still. The bindery facilities were increased—nearly doubled, in fact—for there's where the delay came. That helped—until a day or two ago.

Now we are 671 sets behind in the half morocco style alone—and not one to send to-day or to-morrow.

This is simply because we couldn't imagine such selling—we underrated your appreciation and are sorry.

That's the explanation.

Here is the promise—addressed to 671 of our subscribers who haven't received their sets—and to the many more who will order within the next few days—(the last of the Christmas sale).

We will fill all orders for The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas by NEXT WEDNESDAY!

Next Monday we'll have 400 sets, Tuesday 800 sets, and Wednesday enough—as we figure it—to carry us up to Christmas Eve.

Orders are being filled in succession according to the date and hour received. Prompt folks will get quickest deliveries of this great work that every one seems to be turning into Christmas presents! That's the hint!

How to Get the Work.

The Wanamaker Store is selling the Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas at half the regular subscription prices, having contracted to distribute an entire edition. The sale has been going on now for a little over two months, during which time $471,296.00 worth of the sets, at regular retail prices, have been SOLD, and $235,648.00 have been SAVED to the thousands of members of the Wanamaker Century Dictionary Club. This edition, which is the very latest, containing new matter as late as September of the present year, is complete in ten volumes. The membership costs $1, which is all that is necessary to secure the delivery of the entire set. The purchase is completed afterwards in little payments of $3.00 monthly, or a trifle more, depending upon the binding you select. A special counter in the Book Store—Ninth Street—where full information will be given you. The books themselves are there, too.

For those of you who cannot call, the coupon in the corner will serve.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

THE SEABOARD CONSOLIDATION.

T. F. Ryan's Efforts to Prevent the Deal Will Cause No Delay.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—John Skelton Williams, President of the Seaboard Air Line system, Baltimore Steam Packet Company, Georgia and Alabama Railway, Florida Central and Peninsular Railroad, and other properties that will be included in the new Seaboard Air Line Railway Company, was in Baltimore to-day. He said that work upon the various extensions now building was being pushed with all possible speed, and the new system would begin operating through trains between New York and Florida in January.

Referring to Thomas F. Ryan's threat to prevent the consolidation of the Seaboard Air Line properties, Mr. Williams said:

"Mr. Ryan's attempt to prevent the consolidation will not delay our plans, which are rapidly nearing consummation. His holdings of Raleigh and Gaston, which will be the parent corporation of the new company, amount to only twenty-one shares. Our counsel has advised us that Mr. Ryan has absolutely no ground to contest our position, and we do not fear the outcome of any litigation he may see fit to bring."

E. J. Cross of Cowen, Cross & Bond, counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who have been legally associated with the plans for the consolidation of the Seaboard system, referring to the report that Thomas F. Ryan of New York would oppose the consolidation, made the following written statement:

"There is no possibility of preventing the stockholders of these roads from effecting a consolidation as desired. People who own property have the right to do what they please with it, if they do it in a legitimate manner, and the stockholders are simply carrying out plans for the benefit of what they own. The fact that some one owns a few shares in the Seaboard and Roanoke Railway, or any other road, and is opposed to the plans, makes no difference whatever. I believe that twenty-one shares of stock were voted in Mr. Ryan's name at the recent meeting of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad, out of a total of 15,000 shares. There was a clear majority outside of the stock held by the Seaboard and Roanoke Road. Neither Mr. Ryan nor any one else can prevent a plan favored by those who practically own the several lines from being carried out."

FOR TRANSCONTINENTAL LINES.

Commission of Railroads Prefers Them to an Isthmian Canal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The annual report of the Commissioner of Railroads states that the increase of surplus assets over liabilities for 1899 over 1898 for the twenty-six land-grant and bond-aided roads is $45,230,000. The report reviews last year's air line railway from Kansas City to San Diego. Similar routes, the Commissioner adds, should be opened between the Cities of Chicago and San Francisco, Chicago and Seattle, and Galveston and San Diego. He says:

"All of these lines would probably not cost more than the $100,000,000 or $60,000,000 that will be needed for the construction and equipment of the Isthmian Canal. They would give us healthful latitudes that are not to be found on the Isthmus, keep our money at home, furnish rapid transit for all kinds of trade, and command a large portion of the vast commerce of the world."

FREDERICK, MD., WANTS $250,000.

Congress to be Asked to Refund the Amount Collected by Gen. Early.

FREDERICK, Md., Dec. 13.—The city authorities, in concert with a number of citizens, will endeavor to have the National Government refund the $250,000 which Gen. Jubal Early demanded from Frederick in 1864, as his price for refraining to burn the town.

At a special meeting of those in interest an auxiliary committee was appointed to prosecute the city's claim before Congress this Winter. This committee will meet the city officials Friday night, when a method of procedure will be devised.

The committee has received letters from Senators Wellington and McComas, in which both gentlemen express their willingness to take up the matter and urge the passage of a relief bill.

TO IMPROVE THE PENNSYLVANIA

$13,000,000 Stock Issue Authorized to Abolish Grade Crossings in Cities and for Equipment.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at a meeting to-day authorized an allotment of stock at par for 10 per cent. of the holdings of the stockholders as they stand registered on Tuesday, Dec. 26. Payment is to be made in full between Jan. 14 and 20, 1900, at which latter date the privilege will cease. Receipts bearing 3 per cent. will be issued until May 1, when a new certificate will be issued and carry a dividend. Both the allotment and receipts for payment thereunder are negotiable.

This issue will increase the capital stock of the company by about $13,000,000, which will be used to meet the construction and equipment expenditures during the year 1900. There has been no allotment since nearly ten years ago, when the privilege was given the stockholders of subscribing for 8 per cent. of their holdings. Since then two scrip dividends have been declared, one for 3 per cent. in 1893, and another for 2 per cent., in 1895.

The company intends during the coming year to abolish grade crossings at many important points. For some years past such crossings have been removed on the New York Division, and Newark (N. J.) is the only large city in which the tracks cross at grade. Plans have been prepared for elevating these tracks, and as soon as an arrangement is made with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the lines of which must be changed to a certain extent to give the Pennsylvania Road a clear thoroughfare, work will be commenced.

It is expected that during the year the grade crossings at Washington, D. C., and Wilmington, Del., will be abolished.

Prohibition Convention Called.

STOLE MONEY TO AID POPULISTS.

Postmaster Took Public Funds—Promised an Office, Gets Jail Term.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 13.—W. F. Carter, ex-Postmaster at Meldrim, Ga., pleaded guilty in the United States District Court to-day to the charge of embezzling funds of the Government to the extent of $300, and was sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio.

In entering his plea of guilty Carter's attorney made a statement to the Court, in which he said that while the accused was Postmaster at Meldrim he was also Chairman of the Georgia Populist Executive Committee. Members of the committee assured Carter that all that was needed to carry the State was a little money.

"They painted a beautiful picture to Carter," said the attorney. "He was promised a good office—one that would pay well. He listened to the tempters and gave them the money, and, of course, he is guilty of the misapplication of funds."

The Populists failed to carry the State, Carter's friends failed to come to his assistance, and he goes to prison.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

When the news of the death of WASHINGTON reached France in the early days of 1800, NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, the despotic ruler of the nominal republic, ordered special tributes of respect and honor to be paid to the most illustrious exemplar of citizenship in a free country which the modern world had seen, the man who a few months before had been appointed to the command of the American army to defend his country from the insults and aggressions of the Government of France. If NAPOLEON had little sympathy with the real character and aims of WASHINGTON, he had a keen appreciation of the type of citizen with whom he would gladly be associated in the mind of France and of the world. It is because WASHINGTON was the man he was and the man that NAPOLEON was that the republic over whose birth he presided became the free, progressive, and happy land that it is.

LECKY, the historian of the eighteenth century—himself deeply imbued with the best sentiments of the English race in the century, especially its calm and steadfast judgment and its Stoic estimate of virtue, public and private—declares that the character of WASHINGTON was a great gift to his country. "He was," says Mr. LECKY, "in the highest sense of the words, a gentleman and a man of honor, and he carried into public life the highest standard of private morals." The peril to which America was exposed, in the opinion of its own best men and of the world, was that out of the disturbed conditions following the overthrow of the British rule there should arise a military despotism. Probably the peril was exaggerated, for the Americans were of English stock, and that stock is not tolerant of saviors of society in arms, being quite competent to care for itself to wish to surrender the task to any one man. But unquestionably this was what was feared, and that fear was completely dissipated by WASHINGTON. His country and the watchful and jealous rulers of other countries soon came to recognize that his patriotism was unselfish, impregnable. From the moment that he took command of the Continental Army at Cambridge to the day when he laid down the command of the army of the United States at Mount Vernon on the eve of his death, during all the long and trying years of war and of civil administration more difficult than war, history records not a single act that betrayed or contradicted his high ideal. From the first to the last he was, again to quote the English historian, "a leader who could be induced by no earthly motive to tell a falsehood, or to break an engagement, or to commit any dishonorable act."

The actual and direct public service of WASHINGTON was invaluable. It was so in the highest degree because from the very beginning it was National. He had the instinct of nationality. The leading citizen of the proudest and wealthiest state, a member of its aristocratic class, intimately associated with all that was peculiar and deep-seated in its life, he was never in the lightest or the greatest things swayed by State interests or prejudices. By no means a man of intellectual culture or trained political imagination, slightly read in history, without trace of theory or even matured doctrine, his mind naturally sought the largest practicable horizon. His splendid common sense united with his firm integrity of purpose, impelled him to seek all available means to the end he had undertaken, and he saw that to that end the entire resources of a united Nation were indispensable. Almost if not quite alone among the men on whom the struggle for independence rested, he pleaded, argued, labored, and fought for National effort, for a National army, a National government with original and adequate authority. After the immediate struggle was won, largely because his noble example and powerful influence had supplied the bond that was otherwise lacking, he was the leader in the movement for a truly National Constitution. And it was as the feeling throughout the States must he demanded it and could be intrusted with its first administration that made possible, so rich is the harvest to be gathered from a just and honorable reputation. As President, again, it was he who gave to the new Government the most precious and the most lasting attributes of nationality. It was his firmness, courage, and energy in dealing with the resistance to the collection of National revenue in Pennsylvania that established beyond dispute the power of the National Government to sustain itself and fixed its authority to raise money and use force for the purposes of the Constitution. It was this authority thus secured that made possible the "second war of independence" in 1812 and the war for the Union in 1861.

He it was who guided the Republic to an undisputed place among the equal nations of the world. His policy of neutrality in the wars between England and France was the first formal declaration that the United States had fully assumed all the rights and obligations of independent nationality. It was made under tremendous difficulties and against bitter opposition, and it cost the soldier who had fought by the side of ROCHAMBEAU a keen pang. But it was the dictate of that clear intelligence which guided all his action, and which saw that real independence must be free from the entanglements even of affection. With still wider vision, he took up the task of settling the differences with Great Britain, a task still more trying and disagreeable. He saw that only by an honorable and early settlement could the United States win recognition in the family of nations as the peer of the mother country. He also saw that only in this way could the efforts of English Ministers to promote dissension in the Union be brought to naught. In this as in all things his calm outlook was on the future toward which with unfaltering devotion and patience and with lofty aspiration he sought to conduct his beloved land. That land today, with all its great attainments and with its face still set toward the future, is his living and lasting monument.

THE LATEST BRITISH DEFEAT.

There have been two serious defeats of the British in South Africa reported this week. But the trapping of Gen. GATACRE'S reconnoitring column was a small matter compared with the checking of Gen. METHUEN'S advance. The previous fight at the Modder may fairly be called a drawn battle. But this fight, by the testimony of the British commander, is a defeat. It is a defeat in a pitched battle of his own choosing, if he can be said to have had any choice. There precisely is the rub. He had no choice but to relieve Kimberley and raise the siege of it. That was the purpose and objective of his advance. Apparently that has decisively failed. What else can be made of the report of a General who, hastening to the relief of a beleaguered garrison, is compelled to say that, after being repulsed "with great loss," he is "holding his position and intrenching himself"?

This announcement "ought" to be equivalent to a confession that Kimberley must fall. Two or three days ago we heard that the garrison of that place had been put on short rations. That meant that relief must very shortly arrive to prevent a surrender. Now we know that the relieving force has been disabled from immediate offensive operations and compelled to look out for its own safety. How can such news portend anything short of the fall of Kimberley?

Kimberley, as the centre of the diamond mining, and as the busiest and most populous place on the railroad, has a considerable strategical importance. But it has a factitious importance, as the place in which CECIL RHODES chose to establish himself, at the outbreak of hostilities, with the proclamation that it was "as safe as Piccadilly." There is no living Englishman whose capture the Boers would rate so highly as that of RHODES. Much as it might hurt the vanity of the English Colonial Secretary to think so, they would give half a dozen Chamberlains for him. If they get Kimberley, and CECIL RHODES with it, the effect throughout all South Africa, and ultimately throughout all Europe, will be very serious indeed. The effect in England will probably be to make Mr. CHAMBERLAIN the scapegoat of all the British defeats and mortifications, as he had already made preparations for being the beneficiary of all the triumphs and successes which he expected from the war in which he has succeeded in engaging the British nation.

THE ANARCHIST VIEW OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Not until he reaches the Philippines question, however, does the President express himself so clearly that we cannot misunderstand him. In discussing this question he plants himself upon the monarchical ground that the strong have a divine right to take care of the weak, and that the weak should be killed if they object.—W. J. BRYAN.

There are abundant precedents. ANDREW JACKSON planted himself upon that "monarchical ground" when on Dec. 10, 1832, he issued a proclamation to the people of South Carolina, who in convention assembled had adopted an ordinance nullifying the customs laws of the United States. "I have thought proper," he said, "to issue this, my proclamation, declaring the course which duty will require me to pursue, and, appealing to the understanding and patriotism of the people, warn them of the consequences that must inevitably result from an observance of the dictates of the convention." The "consequences" were not slow to follow. JACKSON sent ships of war to Charleston Harbor to collect the duties, and the people of South Carolina concluded to nullify their own ordinance of nullification. President JACKSON disliked the tariff law, but he took the high old monarchical ground that it was his duty to enforce the laws, and he did enforce them.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in the much graver defiance of Federal authority in which South Carolina and other Southern States engaged a generation later, took extreme monarchical measures to convince them of their error.

GROVER CLEVELAND in 1894 employed the land forces of the Federal Government in a high-handed monarchical manner against one DEBS and his fellow-Anarchists, then engaged in destroying life and property at Chicago.

The proceedings undertaken by the President against the rebel AGUINALDO were monarchical in this sense. The country approves of them. Nobody disapproves of them except BRYAN and his political sympathizers. The underlying motive of their disapprobation is sympathy with resistance to lawful authority. Every Anarchist in the country would agree with BRYAN that Major McKINLEY is a haughty and heartless monarchist.

COURAGE AND CONSISTENCY.

Representative SIBLEY possesses intelligence of a high order and courage to match it. The two together make him a consistent statesman. They enable him to discard the outworn beliefs he held three years ago, which events and later knowledge have shown to be unsound. He says frankly that he has discarded them, that he was mistaken. He avows present convictions born of new knowledge and of the world's experience.

This is real consistency, the very best and most praiseworthy consistency to which fallible man can hope to attain. Mr. SIBLEY'S course is perfectly consistent with truth and honesty, with conscience and with the aims and purposes of his public career. That kind of consistency is worth a great deal more than the petty pride of opinion that inclines smaller men to cling to all the errors that have ever found lodgment in their minds. Mr. W. J. BRYAN is now the most conspicuous living example in this country of incapacity to learn and to forget. Mr. SIBLEY presents the example, in shining contrast, of a man who has breadth enough to see that his former views were wrong and courage enough to say so. He would have been unfaithful to the interests of his constituents and of the country and unjust to himself had he kept his discovery of the truth to himself and gone foolishly on proclaiming the old false doctrines. He instantly wins respect and confidence by what he has done.

"The world is moving forward," says Mr. SIBLEY. That is the grandest truth, the most momentous fact, that any statesman can get into his head to-day. The leaders of the present Democratic organization, with BRYAN at their head, deny and flout the proposition that there can be such a thing as progress. Their cry is, "Let us sit down and stay where we are." But the world will move on under the irresistible momentum imparted to it by living minds. The men with the dead minds are going to be left where they are sitting. Mr. SIBLEY declines to stay in that gruesome companionship.

Every Democrat who cherishes the ancient faith of the party will rejoice not only at his frank statement of his honest position, but also at the emergence into the light of truth of some ten members of the New York delegation in the House of Representatives. It is the most encouraging event in Democratic politics for many months. There has been nothing so damaging to the cause of Bryanism, nothing that so renewed hope that the Democratic Party might yet be saved and reclaimed for a future career of usefulness.

ONLY A LOCAL STORM.

The little troubles that have caused much pain and some alarm in the region of Wall Street during the last few days need impair no man's confidence in the greatness of his country and the stability of its institutions.

Upon some Christmas tables the turkeys will be smaller or fewer than they would have been if the recent severe "slump" in Stock Exchange values had not taken place. Indeed, this is one of the most distressing aspects of the slump. The man of feeling likes to eat his own turkey with a contented mind, and he wishes every other man to do the same. We know that this year there will be some who will approach the bird with harassing preoccupations and under a nervous strain that is simply fatal to gustatory enjoyment.

But it must be evident to every observing person that these troubles of the Street are strictly limited to the local field of speculation. So long as the railroads of the country continue to increase their earnings and their dividends in their present flagrant and shameless manner and so long as the mills hum and wages rise there is no reason why folks who are not engaged in speculation should walk the floor nights.

The country is simply rioting in prosperity. That is a fundamental fact. There is a world of comfort in it. No local flurry of speculation, either in money or securities; no raid upon Exchange values can do much damage so long as business is everywhere brisk and profitable and general confidence remains unimpaired. These comforting circumstances tend to limit the possibilities of mischief at the hands of the bear raiders.

COMMISSIONER DALTON'S REPORT.

That is an extraordinary report which the Commissioner of Water Supply has made to the Mayor upon the operations of his department. The most obvious comment upon it is that the "Ramapo job" is not yet dead, that the Commissioner of Water Supply is one of the jobbers, and that he assumes the Mayor to be another.

We by no means make this comment. We simply call the attention of Mr. DALTON to it as a comment that is sure to be made by intelligent and disinterested readers of the report. It has the essential merit of a scientific hypothesis, in that it covers all the observed facts and is inconsistent with none of them. What the casual commentator would be likely to describe as the most impudent sentence in the report is the following:

> This places before the municipal authorities the problem of devising means to increase the supply within a period not exceeding four years, and the problem thus to be solved is complicated by the question whether the city is financially in a condition to undertake the acquisition of further sources of supply and the construction of an additional conduit to convey the additional supply to the city.

Now of course nobody supposes that Mr. DALTON, before he took his present office, had ever concerned himself with the question of a water supply or that he has given any intelligent attention to that subject since. Before the Controller did his duty to the city by "hooting up" the Ramapo job and introducing expert evidence to show that it was not the best way to meet the evils that are complained of, Mr. DALTON would have been excusable if he had believed what somebody told him about the water supply, even though somebody had told him that the only way to save the city from a water famine "within a period not exceeding four years" was to make a contract to pay the Ramapo Company five millions a year for forty years. But he has had no excuse of that kind since the hearing on the subject before the board. Since then even Mr. DALTON has been "charged with knowledge" that reputable engineers are of the opinion that the problem is not of "increasing the supply" at all, but of checking the demand, and that this can be done and the present supply rendered entirely adequate by stopping waste from leakage. Mr. DALTON shows either a wonderful and inexcusable ignorance or a great disingenuousness when he ignores the expert testimony of Mr. CROES. He does this, although he himself shows some glimmerings of a perception of the probable state of the case when he speaks of the "enormous and alarming increase in the demands on the water service." Why does he not address himself to the task of ascertaining whether these demands are legitimate and whether they cannot be diminished, instead of rushing to the assumption that the supply must be increased to meet them? Does he think his fellow-citizens are all fools, or is he willing to have them all think that he is one?

BRIDGES AND TUNNELS.

Both branches of the Municipal Assembly have passed the resolution adopted by the Board of Public Improvements last week asking the Board of Estimate to appropriate $50,000 for the purpose of ascertaining the practicability and the cost of a tunnel from the foot of Manhattan Island to the foot of Hamilton Avenue, in the Borough of Brooklyn, following the line of the existing Hamilton Ferry. There can be no reasonable objection to this in the Board of Estimate, and probably there will be no objection at all. Nobody proposes a bridge over this route, and yet it is the most direct route from Manhattan to a part of Brooklyn that especially desires and deserves the consideration of the municipality in the interest of its future development.

Nay, there is one objection. It is that brought forward by the Controller, to the effect that our debt-incurring capacity will be exhausted by the authorization of the two new bridges across the East River, and that, if we build these bridges, we shall have nothing left for the most necessary public improvements. The Controller has himself suggested a way out. It is that we should build tunnels at three millions or so each instead of bridges at fifteen. But all that he took by his motion, in the Board of Estimate, that we should investigate whether tunnels would not be cheaper than bridges, was an insult from the Mayor in the form of an imputation upon the Controller's motives.

The imputation made by the facts is so evidently stronger against the Mayor's own motives that the Mayor, as a man who is sensitive to the opinion of his fellow-citizens, must now be yearning for a decent pretext for receding from the position which he took in a bilious moment. The Board of Public Improvements and the Municipal Assembly would have given him a chance to retreat with some semblance of dignity if they had enlarged the scope of their request and had asked for an appropriation large enough to pay for the investigation of the relative merits of tunnels and bridges for all the needed channels of communication between Long Island and Manhattan. Perhaps it is not yet too late to enlarge the scope of the proposed investigation accordingly. But decidedly the inhabitant of New York who has the keenest interest in the enlargement, as a man careful of his own reputation for honesty and disinterestedness in public office, is the Mayor of the city.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—As our revelation of the mystical powers possessed by Leo, the suburban collie dog who signals the exact moment when his master starts from the city for home and dinner, have been received with apparent calmness by the readers of THE TIMES, we will venture to complete the narrative by adding a detail even more trying to credulity than the part of the story already told, but not less well established by observation, and possibly supplying a clue to the nature of the animal's hypersense, by illustrating one of its limitations. It seems that Leo is not infallible. Once in a while he goes through the motions and makes the noises that mean "Master has taken the train, and will be here in half an hour!" and then the master does not come on that train, but on the next one. Investigation of these mistakes has resulted in creating something between a conviction and a suspicion that they occur when, as, of course, happens now and then, the master approaches or enters the railway station just as the train he intended or tried to take leaves it. In that contingency Leo's blunder is easily explicable, and in no wise militates against the theory that he really does know something about the movements of a man some fourteen miles away. If one admits the possibility of this sort of knowledge, it is natural to ask why the psychical radius is not of indefinite length—why, for instance, Leo does not tell, not when his master reaches the railway station, but when he quits his office, much further down town. An admissible answer is that the master often goes out of his office for other purposes than to go home, and therefore, though Leo may have a vague consciousness of all those exits, experience or intelligence has taught him to make a demonstration of his knowledge only when he supposes the last and unalterable stage of the homeward journey has begun. It is an admirable trait, we believe, that dogs often make their way for long distances over roads which they have never seen. In these cases they are usually said to be guided by an instinct for locality. Do not the achievements of Leo hint that the dogs go rather to a person than a place, and follow a leading wholly psychical?

—Public interest in the outfit changes of ownership through which the house given to Admiral DEWEY went recently was too excited to last long, but enough of it may still be left to make it worth while to present a version of the episode which The New Orleans Picayune has secured from Mr. RICHARD WEBSTEMAN, a member of the Vicksburg National Park Commission and managing editor of The Washington Post. According to this authority, all the criticism arose from the mistaken supposition that the transfer of the house to Mrs. DEWEY was the first in the series of events. In reality, declared Mr. WEBSTEMAN, the inspiration of the Admiral's act was the discovery by him that his wife had made a will leaving all her property to his son. When this came to his knowledge he was profoundly touched, and after some reflection it occurred to him that he would enable her also to transfer the house that had been presented to him by grateful fellow-countrymen. Accordingly the property was conveyed to Mrs. DEWEY, and, this fact alone becoming known, questions were aroused which the conveyance made two days later deepened rather than allayed. "The whole story," said the Admiral's defender, "would have killed the little scandal. The half truth supplies them (the sensational papers) with congenial ammunition, but the outcry was very short-lived; it died young. Whatever object the scandalmongers had in view was defeated, and within three days the whole sensation sank out of sight. It now transpires that the loudest and most industrious critics had contributed nothing to the fund, and it is shrewdly suspected in well informed quarters that most of the letters of disapproval did not reach the newspapers in which they were published either by messenger or by mail." This hints at a political conspiracy—not the easiest of things to believe in.

—If Gen. PETRUS JACOBUS JOUBERT were a man who had just emerged from obscurity into sudden fame, uncertainties and mistakes about his origin and early history would not be surprising, but as he has occupied a prominent place in South African history for more than twenty years, and as the victorious commander at Majuba Hill has been known almost as long all over the civilized world, it is indeed remarkable that now for the first time we should be informed that the Boer leader is of American birth, and that he held a conspicuous position in the Confederate Army. Yet such are the statements made in a letter recently sent to Capt. J. F. ANDERSON, an official of the Georgia Railway, by Col. LAMAR FONTAINE of Lyon, Miss. Writing, as he asserts from personal knowledge, Col. FONTAINE gravely declares that Gen. JOUBERT "is a native of Louisiana, belonging to one of the oldest families of that State, and having a brother and a large clan of relatives living still in that State." Then he enters into astonishing details: "JOUBERT commanded a regiment in DICK TAYLOR'S brigade (afterward Gen. JACK HAYS'S after TAYLOR'S promotion to a Major Generalship) and was the senior Colonel in the brigade. I don't know whether he commanded the Seventh, Eighth, or Ninth Louisiana Regiment, but he was often in command of his brigade, and in May, 1862, at Fort Royal, Va., he saw his first baptism of blood. I carried him the order of battle from STONEWALL JACKSON on that morning. If memory serves me right it was about 4 o'clock on the morning of the 29th of May, 1862, and I was in his escort when the battle opened. And from that day until STONEWALL'S death, Col. JOUBERT was one of JACKSON'S most trusted soldiers. I was a scout and courier for STONEWALL from the 29th of November, 1861, until his wound at Chancellorsville, in May, 1863, and frequently met Col. JOUBERT in STONEWALL'S tent and knew the friendship that existed between these two men. After JACKSON'S death I was sent to JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON'S headquarters, at Jackson, Miss., to take part in the siege of Vicksburg, and lost sight of Col. (now Gen.) JOUBERT and saw no more of him until after Appomattox, when he, with Gen. LONGSTREET and other kindred spirits, left the country for foreign lands and took service with the Khedive. From there he drifted to South Africa." Yet in twenty biographies, the accuracy of which has not hitherto been questioned, Gen. JOUBERT is described as a Boer by birth and blood, one of the first to trek northward away from British rule, and knowing nothing of other lands except what he learned from a brief stay in London.

WASHINGTON.

AN ENGLISH TRIBUTE, TO BE READ AT THE TOMB TO-DAY.

Verses to accompany wreaths of oak and evergreen from Londesborough Park, East Yorkshire, sent by the Right Honorable the Earl of Londesborough, P. M. 264, P. G. Senior Warden of England, and the Worshipful Master officers and brethren of the Constitutional Lodge, No. 264, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Beverley, East Yorkshire, England, to be placed on Washington's tomb, on the occasion of the centenary anniversary of his death.

An English wreath we fain would lay
Upon this mighty tomb to-day—
Of laurel, ivy, oak, and yew,
Which drank the English sun and dew
On far-off Yorkshire's grassy sod;
Where once—we boast—his fathers trod,
Whom East and West unite to praise
And crown with never-fading bays.

O Washington, thy symbol be
The oak for strength and constancy;
For grandeur and for grace of form,
For calmness in the stress and storm,
The monarch of the forest there!
To thee the generations bow;
And under thy great shadow rest,
Forever free, forever blest.

And thine the laurel, for the fame
Illustrious of a Conqueror's name—
Patient to wait and prompt to strike,
Intrepid, fiery, mild alike:
Great, for the greatness of the foe
Which fell by thy repeated blow;
Great, for thy Country's greatness, won
By thee, her most beloved Son.

And all the ivy tetines around
Cottage and tower, thy heart was found
Clinging to home and church and wife,
The sweeter for the falsified strife;
And so thy memory, like the yew,
Will still be green in mortal view—
"The greatest of good men" confest
By all, "and of great men the best!"

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Boston Orchestra's Second Afternoon Concert—Gossip of the Theatre.

The second concert of the afternoon series of the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall. The audience was not what one is accustomed to see at the entertainments of this organization. It was by no means as large as a concert of this kind deserves, and the only inference was that the business of Christmas shopping was too strong an opposition to the delicate art of music. The programme was a sufficiently good one to have drawn a larger audience in the better part of the Winter. The orchestral numbers were the "Egmont" overture of Beethoven, the familiar three movements from the "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Berlioz (perhaps intended as an introduction to the approaching opera season,) and the first Hungarian rhapsody of Liszt. The solo piece was the violoncello concerto of Antonin Dvorak, with Alwin Schroeder as the soloist.

The Dvorak concerto had not been played before at these concerts, though it had been performed by Mr. Schroeder in this city. It is not a composition that lends itself to the memory, however, for it is written in a style which puts the solo instrument into the background rather than pushes it forward. In spite of the fact that Mr. Schroeder himself assisted the composer in the preparation of the work and wrote some of the passages himself, it cannot be said that the music is altogether favorable to the display of the 'cello. The themes are largely treated by the orchestra, and while this gives a peculiar richness to the score, it does not make the solo part one in which a virtuoso is likely to make a pronounced success. Mr. Schroeder is such a fine artist that when he is not at his best it is an occasion for the expression of sympathy and not of ignorance. Yesterday he did not do himself justice. He played sadly out of tune in much of the first movement and his ornamental passages were neither clean nor musical. He must have been very nervous, for he is well known to be a master of his instrument. In the slow movement and the finale he was more at his ease, but his performance was on the whole distinctly below his own high level.

The orchestra was in superb form yesterday. In spite of that long and wearisome night ride from Baltimore, which precedes every afternoon concert here, the men played with splendid spirit and the airy scherzo of the Berlioz composition never went with more lightness and certainty of touch. As for the Liszt rhapsody, that was a veritable tour de force, and there were some delightful surprises in Mr. Gericke's reading of the music. To make so hackneyed a piece every pianist has it in his repertory as the "Hungarian Fantasia" interesting is a feat of which any conductor might well be proud. At to-night's concert there will be an entirely different programme, and Mr. Kneisel will appear as the soloist in a new composition by Mr. Loeffler.

SAILS TO HASTEN PLAYWRIGHT.

Jacob Litt's Manager Aims to Get New Play Earlier Than Promised.

A. W. Dingwall, general manager of Jacob Litt's theatrical interests, yesterday sailed on the White Star liner Oceanic for London. There he is to consult with Cecil Raleigh, who is writing a melodrama for Mr. Litt, which is intended for production in Chicago next Spring. The contract with Mr. Raleigh stipulates that the play in its entirety is to be delivered to Mr. Litt March 1.

It is principally for the purpose of inducing Mr. Raleigh to complete the piece sooner that Mr. Dingwall has started abroad. Another of his missions is to make a thorough canvass of the theatrical field in Europe for some desirable production, and if found negotiate for its purchase. Mr. Dingwall's absence from this country will be for an indefinite period.

Before sailing yesterday he said that his arrangement with the Augustin Daly estate for "The Great Ruby" production will terminate on March 1, and after that date his company now appearing in the melodrama will be disbanded. The play will then revert to Arthur Rehan, brother of Miss Ada Rehan, who obtained it by an arrangement made prior to Augustin Daly's death. What Mr. Rehan purposes to do with the play has not been made known as yet.

"Beggar Student" to be Revived.

Miss D. Bluss Morgan, Miss Gertrude Quinlan, William G. Stewart, and Frank Moulan, prominent members of the Castle Square Opera Company, will return to the American Theatre, appearing in the leading rôles of "The Beggar Student," which is to be presented on a spectacular scale commencing Christmas Day. The cast will also include Reginald Roberts, Miss Bessie Tannehill, Louis Casavant, and Miss Belle D'Arcy.

Forced from Cast by Loss of Voice.

Miss Ethel Brougham, who created the rôle of Circe in the New York production of "A Greek Slave" at the Herald Square Theatre, has been compelled to withdraw from the cast owing to the loss of her voice. She will undergo an operating to-day. Her part has been taken by Miss Josie Haworth.

"The Mystical Miss" Opens in London.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The opening performance of "The Mystical Miss" at the Comedy Theatre this evening was kindly received by the audience and the critics, although Mr. Sousa's catchy airs were liked better than Mr. Klein's libretto. Mr. Hopper, Miss Nella Bergen, and Howard Blake made much merry nonsense.

New York Theatre's Plans.

Sire Brothers, who have been managing the New York Theatre since the retirement of George W. Lederer, have decided to close that house for the entire coming week. Beginning Monday, Dec. 25, there will be a season of vaudeville, which will continue up to Jan. 9 when it is expected the new extravaganza "Broadway to Tokio," will be produced.

Sunshine Society Entertainment.

The Christmas entertainment of the International Tribune Sunshine Society will be held at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 28. Miss Lydia Von Finkelstein Moustford of Jerusalem will lecture on the Holy Land.

For German Actor's Performances.

The sale of seats for Herr Schwieghofer's performances commencing on Christmas Day will be opened this morning at the Irving Place Theatre. The German comedian, who sailed from Bremen yesterday, will be seen during the first three nights in Costa's farce, "Ein Blitzmadel;" the remaining three nights of the week, "'S Nullerl" will be the attraction.

Mary Burgess a Bankrupt.

Mary Burgess, an actress, wife of Neil Burgess, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $31,575 and no assets. Nearly all the debts are in connection with the Star Theatre, from 1894 to 1898, with her husband. Neil Burgess was discharged from these debts in bankruptcy last Spring. In her schedules there are thirty-six creditors, among whom are Jacob Dieterl, $20,000, deficiency judgment; Luke A. Burke & Co., $14,306 for repairs to the Star Theatre, for which she became partly responsible; Marine Manufacturing Company, $4,250 for a racing machine; James P. Hall, $4,500; William J. Mackaham, $2,574, roof for the Star Theatre; Allen Advertising Company, $2,067; Frank Dobson, $2,064; Libbie Stone Print, Boston, $2,200, and Metropolitan Job Print, $1,770.

Death of Addie Crawford.

Miss Addie Crawford, who was associated with "Johnny" Carroll in a specialty act, died at her home, 256 West Forty-third Street, last Monday of heart disease. Miss Crawford was born twenty-seven years ago. As a soubrette in "The Old Homestead" she was successful, and also in several of Hoyt's plays. Her husband lives in Brooklyn.

Students Boycott a Railroad.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 13.—The students of Princeton University living west of Pittsburg have instituted a boycott against the Pennsylvania Railroad. The railroad has refused to give them reduced rates for the holidays and would not extend the time limit on round-trip tickets. The students will go to Trenton and take the Reading Railroad.

Woman 108 Years Old Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Ann Grace, the oldest resident of Rhode Island, died here suddenly of heart failure. She was born in the Azore Islands in 1791, and came to this country eighty years ago. She has one son in Fall River eighty-three years of age, and one daughter in New Bedford, seventy-three years of age.

VAGARIES OF THE WEATHER

Figures Show Winters Are About the Same as Ever.

ABNORMAL FEATURES NOTED

Weather Clerk Says People Remember Them and Forget the Rest—Some Records Since 1871.

There has been a deal of talk about the weather lately and its behavior. Of course the weather is always a popular subject, ranking a close second to the friendly salutation, "How'd'y." But the widespread belief that there is something radically wrong with the seasons has given the subject an unusual boom of late.

The local weather clerk, who was found yesterday, Dec. 13, with his twentieth-story window open, was asked to account for the conditions of the past few days. His attention was called also to some figures on the subject by which some meteorological theorist had sought to prove that this is a normal December, and in the same exposition of the question had endeavored to find the solution for the changing of the seasons.

It is in fact considered to be normal, but the weather man said that in weather, as in other things, one could prove most anything with figures, and it was important then to get the right figures. Asked for his own views as gained from personal observation as to whether the Winters were later in coming and less severe, he said, "Weather is a thing that no one can remember anything about. We don't try to. There is too much of it, and it is so continuous that it is difficult to keep up with it."

"As to figures, if you take the average for one decade and the averages for two succeeding decades, respectively, you may find that temperatures and precipitations have been about the same in each decade; but these averages often disguise the fact that individual months may have been remarkable for unusual storms and severe cold. And it is such abnormal features that people remember and talk about, while all the rest is forgotten."

The Weather Bureau records go back to 1871, but it has been only for a part of that time that snow and rain have been separated in the records of precipitation. A close study of the figures in the local office does not seem to bear out the idea that Winters are any different than they used to be, that they are less severe in cold, that there is less snow, or that they are later in arriving. There have apparently also been just as big storms in the last fifteen years as in the fifteen preceding.

The mean temperature for December for twenty-eight years is 34 degrees. The lowest mean temperature in that period was 25 degrees in 1876 and the highest was 42 degrees in 1891. In 1871 the mean temperature for December was 30 degrees. Last year it was 34 degrees.

The maximum temperature on last Tuesday was the highest maximum for the date since 1872, which, however, shows that they had such weather a good many years ago. Again the mean temperature for December, 1881, was 41 degrees, while in 1882 it was 31, and in 1898 it was 32 degrees, both below normal.

Turning to precipitation the records giving the total for the month in inches show that in 1871 it was 1.24; during the next five years from 2 to a fraction less than 3; in 1877, only .65; while it was 2.93 last year; 6.98 the year before; 5.23 in 1894, and about 8½ inches in the preceding year.

Next considering the snowfall for the Winters for the past twelve years there was a fall of 47.4 inches in the Winter of 1887-8, and during the succeeding Winters up to and including last Winter the falls were, respectively, 21.9, 26.6, 39.5, 30.5, 77.6, (Winter of 1892-3,) 58.1, 38.2, 42, 29.1, 20.1, and 36.3, which was last Winter.

Of snowfall during the first twelve days of December, the smallest was in 1888, when there was but what the weather men call a trace. There were 5.5 inches in 1887, 19.1 in 1890, 8 inches in 1893, 12.6 inches in 1896, but 2.9 in 1897, and 1.1 last year.

The snow flurries which have occurred this year are estimated to have amounted to about three inches, but as the snow melted on reaching the ground it was not measured as snow. The precipitation for the first twelve days of December, however, this year shows a deficiency from normal of 1.04 inches.

Regarding the general question of change in seasons, Alfred J. Henry, Chief of the Division of Records in the Weather Bureau at Washington, writing in The Monthly Weather Review, says that the same question has been asked for fifty years. The yearly means taken at any one station, he says, do not show any gradual change, but rather irregularity in distribution of warm and cold years, that suggests the absence of any system of compensation or any gradual progress from one extreme to the other.

The mean temperatures obtained by the earliest instrumental observations do not indicate any change greater than might be reasonably due to the character of instruments and environment.

DEPEW RECEIVES NEW YORKERS.

Whole State Delegation Invited to His Washington Home.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Depew this afternoon received the New York delegation in Congress at his home, the house occupied for many years by the late W. W. Corcoran. The seats of the New York members of the House of Representatives were abandoned late in the afternoon, and every member who was in the city found his way to the Corcoran house between 5 and 6 o'clock. The host arranged the reception specially for New York men, inviting a small party of others to meet the members.

Among those present were Secretary of War Root, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, Martin A. Knapp, Inter-State Commerce Commissioner; Patent Commissioner Charles H. Duell, United States Treasurer E. H. Roberts, Gen. Henry E. Tremaine, State Senator John Raines, Senator T. C. Platt, and Representatives Scudder, Driggs, Fitzgerald, Clayton, Wilson, Mac. Sulzer, Levy, Ruppert, Tompkins, Ketcham, Sherman, Hay, Driscoll, Wadsworth, O'Grady, Ryan, and Alexander. Senator Depew extended a cordial greeting to each of his guests at the door of the large drawing room. Later on a very attractive collation was served.

The event was enjoyed as bringing together the entire delegation, regardless of party, in that respect being quite out of the usual course here. The New York Democrats who were guests of Mr. Depew afterward dined as guests of Representative Joseph C. Sibley at the Raleigh.

FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA HOTEL.

Ex-Vice President and Mrs. Morton and Ellen Terry Among the Guests.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—A slight fire created great excitement at the Hotel Walton early to-day. Hundreds of guests were roused from their beds, and almost a panic ensued. Among the distinguished guests in the hotel at the time were Ellen Terry and ex-Vice President Morton and his wife.

The blaze was caused by a defective electric light wire in the kitchen. The smoke ascending to the upper floors awakened most of the sleeping guests, and half-clad men and women ran wildly about calling for assistance. All were soon on the ground floor, and in a short time the flames were extinguished. The loss is trifling.

EPPING SAVINGS BANK FAILS.

Small New Hampshire Institution Believed to be Solvent.

EPPING, N. H., Dec. 13.—The Epping Savings Bank failed to open its doors today, and Charles Knight of Exeter, who had been appointed receiver, was in charge of the institution. The bank is a small one, the last statement on file showing deposits of $51,747.

The Bank Commissioners state that the bank was closed at the request of the Trustees. The institution is practically solvent, but of late the withdrawals have been far in excess of the deposits and it was thought best to close up the business.

Episcopal Bishop Elected.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 13.—The Rev. Robert Codman, Jr., of St. John's Church, Boston, was chosen as Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Maine to-day at the convention which assembled at St. Luke's Cathedral to select a successor to the late Bishop Henry A. Neely. The election occupied but little time; the clergy, voting separately, chose Mr Codman on the first ballot. The laity, voting separately, gave Mr. Codman all but 4 votes.

GERMAN NAVAL INCREASE

Sattler Says Power Should Be Strengthened Against America.

VON MIQUEL ANSWERS LIEBER

Defends the Kaiser's Hamburg Speech —Entire Government Works for the Success of the Bill.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The principal feature of to-day's session of the Reichstag was Dr. von Miquel's defense against the implied charge of the Centrist leader, Dr. Lieber, that he was the "irresponsible adviser who has prejudiced the Emperor against the Reichstag and the people." This he hotly repudiated, declaring that he found it difficult to reply to such an insinuation with Parliamentary courtesy.

The encounter between the Emperor's recently all-powerful adviser and the leader of the strongest faction in the Reichstag was an impressive spectacle.

Dr. von Miquel replied to the criticism of the Emperor's Hamburg speech made by Dr. Lieber. He said the speech had found a patriotic echo in the hearts of millions of Germans and had also been a warning against the excessive growth of the power of party politics. The speaker said he was not responsible for the speech. This was a case in which the Emperor needed no counselor.

The Navy bill, as announced, was not beyond the financial strength of Germany and the Centrists, he asserted, would ultimately admit the necessity of it.

Herr Sattler, in behalf of the National-Liberals, said he hailed with great satisfaction the favorable sentiments of America toward Germany, adding:

"Since, however, America formerly went very far in repressing German interests, it is just America against whom we must strengthen our power."

The surprising statement is made to-day that Emperor William himself wrote the recent pamphlet entitled "Bittere Noth ist Uns Eine Grosse Flotte," ("Our Bitter Need Is a Strong Navy,") an exclamation uttered by his Majesty in his Hamburg speech.

Lieut. Commander William H. Beehler, United States Naval Attaché here, is now translating the pamphlet, and he will transmit his translation to Washington, pointing out that Germany is certainly doubling her fleet, while the United States Government remains supine.

It was said at the Naval Department to-day that Germany is now constructing four battleships, one large and four small cruisers, and eight big torpedo boats. She is also increasing her yards with a view of building the vessels called for by the new bill. The capacity of the Germania yards will be doubled; and Emden will have a big yard.

The whole Government, from the Emperor down to the humblest village policeman, is working at high pressure to carry the naval bill. The semi-official press is daily waging a vigorous campaign in favor of the measure. To-day the inspired Berliner Correspondez contains an article treating of the blockade question.

RUSSIANS CRITICISE VON BUELOW.

Object to His Utterances in the Reichstag Debate.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 13.—The speech of the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Count von Bülow, in the Reichstag yesterday is keenly criticised here, both by the press and public on account of what are regarded as pronounced declarations in favor of German hegemony and their generally warlike and threatening tone.

The Novoe Vremya and other papers take a favorable view of Count von Bülow's speech. The Novosti says: "The speech confirms the general belief in the peace-loving policy of Germany."

The Herold says: "Russia is as convinced of Germany's sincere love of peace as of her own. Count von Bülow, for the first time in history, alluded to the relations between Russia and Germany as Germany's security in Europe."

GERMAN PRODUCTS FOR CHINA.

Orders for Steel Rails, Locomotives, and Cars Received.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—Large orders in connection with the construction of the Shan-Tung Railroad have reached Germany, among them orders for 65,000 tons of rails, 24 locomotives, and 700 cars.

GERMANS TO INVADE AMERICA.

Will Establish Branches in the United States.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The Kreuz Zeitung says that the large spinning works at Gera, as well as a group of worsted spinners and several Rhenish silk and woolen spinners, will soon establish branches in the United States. It refers to reports that American manufacturers, especially in iron, are about to establish branches here, and calls this a tendency "dangerous to German industry."

THE CHINESE CUSTOMS TARIFF.

Ministers of Various Countries Conditionally Agree to Revision.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Daily Mail publishes the following dispatch from Shanghai:

"It is reported here that the British and other Ministers at Peking have agreed to a revision of the Chinese customs tariff on condition that a joint foreign and Chinese board shall be appointed to control the expenditure and the extra revenue."

A MINSTREL SHOW IN PARIS.

Gen. Porter Attends the American Art Association Entertainment.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Gen. Horace Porter, the United States Ambassador; Sir Edmund J. Monson, the British Ambassador, with the staffs of the two embassies and most of the members of the American colony, were present this evening at the sixth annual concert given by the American Art Association at the Folies Marigny, in the Champ Elysées.

The concert was organized and given by young American art students, and took the form of a negro minstrel entertainment. The stage was decorated with the Stars and Stripes. The principal boxes were occupied by the two Ambassadors and their families.

The affair, which was very successful, yielded $500 for the treasury of the association.

Brazil Objects to Venezuela Award.

RIO JANEIRO, Dec. 13.—The Government of Brazil will officially protest against the award of the Arbitration Tribunal at Paris of part of the frontier between the Cotingo and Takutu Rivers, which territory, it is said, belongs to Brazil, and was not included in the protocols establishing the tribunal which arbitrated the British-Venezuelan questions.

Spain's Ministry May Resign.

MADRID, Dec. 13.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day, by a vote of 110 against 100, rejected a motion demanding the abolition of the Under Secretaryship of the Navy and of other posts at the Ministry of Marine. Owing to the closeness of the vote a Ministerial crisis is believed to be imminent.

Mysterious Arrest of an Anarchist.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—A mysterious arrest was just been effected in Hanover by the Berlin Secret Police. The prisoner, who was brought immediately to Berlin, was elegantly dressed, and, it is reliably reported, is a most dangerous Anarchist, implicated in a plot to assassinate a very high personage.

Snow Causes Railway Accidents.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—In consequence of the heavy snowfall there have been several railroad accidents. At one point a train was derailed and two persons were killed.

Austrian Cabinet Crisis Rumored.

VIENNA, Dec. 13.—There are unconfirmed rumors current that the Government has resigned, or is about to resign, on account of the persistent Czech obstruction.

BANK ROBBERS FOILED.

Night Watchman Fires Charge of Buckshot Through a Window, Killing One—Victim Known Here.

DEEP RIVER, Conn., Dec. 13.—This ordinarily quiet Connecticut town is much excited to-day as a result of a tragedy in which an attempted bank robbery culminated. About 1 o'clock this morning four unknown men undertook to force an entrance to the Deep River Savings Bank, on Main Street. They were detected by the bank watchman, Harry D. Tyler, and just as they were about to gain entrance the watchman, without warning, from his position within the bank discharged a shotgun. One of the robbers fell dead in his tracks, shot through the head, the other three making good an immediate escape.

The story of the affair is dramatically told by the watchman. Last night he was attending to his duties as usual. About 1 o'clock this morning, for some reason which he says he is unable to explain, he went to a front window of the bank and looked up and down the street. He saw a man coming toward the bank. The lateness of the hour caused him to become interested and he drew back a little and watched. A few moments later he discovered that instead of one man there were four. They were walking in lockstep, apparently for the purpose of giving as far as possible the appearance of one man. Tyler drew back a little further and waited. The four men reached a point almost in front of the bank, halted, consulted, and then separated. Tyler saw them take up positions, one on each side of the four sides of the bank building.

The watchman immediately reached for his repeating shotgun, the shells of which were loaded with No. 9 buckshot, and taking up a position of advantage, he waited. For some minutes all was quiet, but it was not long before he heard a grating sound at a window on the north side of the bank. He distinctly heard some one at work, apparently with a chisel. He could not see out of the window, as the windows of the bank are equipped with inside blinds. Suddenly he heard the window creak, and then it was opened.

The watchman decided that the time for action had arrived. Taking deliberate aim, he discharged the gun full toward the window, the charge tearing through the blinds and glass. Tyler waited some time, and, concluding that the robbers had been frightened away, went to the bank telephone and notified William Mitchell, a nearby liveryman. The latter went for help and an investigation was begun. Under the window, where the robbers had been at work, was found the body of one of the robbers. The charge from Tyler's gun had struck him in the forehead and he had fallen dead in his tracks.

The body of the dead robber was removed to an undertaking establishment, where it was later viewed by Medical Examiner French, who notified the Coroner at Middletown. The victim was a man apparently about thirty years of age, good looking, and well dressed. In an overcoat pocket were found a loaded revolver and a few dynamite shells.

A clue, which it is believed reveals the identity of the man who was killed, was found on the dead man's person late this afternoon in the form of a receipt for a Post Office money order. The order, which is dated at Springfield, Mass., Dec. 4, is numbered 1,745, and was purchased by F. E. King. It was issued to T. J. Farley, and the latter has been located in New York, where he is employed as a bartender at a resort in the "Tenderloin" known as the "Skates."

King is supposed to be the dead man. Farley has been communicated with and admitted knowing King. His description of the man tallied in many respects with that of the man that was slain by Watchman Tyler. He said that King formerly lived in Albany, N. Y., and was a brakeman in the employ of the Boston and Albany Railroad, but further than that he could give but little information.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—The police here knew P. E. King, the burglar shot by a night watchman at Deep River, Conn., as a suspicious character. He was believed to be one of those who robbed a brewery in Amsterdam last Fall. At one time he was a brakeman on the Boston and Albany Railroad and stopped at the Eastern Hotel in this city. Two weeks ago he left Albany, bidding his friend Thomas Farley, a barkeeper, from whom he borrowed money, a significant farewell, saying, "I'll come back richer or I won't come back at all." Farley has since gone to New York.

MR. HOWE ON FEE SYSTEM.

Register-Elect of Kings Still Willing to Accept a Salary—His Idea of Reforms.

James R. Howe, the Register-elect of Kings County, who made the announcement right after election day that he would not use for his personal ends the fees pertaining to the office for which he was chosen, and that, moreover, it ought not to be a fee office at all, said yesterday that, in spite of rumors to the contrary, he had not altered his intention as to what he would do with the fees. It has been frequently published that he was going to distribute the portion of the income he did not use among the subordinates in his office, instead of devoting it to the good of the citizens of Kings County, as he first said he would. This report he emphatically denied yesterday.

"I am not responsible," said ex-Congressman Howe, when seen at his place of business, 201 Broadway, Brooklyn, "for rumors. As to the report that I would distribute the great part of the fees among my subordinates, I don't intend to do so. I am not going to make a stock company of my office, although the idea that I intend to has become prevalent, and I have been deluged with applications for the few places I have to give. I have had, all told, from 2,000 to 4,000 applications. The places I can fill number between 50 and 55."

"Have you any intention of increasing the staff of the Register's office, using some of the fees in that way?" he was asked.

"Not at all," said he. "On the other hand, I may even decrease it. The only way in which I may use any of the fees to aid my subordinates is in increasing the pay of some of the poor fellows who, I understand, do copy work for $8 to $12 a week.

"Another badly needed reform is the renovating of the Register's office rooms. At present they are a disgrace to Kings County.

"But what I shall do with the bulk of my fees I cannot now say, any more than I could when I was elected. They will go in some benefaction for the people of Kings County, but you mustn't ask me what it will be. The Register of Kings County has been clearing from that office, after paying all expenses, between $50,000 and $75,000 a year."

"What is to be done about the bill to abolish the fee system?" Mr. Howe was asked.

"It will be introduced," said he, "in very much the same form as the bill which was designed to do the same work was introduced in the last Legislature. After Gov. Roosevelt was inaugurated I sent him a letter advising the passage of such a bill. He responded promptly and then asked the Legislature to pass the bill. Next year the same measure, or one a good deal like it, will be introduced, and if it doesn't go through we will know the reason why. The party leaders in this county are certainly in favor of the reform, and I believe the State leaders are, too. We feel confident that the bill will go through."

Mr. Howe said the old bill totally abolished the fee system for the offices of Sheriff, Register, and County Clerk in Kings County, substituting therefor, according to his recollection, salaries of $15,000, $10,000, and $10,000 respectively. He declined to say whether this schedule was or was not just the one he approved.

"I cannot tell just what recommendation I shall make as to the provisions of the bill," he continued, "until I have been in office some time and am thoroughly used to the workings of the office. I will say now, however, that the measure must provide against the possibility of conducting the offices of Sheriff, County Clerk, and Register extravagantly after the fee system is abolished."

Mr. Howe suggested that it might not be necessary to fix the salary of the Sheriff much higher than that of Register or County Clerk if a law were passed making the county instead of the Sheriff himself liable for any damages which might result from mistakes in office on his part.

Legal Aid Society's Work.

A meeting will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the Assembly Hall of the United Charities Building, 100 East Twenty-second Street, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Committee of the Legal Aid Society, to which the public is invited. A number of prominent speakers will make addresses.

Cemetery Lot Sold for a Dollar.

A lot in Cypress Hills Cemetery sold yesterday in the City Hall at auction sale for $1. The lot belonged to Frederick Hemming, deceased, and the auction sale was of his effects. Thousands of shares of stock sold for 65 cents, the total sale realizing $10.65.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Weather topics are uppermost as matters of conversation wherever one goes nowadays. The weather man officially and officiously says that the sort of weather we are having now is the regular average of December weather, and produces figures to prove it. That will not make the weather critics believe it, however. There is a German butcher away up town who is very fond of geese as food and the breastbone of the goose as a weather indicator. He says he has examined the breastbones of four geese he has eaten this Fall, and these prove to his satisfaction that we are to have an unusually mild Winter. The bones are peculiarly white this year, with only the faintest tinge of blue at the ends. That means, says he, mild weather until the middle of March, and then a short and sharp touch of real Winter. "And the breastbone of a goose is always right," he emphatically asserts. To support the butcher in his claim comes a young man, who buys the skins of the coon, muskrat, skunk, squirrel, and fox for a fur house in town. He is just back from a trip up through Northern New York, and he says the animals are wearing an unusually light coat of fur, judging from the skins he has bought so far, the pelts being less heavily furred than they were a year ago at this time. That means, if what the hunters and woodsmen tell him is true, that the Winter will be an open one, even up over the Canadian border. It might, however, be just as well for householders to lay in a supply of coal, if they haven't done so, for there is an old saying that "all signs fail in dry weather," and this is certainly the dryest December we have had in many years.

"I'm glad she's gone," said a woman to her friend as a massive woman left the trolley car, and a trail of some unusually odorous perfume floated away with her. "She smelled like a funeral in a big church, all Easter lillies and immortelles, and all that sort of thing, don't you know."

A fresh air crank pushed his way to the front of the first car on an elevated train that was rushing up town at the beginning of the "crush hours" yesterday. That front door happened to be unlocked. The lover of fresh air discovered it quickly, pulled the sliding door half open, threw back the flaps of his overcoat, and, bracing himself, drew in long whiffs of the air that, mingled with the smoke from the locomotive, came rushing in through the doorway. He drew a long sigh of relief and steadied himself to thoroughly enjoy that rush of air. Others in the car turned up coat collars quickly and darted angry glances at the man who wanted air, but said nothing. At last one aged gentleman who had a seat near the door, and who is a pillar in one of the Christian Science congregations, snarled out: "Won't you please close that door? Do you want to give us all pneumonia?" "No, I don't, and of course I'll close it," said the searcher for fresh air, as he slided through the doorway and out to the front platform. But just as he was about to close the door he snapped out, to the intense amusement of everybody near enough to hear it: "Pneumonia, is it, Mr. Blank, and you a Christian Scientist that says there's no such thing as disease except in the imagination. What are you afraid of? Don't you practice what you preach?"

A honeysuckle in Morningside Park is so deceived as to the time of year by the weather that it has been tempted to put out blossoms, which a stroller discovered there yesterday. A visitor to Central Park found several young trees and shrubs that are putting out buds and otherwise acting as if this was Spring instead of the first month of Winter. This latter fact is troubling some of the Park keepers, who fear that some of the tender shrubs may be killed by this unseasonable disposition to send out leaves and buds.

"While you in New York seem to be having a bit of temporary adversity in Wall Street," said a good dominie from Virginia, who is here for a short visit, "we of the South are reveling in prosperity. Generally speaking, people think that prosperity makes little difference with us of the cloth. But it does. I have found in my experience in a parish made up largely of people employed in the manufactories, that prosperity and matrimony go hand in hand. It has proved especially true this Fall, and my brother ministers in Richmond tell me the same thing. When there are prosperity and plenty of work for the mechanic, the number of marriages is materially increased. The young men are more willing to take up the responsibilities of married life, as they can see ahead of them a chance to support a wife and family. Women, they say, are rarely ever averse to matrimony, but the Southern girls like to see a chance ahead for their husbands before they will marry. Now, with everything looking rosy, and with the shops all running to their capacity, the girls see a better chance for Darby and Joan to get along nicely together, and so they marry. Marriage fees have been coming to the parson this Fall in goodly numbers, and in fairly good sums, so that we are able to make more of Christmas than we would otherwise be able to. It will indeed be a merry Yule-tide with us of the Church in the South this season."

Lord William Beresford, who has been enamored of the American thoroughbred ever since Pierre Lorillard sent his string to England with that good American trainer, John Huggins, to handle them, has also taken most kindly to the American trotting horse, and has a couple of speedy ones that he drives. With Walter Winans—the acquitted American revolver champion—he is at the head of a movement to build somewhere within easy reach of London a trotting track. It will be a mile in circumference, and be made, as are the trotting tracks in this country, with a cantilever grand stand and all the accessories that go with our best tracks. George H. Ketcham, who made a campaign with his right good trotter Creceus, 2:07¼, has gone to England to superintend the carrying out of the plans which were perfected before the outbreak of the war in the Transvaal. A number of the trotters disposed of at the recent Madison Square Garden sale have been, or will be, shipped to England, and will figure in the racing season that is to be begun next Fall, by which time it is expected that the new track will be opened. It is well within the possibilities that William B. Fasig of this city and "Andy" Welch of Hartford will make a trip across the water to help the Englishmen to open their new trotting track in the most approved American fashion.

If you are anxious to have an automobile on call at any time, day or night, for your use during the coming year, now is the time to step up to the Captain's office and sign a contract. If one makes a contract now he can secure the use of the horseless outfit at the rate of $350 per month, or $3,000 per annum. This includes the services of the machine and its operator. There seems to be a good demand for these horseless vehicles even at this rather stiff price, which is about double what one would have to pay for the use of a cab hired on the same plan.

"I was at your Museum of Natural History yesterday," said the man from Chicago, as he flicked the ashes from his cigar, "and it is really a very entertaining sore of place—for New York. Now, at our Field Museum—but, never mind, we'll let that pass. What I was about to say was that the last thing I saw in the building was the collection of wooden masks once used by the Alaskan Indians, I believe, and presented to the Museum by Heber R. Bishop. If you have seen them you may remember that they are painted in the most garish colors and are hideous and grotesque in the extreme. When I left there I went for a walk through your lovely Riverside Park, and carried vivid remembrances of them with me. I strolled along the asphalt walk until I had almost reached the hillock you people have christened 'Mount Tom.' Suddenly there loomed up from the walk a lot of reproductions of those masks, or something akin to them, and instinctively I jumped aside for fear I should step on one of those hideous caricatures of humanity. I was positively startled for an instant, and I presume I shall go to bed to-night and dream of those frightful-looking things. How did those replicas come there? I solved the mystery a few minutes later when I ran across a party of school boys engaged in drawing another lot of these caricatures 'to scare the girls with,' as one of them explained. Two of the lads had bunches of colored crayons, and with these were duplicating the work of the Indians, with the walks for their blackboards. The youngsters were from one of the west side kindergartens, they told me, and had recently visited the Museum with a teacher. The masks had impressed them as strongly as they had me, and so their reproductions were made startlingly faithful. I don't see that there is any lesson or moral to be drawn from the incident. I only mention it as a phase of life that was rather curious."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Christmas shopping, from all appearances, is the most popular amusement in society just now, and the shopping district proper, which extends from Union Square to Thirty-fourth Street, is daily crowded with carriages, while those known at all in or to the fashionable world can be met on Fifth Avenue, Broadway, Twenty-third Street, and even Sixth Avenue in the late morning and early afternoon. Yesterday's mild and springlike weather was a boon both to the shoppers and the shops, and enabled both vendors and buyers to make up for the loss of money and time occasioned by the storm of Tuesday. It was a busy day, and while not crowded with social incidents and events, there was enough going on to fill the hours very pleasantly.

The sailing of the Oceanic for Queenstown and Liverpool at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon brought a throng of well-known people to the White Star pier to say farewell to friends who left on the big liner so as to spend Christmas on the other side. The farewells interchanged between those departing and those who remained behind were therefore mingled with Christmas greetings, and it was noticeable that almost every woman who was sailing carried a sprig of holly, while the baskets of fruit and flowers which filled the staterooms and the grand saloon were all decorated with Christmas greens and berries. Even as the ship left the wharf there were more cries of "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year" than of good-bye or "auf wiedersehen."

Among those who were at the pier to see relatives and friends off were Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mr. William Rhinelander Stewart, Mr. John Soley, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Watson, the Misses Frank and Harry Watson, Mrs. J. F. Pierson, Miss Daisy Pierson, and Mr. and Mrs. Harriman. Among those who sailed on the Oceanic, and whose names have not already been printed in this column, were the Duke of Manchester, Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart and two daughters, and Mrs. Roswell D. Hitchcock. As already announced, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Watson, Mrs. J. W. Ehninger, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Redmond, Mrs. Gilbert Parker, and Miss Alice Ward were among those who left.

At the sailing of the St. Louis for Southampton at 10 o'clock yesterday morning there was also a large crowd of people to say farewell to friends, and among those who departed on the favorite liner were Mr. J. Coleman Drayton and Miss Drayton, W. A. Du Bois, Adelbert S. Hay, the newly appointed United States Consul at Pretoria; Mr. and Mrs. H. Hobart Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wells, and the Baron and Baroness Hoyningen-Huehne.

The sailing of Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart and children on the Oceanic yesterday caused some surprise, as Mrs. Stewart, only returned from a long stay in Europe in the Autumn greatly improved in health, had taken an opera box, and it was thought would entertain this Winter.

To-day will bring the receptions to be given by Mrs. Robert Hoe for her daughters, Mrs. Samuel Morley Evans and Miss Ruth Lawrence Hoe, at her residence, 11 East Thirty-sixth Street, and by Mrs. Alfred Pell of 39 West Thirty-eighth Street for her daughter, Miss Frances Pell. Mrs. Frederic Edward Ballard of 21 West Seventy-second Street will also introduce her daughter, Miss Grace Ballard, at a reception this afternoon. The evening will bring the first Assembly Ball in the Astoria ballroom and the first Bachelors and Spinsters' dance at Delmonico's. The Strollers will omit their performance to-night, as the ballroom will be in use for the Assembly Ball. Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Hawkins will give a dinner this evening at their residence, 5 West Thirty-fourth Street, for Miss Estelle Hawkins, and there will be receptions and "at homes" given by Mr. and Mrs. McNeven Purdy, 32 East Sixty-third Street; by Mrs. Leonidas Coleman Williams and her daughter, Mrs. Henry H. Whitlock, at 52 West Fifty-first Street, and by Mrs. Braddin Hamilton at 61 East Fifty-fifth Street.

Owing to the death of Mr. Frank Evans Wing of Morristown, N. J., Mrs. Charles Tudor Wing is obliged to recall all invitations for the wedding and reception of her daughter, Miss Alice Maude Wing, and Dr. Mathias Nicoll, Jr., which was to have been celebrated at the bride's residence, 1,700 Broadway, to-day. The wedding will probably take place in the presence of only the imediate relatives of the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt are at Biltmore, where they will remain until after the holidays. They are entertaining there a succession of family parties. Just now Dr. Seward Webb, Mrs. Webb, and family, who left in Dr. Webb's private car on Monday afternoon, are at Biltmore. They will remain there for a week, and will return to the city next Tuesday, Dec. 19, and go immediately to their country home at Shelburne Farms, near Burlington, Vt., where they give a large house party during Christmas week. They will not open their house at 680 Fifth Avenue this Winter. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt will give the accustomed Christmas festival at Biltmore to their tenants on the day itself, and the Christmas tree, one of the tallest of the kind to be found in the North Carolina mountains, will be placed in the large hall room, and the many pretty gifts which will be hung on it will be distributed by Mrs. Vanderbilt on Christmas afternoon. There will be a large house party for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt will go abroad shortly after the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stevens will give a large house party over the Christmas holidays at their country seat at Roslyn, L. I. Mr. and Mrs. McK. Twombly will pass Christmas at their country place at Madison. There will, from all indications, be more country house parties for the Christmastide than for many years past. Many of the Tuxedo cottagers who have come in town will open their houses at Tuxedo again for Christmas, and will take up parties from town.

There will take place this evening at the Holland House the annual dinner of the English Universities and Schools Club, and a number of New Yorkers have been invited. These guests will doubtless hear the English side of the Transvaal question presented in the speeeches which will follow the dinner, and the affair has unusual interest in consequence. Most of the Englishmen resident in New York are members of this organization, and the dinner will be a handsome affair.

And still the débutante receptions come crowding on. Mrs. Henry Coit Mortimer, who was Miss Katherine Crocker, will introduce her daughter, Miss Mary Mortimer, at two receptions to be given at her residence, 54 West Twenty-first Street, to-morrow and Saturday afternoons. The holding of coming-out receptions on two succeeding afternoons is rather a novel departure. Mrs. John F. Scott will give a reception for her daughters, the Misses Anna and Emily Scott, at her residence, 33 West Thirty-seventh Street, on Monday afternoon, Dec. 18. Other receptions in the near future will be those to be given by Mrs. Edson Bradley on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 20, at her residence, 802 Fifth Avenue, for her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Shipman, and by Mrs. Hubert Vos, the wife of the Dutch portrait painter, this afternoon, at her husband's studio, in Carnegie Hall.

Mrs. Vos, who has recently returned with her husband from a trip to China and Japan, was formerly Mrs. Graham, and is a native Hawaiian. She was the daughter of a Scotchman, resident in Hawaii, and one of the native Princesses, his wife. Her brother became a student at Princeton and there met Mrs. Graham's first husband, J. Mortimer Graham, a son of Mr. Malcolm Graham of this city. Mr. Graham took the young Hawaiian on a trip around the world on his yacht, and, stopping at Honolulu, was introduced by his guest to the latter's sister, with whom he fell madly in love. The marriage was not a happy one, and after coming to Tuxedo to live, where two children were born to the couple, Mrs. Graham procured a divorce. She met Mr. Vos three years ago in this city, and soon after they were married in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Vos will go to Paris, where Mr. Vos will exhibit at the Exposition in the Spring.

The wedding of Mr. Clarence Phelps Dodge, a son of Dr. D. Stuart Dodge, and Miss Virginia Lunt, daughter of Judge Lunt of Colorado Springs, will be celebrated at the residence of the bride in Colorado on New Year's Day. A number of Mr. Dodge's relatives and friends will go out on a special car for the wedding. Canon Knowles of this city will perform the ceremony. Miss Mina Lunt will be the maid of honor and Mr. Cyril Dodge, brother of the future and Calumet Club, usher of the prospective bridegroom, will be best man. The ushers will be Robert Darling, Herbert M. Morgan, classmates of Mr. Dodge at Yale; Horace P. Lunt, Harvard '01, and Irving Bushnell of Colorado Springs.

The flight of society into Europe has begun in earnest, and the ships this week have taken quite a large number of prominent people belonging to one particular set. And there are more to follow. The hunting fields in England are becoming quite Americanized, and even the Irish hunts have been joined by some of the enthusiasts in this kind of sport. Mr. William Gaddy Lowe, who married Miss "Queenie" Baker, is one of the Westchester men who has joined one of the hunts in the Emerald Isle for the season, and the departure of the Football Misses, the Fyncott Lawrences, and the Ewbins for the Queen will reinforce those ranks, now sadly depleted for want of members.

Mr. George Keppel was entertained in Philadelphia by the Anthony Drexels the evening before they sailed for Europe. Mr. Keppel is in this country on official business for the supply department of the Transvaal. The Earl of Cassilis has taken up his residence at the Cambridge for the Winter. He is just at present the most conspicuous person of title in New York, now that the Duke of Manchester has departed. George Keppel, however, represents the more exclusive London set. Mrs. Keppel will visit Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel at their country seat this Winter.

Sir Arthur Cest has sent to a Philadelphia hotel an order for canvas-back ducks and a number of diamond-back terrapin, to be sent in company with a chef to London. Sir Arthur believes in the Philadelphia method of cooking terrapin, and has been the target for bitter criticism from Baltimore in consequence.

The wedding of Miss Helen Donovan of Philadelphia, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Donovan and a sister of Mrs. Camille Weidenfeld of this city, and Mr. George Edwin Sawyer of this city has been one of the events of the Philadelphia season. Mrs. Sawyer is a very handsome young woman. She was at Bonbright for two seasons, and is an intimate friend of Miss Lily Dixon and Miss Clara Byron. Miss Frances Sloan, a niece of Miss Byron, was maid of honor.

Mrs. S. Van Rensselaer Crugar has denied the report that she will travel with Mrs. James P. Kernochan this Winter. She will remain in Florence and devote herself to literary work.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Moorehouse—Wakeman.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 13.—At the home of the groom, in Weston, this evening, Miss Elizabeth Wakeman of New York became the bride of Francis Moorehouse. The Rev. Alexander Hamilton performed the ceremony. Harry Wilson of Norwalk was best man. The maid of honor was Miss Minnie Cahill of New York. The bride was gowned in white silk and the bridesmaid in pink.

Andrews—Burns.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 13.—Miss Nellie Burns this evening became the bride of C. R. Andrews of Bridgeport, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. M. Selleck. The wedding took place at the bride's home, the residence of Mrs. A. B. Burns of Silvermine. The bride was attired in a tailor-made gown of pearl gray. The maids of honor, Misses Bessie and Mattie Barber of Winsted, were dressed in white.

PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE PRAISED.

New Educational Movement Discussed at the Reform Club.

The New Educational Movement of the People's Institute" was the general topic of discussion last night at a dinner at the Reform Club under the auspices of its Committee on City Affairs. Nearly seventy-five members of the club and guests were present, including the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Charles Sprague Smith, Dr. Felix Adler, the Rev. John P. Peters, John De Witt Warner, William J. Ives, Henry Villard, Wheeler H. Peckham, Hunt H. Lusk, a former member of the New Zealand Parliament, and Harry White, General Secretary of the United Garment Workers.

Mr. Smith reviewed the work of the People's Institute, emphasizing the fraternal spirit in which it is being conducted. John S. Crosby followed in a speech commending the work of the Institute. He discussed the trust question incidentally, condemning corporations as usurpers of civil power and disclosers of the individual.

Mr. Lusk, who was introduced as one who came from a country where reforms did not progress but galloped, spoke pessimistically of the degeneracy of democratic institutions in the United States. He declared the People's Institute was one of the very few hopeful signs he had seen during his four years of observation in America.

The Rev. Mr. Slicer spoke of the People's Institute as giving opportunity for an exchange of ideas, where the untrained mind might express its groping wants under the direction of the trained mind.

USED OIL TO START A FIRE.

Woman Is Dead, Her Husband Dying, and Her Daughter Burned.

DUBOIS, Penn., Dec. 13.—As a result of using oil to start a fire, Mrs. A. J. Clarke of Walston is dead, her husband is lying at the point of death at the Adrian Hospital, and a little daughter is seriously burned, and if she does recover will be scarred for life. The home of the ill-fated family took fire and was completely destroyed.

Becomes Insane on a Train.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 13.—Mrs. C. B. Owens, a vaudeville actress, known as Crissy Owens, went violently insane while in a palace car on the New York Central eastbound train which arrived in this city to-night, and was, with difficulty, removed to the Rochester Police Station and locked up for the night. At the station she gave the name of Mary Howard. She had recently played at Richmond, Ill., where her husband now is, and she was en route to New York to visit Mrs. Katie Morse of 111 East Fourth Street.

GERMAN ORDERS FOR IRON.

American Steel and Wire Company Contracts, It Is Said, to Deliver 250,000 Tons of Wire and Nails.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 13.—It is reported here that the American Steel and Wire Company has made a contract to furnish an enormous quantity of wire and nails for export. It seems that German iron and steel manufacturers will be far short in their requirements; that they have sought in vain to fill orders in England and America for pig iron.

Being unable to do this, they are compelled to buy the finished material. Among the stocks available are wire and nails, and it is asserted that something like 250,000 tons have been sold for immediate delivery at prevailing prices. The company has put a large force of men at work on Neville Island at their new blast furnace plant. This will be the nucleus of a consolidation of their interest there.

A builder of rolling mill machinery says that queries are out for an enormous amount of rolling mill machinery. The Union Steel Company, with which H. C. Frick, it is said, is to be connected, is demanding immediate delivery. Indications are that the new concern will not go into the manufacture of light material such as wire products, as was reported, but that machinery to make products of heavy tonnage is being sought. If this is the case, the American Steel and Wire Company will be rid of a dangerous competitor.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Sir George Airey Kirkpatrick.

Sir George Airey Kirkpatrick, ex-Lieutenant Governor of Ontario and ex-Speaker of the House at Ottawa, died at Toronto, Ontario, on Tuesday. Sir George had been ill for some time, and his death was not unexpected. He was born at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, Sept. 12, 1841, and was called to the Canadian bar in 1865. In 1890 he was appointed Queen's Counsel. In 1872 he was elected a member of the Canadian House of Commons, and from 1882 to 1887 was Speaker of the Dominion. In 1891 he was made a Queen's Privy Councilor for Canada. From 1892 to 1897 he was Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. In the latter year he was created a Kn

SUGAR TRUST DISSENSIONS

F. O. Matthiessen Writes a Formal Letter of Resignation.

TO GO INTO EFFECT AT ONCE

Denies He Is Interested in the New Colonial Company, About Which There Is Much Speculation.

The dissensions in the Sugar Trust become more positive. Not content with writing a letter last week declaring that his name must not be used for re-election to the Board of Directors of the American Sugar Refining Company, F. O. Matthiessen—the more clearly, it is said, to emphasize his position—yesterday wrote a formal letter of resignation as a Director of the company. This resignation, it is understood, will go into effect at once.

Mr. Matthiessen declined to discuss the matter, but it is said this second letter was hastened in order that he may more effectually carry out the scheme, which is attributed to him, of organizing into one consolidated company certain of the now independent sugar refining companies at present fighting the trust. For a time, following the announcement of the incorporation of the Delaware Colonial Sugar Refining Company, it was believed in some circles that this was the new company about which there had been so much talk and in connection with which Mr. Matthiessen's name was mentioned.

Such, however, does not appear to be the case. The Colonial Company, it is reported, is an entirely new concern, connected neither with Mr. Matthiessen nor with any of the now existing independent companies. Speaking of the company yesterday, Mr. Matthiessen said: "I know nothing about it." While at the offices, not alone of the independent refining companies, but of the trust, a like ignorance was expressed.

It was said during the day that the Corporation Trust Company of Delaware, whose New York offices are at 52 Broadway, was in some way concerned with the new sugar company. An officer of that company, who was approached on the subject, said: "The matter will probably pass through our hands, but we are not in a position to say anything."

It was learned elsewhere that the company would have the right, under its charter, to refine sugar both in this country and in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and Cuba and that one of the avowed objects of the promoters was to establish sugar refineries in these islands, where, with cheaper labor and a nearer field, it was believed refining could be done much more profitably than here.

Wall Street discussed the new company freely, and at one time it was hinted that the company might be a scheme on the part of the Trust to consolidate the independent companies, now warring upon the Trust, in order, later, to buy consolidated properties outright. The case of the old Union Tobacco Company, which was formed to crystallize the opposition to the Tobacco Trust, and which later was sold out, was cited as a case in point where a like method as that suggested was applied.

John D. Spreckels of California is at the Waldorf-Astoria. "The only Colonial Sugar Company I know of," he said, "is in the Fiji Islands. It may be that another is being formed in this country, but I know nothing of it. We are in the sugar business in the West, and have nothing to do with a trust there or elsewhere."

FOREIGNER BUYS YACHT LASCA.

James S. Watson Transfers Her to Dr. Walter von Bruening.

The schooner yacht Lasca is the third American vessel of that type that has been sold within two years to a foreign yachtsman. The new owner of the Lasca is Dr. Walter von Bruening of Berlin. The sale was consummated by Boiling & Lowe of London, through their New York agents. The Lasca is being fitted out at Tebo's basin, South Brooklyn, and Capt. Shelldrake, her old skipper, will pilot her across the ocean and deliver her to Dr. von Bruening.

The Lasca was built at Piepgras's yard, at City Island, from designs by A. Cary Smith, in 1892. She is a steel centreboard craft, 119 feet over all, 89 feet 9 inches on the water line, 23 feet beam, and 10 feet 8 inches draught. She won the Goelet Cup for schooners in 1893, and made several cruises abroad. She was built for Mr. John E. Brooks, who sold her to Mr. James S. Watson in 1896, who in turn transferred the title several days ago to the present owner.

LOUIS A. GOURDAIN GUILTY.

Calls Many Witnesses and Pleads Himself, but Is Convicted.

Louis A. Gourdain, real estate agent and banker, of 1 Madison Square, who was arrested by Captain Price on Nov. 1 for promising impossible profits to clients, made his appearance as a lawyer yesterday before Justice McKeon in the Court of Special Sessions in his own behalf. He met with such poor success that he was convicted of a violation of Section 903 of the Penal Code, which makes it a misdemeanor to conduct banking without reporting to the Superintendent of Banks. He was sentenced to a year in the penitentiary.

Lawyer Philip M. Goodheart was engaged to appear for the defendant, but at the commencement of the trial Gourdain told him that he must not interfere in the case. His list of witnesses included over two hundred, only three of whom appeared. Among those called were the editors of all the New York daily papers, Senator Thomas C. Platt, "Kid" Lavigne, and James J. Corbett. Gourdain was so discouraged with the poor attendance of his witnesses that he refused to call the three who did appear. He submitted a plea of not guilty.

Lawyer Goodheart applied for a new trial, on the ground that, as his client had been in the banking business since 1881, the section under which he was convicted does not apply to him.

Gourdain was formerly a resident of New Orleans. He attributed his father's death, which occurred in 1873, to the President of the Louisiana State Lottery, and he bought a newspaper and started a violent attack on the lottery, which, it is said, was instrumental in driving it from the State.

TWO SCHOOLBOYS STABBED.

Companion Accidentally Wounds One —Other Hurt in Pupils' Row.

Two schoolboys were taken to Gouverneur Hospital yesterday to be treated for stab wounds. One of the victims, Louis Jones, ten years old, of 81 Ludlow Street, was seated next to Louis Lambert, also ten, of 229 Monroe Street, during a drawing lesson in Grammar School No. 31, at 196 Monroe Street. Lambert tried to snatch a penknife from Jones and was accidentally stabbed in the side.

Patrolman Dillman walked with Jones to the hospital, where Dr. Kerrison found that the wound was a slight one. Lambert was taken to Essex Market Police Court and committed to the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children pending further inquiries.

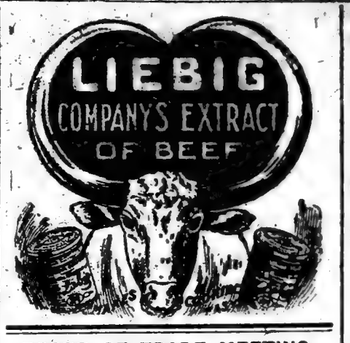
The second victim was Louis Feinstein, thirteen years old, of 414 Cherry Street, and a pupil of Grammar School No. 12, on Madison Street. He was stabbed in the back. Morris Rosenzweig, ten years old, of 347 Madison Street, and a pupil in the same school, is the alleged assailant. The stabbing occurred on Madison Street during the noon recess.

Miss Catherine Bevire, Principal of the school, says that there has been fighting for some time among the boys living in Cherry Street and those in Madison Street. One of the usual affrays occurred yesterday, and while it was in progress a stone struck Rosenzweig. It is alleged that he rushed at Feinstein, supposing he had thrown it, and stabbed him. Feinstein told his teacher about his injury, and the Principal sent for an ambulance. The surgeon found that the wound was sufficiently serious to require attention at the hospital, and took him there.

Rosenzweig was arraigned in Essex Market Court, where, in default of $500 bail, he was committed to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for further examination to-morrow.

Greenwood Athletic Club to Build.

The Greenwood Athletic Club of South Brooklyn, which now holds its weekly diversions in the old car house of the Fort Hamilton Railroad, has decided to build what the owners declare will be the largest "fighting arena" in the world. Its present building covers two city lots. That land and two adjoining lots will be used for the site of the new clubhouse.



BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.

New Post Office Here and Passage of Currency Bill Urged.

At the meeting yesterday of the Board of Trade and Transportation a resolution offered by the Committee on City Affairs, which urged on Congress the necessity for a new New York Post Office, increased appropriations for an adequately increased force of employes, and the need of a more complete system to expedite the delivery of foreign mail was adopted.

This resolution from the Committee on Finance was adopted:

That we ask the Congress of the United States to enact a law establishing the gold dollar as a standard and measure of value, and to that end we urge the passage of the bill now before the House of Representatives or one on substantially the same lines.

On motion of Henry W. Peabody it was voted to give special consideration to the Frye-Payne Shipping and Subsidy bill now before Congress.

These resolutions, offered by F. B. Thurber, were passed:

That, when this country is seeking wider markets, and increased facilities of communication are desirable, it is an anomaly that the military power of the United States should be exerted to prevent the Commercial Cable Company from landing, at its own expense, a cable in Cuba, and giving American manufacturers and merchants the benefits of competition in cable communication.

That the President of this board appoint a special committee of five members to examine and report to the next meeting of this board the facts bearing upon this action.

In regard to the changes in classification of merchandise by the Classification Committee of the Trunk Line Association, it was, on motion of G. Waldo Smith, resolved that such changes should not be made without public announcement. The subject was referred to the Committee on Railway Transportation, with power.

NOW MRS. HERBERT N. CURTIS.

Her Divorced Husband Once Sued the Bridegroom for Damages.

Herbert N. Curtis of Curtis & Dean, agents of the General Electric Company, and Mrs. Minnie Burchard Morehouse, who obtained a divorce from her husband, Joseph N. Morehouse, in 1898, were married quietly in this city on Monday.

During the suit for divorce, which was brought in Connecticut, Mr. Morehouse brought an unsuccessful counter-suit, naming Mr. Curtis as co-respondent, and later sued Mr. Curtis for $50,000 damages for alienating his wife's affections, losing this suit as well.

FOUND GUILTY IN TEST CASE.

Neuhaus Is Convicted of Illegal Voting Under Court's Charge.

Under an agreement between the Special Deputy Attorney General, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Hummel, counsel for the thirty men charged with illegal voting from the Municipal Lodging House, there was no summing up in the case of Gustav Neuhaus, who was put on trial Tuesday, when the case came up yesterday.

Justice Werner said that he had taken a different view of the legal aspect of the case from another co-ordinate Justice of the Supreme Court, and for the purpose of determining the matter it had been agreed to take an appeal to the Appellate Division.

He therefore instructed the jury that the opinion of the Court was that any such contract described by the defense did not give a legal right to him to vote. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty under the Judge's charge, and the case will be taken to the Appellate Division at once for a ruling.

EX-BANK OFFICERS CLEARED.

Macnaughtan Indictments Dismissed—Complainants Withdraw Charges.

Judge Thomas, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, granted an order in effect dismissing the indictments for conspiracy and violation of the National banking law against James Macnaughtan, ex-President of the Tradesmen's National Bank, and his brother, Allan Macnaughtan, ex-President of the Wool Exchange, and formerly a Director of the bank. These indictments had been pending since the adjournment of the Federal Grand Jury last March.

In dismissing the cases, Judge Thomas acted upon the suggestion of Assistant United States District Attorney Baldwin, who stated that all the officers and Directors of the bank, who were complaining witnesses in the proceedings, and upon whose testimony the indictments had been found, had petitioned the United States District Attorney to have the indictments dismissed, as they were now satisfied that there was no intent on the part of the defendants to defraud the bank. In view of this the Assistant District Attorney said he would be unable to secure a conviction of the defendants if they were brought to trial.

The charges that led to the indictment of ing Macnaughtans developed in the course of proceedings last January before Referee Royal S. Crane in their petitions in bankruptcy. The brothers were arrested on Jan. 13 during a session of the bankruptcy proceedings. The complaints were made by David H. Bates, the new President of the Tradesmen's National Bank.

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A Department of Prints Established—The List of Gifts.

At the meeting of the Trustees of the New York Public Library yesterday afternoon a new department was established and two gifts were announced.

The new department is to be called the Department of Prints, and it is hoped that it will grow into a collection covering the entire range of the graphic arts. This step has been for some months under consideration, and an extract from a recent report made by Dr. Billings, the Librarian, to the Executive Committee, refers to it as follows:

"The library now has only a small collection of separate prints, and few of these have any special value, but it has a large collection of extra-illustrated books, which contain some valuable specimens; and there is a considerable demand by students and writers for engraved portraits, of which we have a fairly good collection, derived from the Lenox, Tilden, Emmet, Ford, and other collections in the library, which, however, are not at present readily accessible, because of want of a catalogue.

"A department of prints, using the term in its broadest sense, is now well recognized as a necessity in a large public library, and a formal announcement at the present time that it is the purpose of the New York Public Library to establish such a department at once, will, in my opinion, not only bring in some valuable gifts to this department, but will decidedly increase the general interest in and popular feeling in favor of the library."

After the passage of resolutions sanctioning the new department, Samuel P. Avery presented to the library, on behalf of his friend John Durand, the complete collection of the engraved works of Asher B. Durand, numbering over three hundred pieces, with a printed catalogue. This collection is well known and is of exceptional value.

The other gift consisted of a collection of autographs, letters, portraits, and private documents of distinguished Americans made by the late Lieutenant Commander T. B. M. Mason and his father. The collection is contained in twenty-three large volumes.

Trained Nurses Give a Reception.

A reception was given yesterday by the Metropolitan Trained Nurses' Club at its headquarters, 104 and 106 West Forty-first Street. The reception was held to mark the sixth anniversary of the club. There was music throughout the afternoon. The club has provided a general meeting place for its members, and a home for many of them. There are twenty-seven now resident at the clubhouse. There is a great demand for rooms, and Mrs. M. H. Willard, the President, is planning for a larger clubhouse.

EXPLAINS ASTORIA GRANT

State Land Board Justifies Its Action to Gov. Roosevelt.

GOVERNOR ASKED INFORMATION

Board Points Out that the City Never Interfered in Previous Grants, Some of Which Are Recent.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—The State Land Board at its meeting this afternoon received a letter from Gov. Roosevelt on the Astoria Gas Company's grant, which was read and placed on file. It is as follows:

Gentlemen: The inclosed letter from John Whalen, Esq., Corporation Counsel of the City of New York, explains itself.

I should like information as to the grants of land under water made since the Greater New York charter went into effect and of some of those made before. I would like to know the prices paid and the conditions of each grant.

I should like to know whether information about these various grants was furnished to the city authorities, and what protests, if any, were made in reference to them. This is the first time the Corporation Counsel has written me a letter about any one, and I should like to know in what respect, if at all, the present grant differs from the former ones, so as to account for the unusual action on his part.

I should like information as to the original cost of the property of the Astoria Gas Company on the adjacent upland, and the amounts for which we have disposed of other similar property. Have the riparian rights on either side of the proposed grant been disposed of, and if so at what price?

In short, I would like complete information to show whether or not the grant now given the Astoria Gas Company is made under conditions more or less favorable than those granted other parties, and especially if the amount asked is in any proportion greater or less, and whether or not the city authorities have ever before taken the action they now take. Is or is not this grant carrying out the immemorial policy of the board in all grants?

I want all information that will enable me to look into the matter. We must carefully guard the State and city's interests, and to do so it is equally necessary to refuse any improper grant to a given corporation, and on the other hand to refuse to be influenced on behalf of some rival corporation against a legitimate and proper grant. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Attorney General Davies, Controller Morgan, and Secretary of State McDonough were appointed as a committee to furnish the Governor with the information sought for in his communication.

Before the Land Board adjourned it had practically arranged its reply to the Governor. The reply shows that the New York City officials have never before made any objections to a grant by the board, although several important ones have been made. Only a few months ago a grant of 250 acres of land under water immediately adjacent to the Astoria grant was made for $50 an acre, and with no restrictions as to the use it is to be put to. The price to the Astoria Company was $250 an acre, and it was stipulated that it was for a specific purpose, and a time limit was set for the carrying out of that purpose. About the same time as the Steinway grant was made the Rockaway Beach Improvement Company was given a large tract of land under water for which it was to pay $50 per acre.

The board calls attention to the fact that the land under water granted to the Astoria Company was directly adjacent to their land above water, and that therefore it could not be given or sold to any other persons. In addition to this, the company is paying the State, taking into consideration the improvements to be made, a sum per acre equal to that paid for unimproved land out of water and adjoining that granted.

Papers in Injunction Suit Ready.

The complaint in the suit by the City of New York against Timothy L. Woodruff and other State officials to prevent the turning over of certain lands to the Astoria Gas, Light, Heat and Power Company, which was verified by the Corporation Counsel prior to his departure from the city, was printed yesterday and sent to Acting Corporation Counsel Connoly. It will be served on Mr. Woodruff and the other State officials to-morrow. The text of the complaint has already been published. Meantime Gov. Roosevelt has promised to take no official action until the courts have passed upon the matter.

A GENERAL TUNNEL BILL.

Likely that One Will Be Introduced to Cover the Astoria Case.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—The Astoria grant by the State Land Commissioners, and the announced intention of the company to remove its gas works from the populous precincts of Manhattan to Astoria, transmitting current and gas through a tunnel under the East River, has given rise to a question whether there will be special legislation granting the right to bore and construct a tunnel from Long Island under the East River to Manhattan Island or Bronx Borough.

It is understood now that a general bill covering all tunnels of like character to that which the Astoria Gas Company seeks will be introduced in the Legislature at an early day. Such a statute will permit any regularly incorporated company to go to the court or proper municipal officers or body and secure the needed authority.

FATAL EXPLOSION AND FIRE.

Woman Killed in Tenement—Cleaner Held for Storing Naphtha.

Mrs. Josephine Rauscher, janitress of a tenement house at 65 First Avenue, was killed yesterday about noon by an explosion of naphtha, which was kept in the basement of the house. She was going into the basement with a lighted lamp in her hand, and it is supposed the flame of the lamp ignited the gases. A fire followed the explosion, and when it was extinguished the woman's body was found at the foot of the steps.

Jacob Marsilius, a dyer and cleaner, who keeps an establishment in the building, was arrested and charged with homicide. It is claimed that he kept naphtha for cleaning purposes in the basement, and that he did not have a license to store it there. He was arraigned in the Yorkville court and held for examination. The explosion and fire caused considerable excitement among the tenants of the house, but the flames were extinguished in twenty minutes and did not get beyond the basement.

TAKES HIS THIRD WIFE AT 84.

Yonkers Editor Will Marry This Evening His Housekeeper.

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The announcement of the wedding of John W. Oliver, editor of The Yonkers Statesman, which is to take place to-morrow evening at his home, Rose cottage, was a surprise to his friends, who thought that, as he is eighty-four years of age, he was out of the matrimonial field. The bride-elect is Mrs. Maria Dubois, a handsome widow of forty-eight years, whose home is in Kingston, N. Y.

Mr. Oliver's second wife died a couple of years ago, and on the recommendation of her pastor, the Rev. F. W. Davenport, Mrs. Dubois became Mr. Oliver's housekeeper.

Mr. Oliver was born in Baltimore, and in his twelfth year was bound out by the Orphan's Court to Benjamin Edes to learn the printing trade. He arrived in New York on May 15, 1835, with 6 cents in his pocket. In less than two years he was running his own printing office. In 1840 he conceived the idea of the cylinder printing press, and sought out Col. Richard M. Hoe. Mr. Oliver was the originator of the Sons of Temperance, and had for one of his supporters Horace Greeley.

Marine Hospital Doctors Sail.

Five doctors of the Marine Hospital Service yesterday sailed for Europe on the steamship St. Louis. They are the first of a number to go abroad to take stations at American Consulates in European ports in accordance with the new plan by which all vessels leaving for American ports must have a bill of health indorsed by them. They are Drs. G. M. Corput, S. B. Grubbs, W. C. Hobdy, G. M. Magruder, and E. K. Sprague. Ten more doctors will shortly follow them.

Cattle Club Starts Building Fund.

At the American Guernsey Cattle Club's twenty-fifth annual meeting held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, a building fund was started from a surplus in the treasury. Secretary William H. Caldwell reported the club in a prosperous condition, with 140 members. There are between 700 and 800 Guernsey cattle breeders in the United States now who register their cattle, and it is estimated that they own 12,000 head of Guernseys. James M. Codman of Brookline, Mass., was re-elected President.

LEGAL NOTES.

LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS.—A suit brought by Willy Loeb against William J. Ruben and others to recover $4,000 from them, as Directors of the J. J. Ruben Company, because of their failure to file an annual report during the time this indebtedness was contracted by that corporation, was on trial yesterday in the Trial Term of the Supreme Court. Justice Freedman granted a motion for the dismissal of the complaint, holding that the recovery sought was in the nature of a penalty created by the Legislature, which had ample authority to wipe out such penalty. By Section 15 of Chapter 345 of the Laws of 1890 the Legislature had repealed the law making Directors liable under such circumstances, and that repeal affected all actions now pending or which might hereafter be brought, there being now no law in existence which gave any creditor the right to enforce a penalty against Directors of corporations for failure to file an annual report. The very large number of similar actions now pending against Directors are affected by this decision.

SUBSTITUTION OF INDEMNITOR IN ACTION AGAINST SHERIFF.—The Court of Appeals recently affirmed the judgment of the First Appellate Division, which reversed an order of the Special Term granting a motion made by Sheriff Thomas J. Dunn to substitute the National Surety Company in his place as defendant, in an action brought against him by Lazarus Levy for the conversion of personal property and for consequential damages. The Court holds, by Judge Haight, that the mandatory provision of Section 1423 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as amended in 1887, requiring the Court, upon the application of the Sheriff, when sued for the recovery of chattels levied upon, to substitute the Sheriff's indemnitor as defendant in the action, is in contravention of the provision of the Constitution prohibiting the taking of private property without due process of law, in so far as it requires such substitution in opposition to the wishes of the plaintiff.

DISEASE CAUSED BY DEFECTIVE SEWER.—Margaret Hughes, in her suit as administratrix against the City of Auburn for damages for the death of her daughter, Ellen, who died in May, 1892, claimed that this daughter's illness and death resulted from disease caused by a defective and insufficient sewer, which in times of heavy rain overflowed into the cellar of the house where she resided. It appeared that the sewer complained of was a dry stone sewer which was caused to be built by the city in 1881 across a private lot, and which was subsequently made use of as part of the general system for draining a portion of the city. The Court of Appeals recently reversed an order of the Fourth Appellate Division, which sustained the plaintiff's exceptions to the direction of a verdict for the defendant, and which granted a new trial. Judge O'Brien, in his opinion, which is concurred in by all the Judges except Gray and Bartlett, who dissent, holds that the statute which permits actions for damages by reason of death caused by the wrongful act, neglect, or default of another, has no application in such a case, and that no action against a municipality can be maintained by an individual for damages from sickness caused by the neglect of public officers to observe sanitary laws.

JOHN HAMILTON'S WILL UPHELD.—The will of John Hamilton, made about six months before his death, last July, in which, although he left a widow and sister, he gave all his property to Mrs. Mary Gibson, was admitted to probate by Surrogate Varnum yesterday. Mr. Hamilton was about forty-nine years old when he died, and had been married twenty-four years. He had been estranged from his sister about twenty years. His main property was an equity of about $8,000 in a tenement house in West Thirty-sixth Street. He and his wife became acquainted with Mrs. Gibson about five years before his death. The relations between himself and his wife had not been at all cordial for some years, and in 1898 she commenced an action against him for separation, alleging that for three years he had treated her with extreme cruelty and neglect. He never afterward lived with her. In July, 1899, the decedent, who had before that been strong and vigorous, had an attack of pneumonia, which developed into consumption. A few days after the making of the will Mrs. Gibson retired from her position as saleswoman in a mercantile establishment, and went to live in Hamilton's flat as his nurse, as she claims. Surrogate Varnum said, in his opinion, that the only question was whether the court would be justified, on the evidence, to say that the paper represented the free and untrammeled will of the decedent, or the result of undue influence exercised upon him. The will was such as might reasonably be considered unnatural and unjust, and it might also be held that the beneficiary and the attorney, Mr. Jeroloman, who was named as executor, stood in the position of quasi-beneficial relationship to the testator; and hence that the burden of proof was shifted upon them to give some reasonable explanation of its unnatural character. The Court holds that sufficient evidence was given on these points to sustain the will. In reference to the disinheritance of the decedent's next of kin, the Surrogate says: "Such action seems to violate every principle of the natural law and of common decency, and especially so when the husband substitutes another woman as the object of his testamentary bounty. We all, however, in our own experience, have seen many cases of mean, miserly, parsimonious, neglectful, and perhaps cruel of those of their own family and household, who expend the money which should be applied to the support and maintenance of the natural objects of their bounty, either in ostentatious charitable bequests, or, more frequently, in reckless extravagance, dissipation, gambling, or illicit relations. And yet, much as such actions may meet with our disapproval and censure, no question arises in our minds of the right or power of any one to interfere and check them, for we all recognize the fact that a man has an absolute legal right to do as he will with his own property, so long as there is no actual violation of the civil or criminal law." The Surrogate holds that a man has the same right to dispose of his property by will as he has to distribute it during his lifetime.

BOY MURDERER GETS LIFE TERM.

Irving Shaw Sentenced at Saratoga for Killing a Playmate.

SARATOGA, Dec. 13.—Irving Shaw, fourteen years old, of Providence, Saratoga County, was to-day convicted of murdering his playmate, Jesse Blanche, at Providence last October.

Justice Stover sentenced young Shaw to life imprisonment at Dannemora Prison. He is believed to be the youngest life prisoner in the State.

MONUMENT FOR BILL ANTHONY.

Richard Croker Will Pay for Granite Block on Sailor's Grave.

NYACK, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Richard Croker, before sailing for Europe, offered to pay for a monument to be erected in Evergreens Cemetery to the memory of "Bill" Anthony, the Maine hero, who recently committed suicide. The order for the monument has been given to C. M. Travis of Nyack, who will have it ready by Feb. 1. The monument will be a rough granite block, with a scroll on its face bearing the following inscription:

The Nation's Hero.
SERGT. WILLIAM ANTHONY.
Died Nov. 24, 1899.
Aged 48 years.
I have to report, Sir, that the ship has been blown up and is sinking.

JUDGE THOMAS ON McCULLAGH.

State Official's Charges of False Naturalization to be Investigated by United States Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury for the criminal branch of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York was sworn in yesterday. Judge Thomas, who is to preside over the sessions of the court, called the attention of the jury to a statement made some time ago by Superintendent of Municipal Elections John McCullagh, in which the Superintendent said:

"I have secured absolute evidence of the falsity of hundreds of naturalization papers issued in the United States courts of this city lately."

"This statement made by a State officer," said Judge Thomas, "is either true or false and I want you to inquire carefully into it and take such action as the facts presented warrant. At a recent term of the United States Criminal Court of the Eastern District—which is in Brooklyn—I made a similar earnest presentment to the Grand Jury, and after a session, extending from Nov. 10 to December, but four indictments were found, and one of these was against a man who in applying for his papers gave the family name of Rose, by which he was known in the community where he resided.

"From this investigation and its meagre results it would seem that the fraudulent naturalization cases mentioned by Superintendent McCullagh in the published statement do not exist in the Eastern District and must, if true, have taken place in this, the Southern District.

"If, after giving the matter your most careful attention you find that the statement about the granting of hundreds of fraudulent papers to be untrue, then it is your duty to take such steps as will let the unfounded aspersion of fraud rest on the shoulders of the State officer who made it."

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS

The Maryland Casualty Company has applied for admission to Nebraska.

The National Assurance Company of Ireland has been admitted to Maryland.

Bingham & Douglass have been appointed agents of the Grand Rapids Fire Insurance Company.

The Executive Committee of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters will hold its monthly meeting to-morrow.

At the thirty-ninth annual election of the Germania Life Insurance Company, yesterday, the following Directors were chosen: Henry A. Caesar, Cornelius Doremus, Hugo Schumann, and Karl Wesendonck. Ernst Pfarrius, Albert Roenne, and Paul Goepel were elected Inspectors of the next annual election, and William Sturzberg, Louis F. Dommerich, and Fritz Achelis were elected alternates.

Local fire insurance offices yesterday reported an increase in the number of insurance lines on cotton, which are being placed, including some new business as well as a considerable number of renewals. Very few lines on non-fibre goods, however, are being offered, because of the present movement of goods directly from the mills to consumers owing to the pressure of orders, which tendency has materially reduced the aggregate contents of non-fibre storage warehouses.

Negotiations for the reinsurance of a large part of the business of several fire insurance companies are now in progress because of the exceptionally heavy fire losses of the present year. It is authoritatively stated that one of the largest companies will show a decrease in its surplus on Jan. 1 in excess of $500,000. The Insurance Press in its issue yesterday set forth that "it is believed that one or two of the smaller foreign companies will reinsure and close their United States branches within a very short time. Private advices from the other side are to the effect that one company in particular has determined to withdraw." Inquiries in a large proportion of the foreign offices did not disclose any apparent basis for this statement.

SUGAR MAY DRIVE OUT COTTON.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 13.—Capt. D. Purse, President of the Savannah Board Trade, who with others has been here for eral days investigating the sugar indus- with the view of showing the people of uthern Georgia and Northern Florida great benefit to be gained by abandon- cotton and raising sugar, made public terday the analysis by Prof. William C. bbe of the Louisiana Experimental Sta- n of Georgia sugar samples submitted to m.

rof. Stubbs's report is important, as it ws the Georgia cane to be of a very high ality, and capable of producing a large centage of commercial sugar. This is the t time the Georgia product has ever en put to a thorough test, as heretofore farmers there have been content to ke molasses of their cane, and had no a that they could successfully make sal- e sugar.

he figures submitted by Prof. Stubbs are markable. Up to very recently no one posed that sugar raising was feasible in rgia. With this analysis as a base to rk on there is now every reason to be- e that Georgia and Florida may soon ndon cotton as their staple crop and e sugar instead.

PREDICTS BRYAN'S DEFEAT.

I am here solely on legal business," re- rked Joseph J. Willett of Alabama to a ms reporter at the Holland House yes- day.

When last in New York Mr. Willett had arge of the Augustus Van Wyck Presi- ntial boom.

It looks very much like Bryan to-day," continued, "but this is a peculiar coun- and there is no telling what may hap- n. Six months constitute a long period nadays.

What is the use of nominating Bryan, yway? He is certain to meet a crushing eat. His best friends concede that. Down the Southern States the politicians are ch Bryan because the political machines nt him nominated. But they will call n asi's and say, 'He can't be elected.'

In the South, however, the people are paying much attention to politics. They all attending to business, and everybody o cries 'Calamity!' is regarded as an ck.

Look at Anniston, where I live. It has reased in population from 1,500 to 20,000 fteen years, and is still growing. Iron ls and cotton factories are springing up erywhere. Iron is selling for $20 a ton, cotton fetches 7½ cents per pound on wagon, while all over the country there a scramble for iron.

Bryan may be nominated, but he will et with a crushing defeat."

GOLD PIECES FOR SERVANTS.

t least eight of the members of the man Housewives' Society, and all who e been guests at their homes during the t two years, believe that they have ved the question of "How to keep a vant." Yesterday, at the meeting of eir society, each of the eight produced a vant who had been in her employ for years. The servants had been placed their situations by the society, and the men who filed in demurely at the opening the meeting, at the Café Logeling, 121 st Fifty-ninth Street, showed no signs of nervousness that sometimes prompts ook to leave one's employ just when a st of guests has been invited to dinner. tead, they looked contented, and all of m were radiant when Samuel Sanders, Secretary of the society, handed to h a twenty-dollar gold piece, as a testi- nial of merit from the society.

t is the rule of the society to thus reward vants who remain for two years or more the place the society procures for them. e fortunate ones yesterday were Therese auber, employed by Mrs. H. A. Caesar Stapleton, S. I.; Georgine Lehner, em- yed by Mrs. Alexander Homberger; Mrs. gust Brueckner, employed by Mrs. H. M. smith; Lizzie Neenan, employed by Mrs. Hofheimer; Bertha Hane, a cook with s. H. Schaeffer of Brooklyn; Annie Knak, cook with Mrs. H. Hartmann of East nge, N. J., and Katie Giegerich and na Muller, both employed by Mrs. F. M. eger of Summit, N. J.

he society will, after Jan. 1, open a oking school at 151 East Fifty-ninth reet, where each evening between 8 and o'clock the servant members may study oking.

WOMAN'S HOTEL PROJECT.

The preliminary committee in charge of e project for a woman's hotel, to be ected for the patronage of business, pro- ssional, and other women able to pay a fficiently high rate to make such an in- itution profitable, has announced that 0,000 of the $300,000 of stock, which must subscribed before incorporation is under- ken, has already been taken up. Unless remaining $100,000 is subscribed before n. I it will be necessary to abandon the oject, as the older subscribers will be re- ased from their obligations at that time. The financial plan contemplates the cost building and site at $800,000. Half of this ount is to be raised by sale of stock and e remainder by mortgage. It is expected e enterprise will yield an annual dividend stock of 5 per cent.

mong those who have already subscribed the stock are Mrs. John Claflin, Charles Fairchild, Richard Watson Gilder, Mrs. ri R. Morton, John D. Rockefeller, Mrs. liot F. Shepard, J. Kennedy Tod, and lliam C. Schermerhorn.

BRAVE RESCUE OF A WOMAN.

On the recommendation of Fire Chief oker yesterday the name of Capt. Will- m H. Nash, foreman of Engine Company o. 71 was inscribed on the roll of merit r the rescue of human life at personal risk a fire. The act was performed several ys ago at a fire at 3,174 Park Avenue. In scribing the feat of the fire officer, Bat- lion Chief Short states in his report:

"So rapidly did the fire spread that when ngine Company No. 71, which is situated xt door, reached the scene, the flames re coming out of the front door and win- ws. The hallway was heavily charged th heat and smoke.

"Learning that Mrs. Bella Hopstine, ed forty-five years, was a prisoner in the ar hallway, Foreman Nash crawled on his nds and knees through the smoke and me to the rear part of the building, where found the woman unconscious. Foreman sh carried her to the sidewalk in safety. It is seldom that the name of a company mmander is placed on the roll of merit for very at personal risk.

LOYAL LEGION DINNER.

The regular December meeting of the ilitary Order of the Loyal Legion was held st night at Delmonico's. The meeting as also the occasion of the annual dinner. overs were laid for 400, and there were no acant chairs. The Senior Vice Commander the order, Gen. Henry L. Burnett, pre- ded. With him at the table of honor were ar Admiral Farquhar and Gen. Hamilton Hawkins. There were no set speeches.

Prior to the dinner a business meeting was eld, at which the matter of chief impor- nce to come up was the proposed amend- ent to the constitution of the order permit- ng others besides the eldest sons of the eterans of the civil war to belong to the ssociation.

This amendment was referred back to the ommittee for further consideration with nstructions to send a blank slip to each ember for an individual vote on the ques- on. The general opinion, it was said, was ot favorable to the admission of other han the eldest son in the family. Thirteen ew members were admitted.

GREAT NORTHERN BUYS STOCK.

Special to The New York Times.

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 13.—A deal was ompleted in New York to-day by which the reat Northern Railroad system acquires a ajority of the stock of the St. Paul and uluth Railroad. The Great Northern now ontrols the Eastern Minnesota, which is a ompetitor of the St. Paul and Duluth, with parallel track, and the purchase of the uluth Road is to do away with competi- on and to acquire the valuable Duluth ter- inals of the road, which include the best t the head of the lakes.

The St. Paul and Duluth is one of the est-paying railroads in the Northwest. The ilwaukee Road has a line to Duluth from t. Paul surveyed, and as it has had traffic ntations with the Duluth Road it is very robable that it will build the projected nnections.

BASEBALL MAGNATES' SESSION.

The National Baseball League magnates continued in session yesterday afternoon and last night at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. It is believed that the Board of Directors will recommend that the Brooklyn-Baltimore syndicate be fined $1,500 for taking Shortstop Wrigley away from the New York team. The board spent several hours yesterday considering the matter.

The Boston Club asked that the Brooklyn and Louisville management be punished for transferring a game from Louisville without first getting consent of the other League magnates.

It was said the magnates had given up all hope of lopping off four clubs from the League, but that the season would open with ten clubs in harness. Cleveland and Louisville are the two clubs which it is said would be dropped.

ATHLETES TO GO TO EUROPE.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—It was learned to-night that the Athletic Association of the University of Pennsylvania has definitely decided to send the Pennsylvania track team to Europe next year to take part in the Olympian games to be held at Paris during the exposition.

These games are expected to be held during June, and it is the intention to have the Pennsylvania athletes take part in the English sports in London, where the Americans will come in competition with the athletes of Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

There is a possibility that Pennsylvania may also send a crew to compete in the world's regatta, which is to be held during the Summer in the French capital. If a crew be sent, it will be necessary to train another crew for the race with Cornell and Columbia.

Naval Reserves Lose Hockey Game.

The league team of the Skating Club of Brooklyn defeated the First Naval Battalion of Manhattan last night in a game of hockey at the Clermont Avenue Ice Skating Rink, Brooklyn. The score was 6 goals to 1.

Fight Over British Flag Cost $50.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 13.—Edward Brown settled his case of assault preferred by Robert A. Fosdick to-day in the Criminal Court of Common Pleas, by paying a fine of $50, which the Stamford City Court imposed at a previous trial. On July 4 Brown and others went to Mr. Fosdick's residence at Shippan Point and demanded that he pull down a British flag which was floating from his house. Mr. Fosdick refused to lower it and Mr. Brown drew a revolver.

ANTI-TRUST CONFERENCE.

Call Issued for a Meeting in Chicago Feb. 12, 1900.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—The Executive Committee of the Anti-Trust Conference decided last night to hold an anti-trust meeting in this city Feb. 12.

The call says that "unless the criminal conspiracies in restraint of trade, commonly known as trusts, which so alarmingly characterize the present times, are overthrown, there will be established in free America a moneyed oligarchy on the one hand and a serfdom of the masses of the people on the other."

Over 500 names are signed to the call, including those of Frank S. Monnett, Attorney General, Columbus, Ohio; Charles A. Towne, Duluth; Alexander Delmar, New York; Senator R. F. Pettigrew, South Dakota; James B. Weaver, Colfax, Iowa; William A. Poynter, Lincoln, Neb.; Senator William E. Mason, Illinois; Ignatius Donnelly, Minneapolis; Horace Boies, Iowa; William Sulzer, New York; Stephen Lockwood, Buffalo; Willis J. Abbot, Chicago; John Sherman Crosby, New York; Samuel M. Jones, Mayor of Toledo, and Gen. A. J. Warner, Marietta, Ohio.

ANTI-TRUST CLUBS FORMING.

Democratic Committee Organizing Traveling Men to Form a League.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—The Democratic National Executive Committee is organizing traveling men into anti-trust clubs. These clubs will be centralized into an organization called the Democratic Traveling Men's Anti-Trust League.

C. M. C. Peters of New Carlisle, Ind., is now organizing clubs in that State, and if he secures good results similar bodies will be formed in wholesale and manufacturing centres all over the country.

Prominent Lawyers for Burns.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Edgar Burns, who murdered Postmaster Fellows of Scarsdale, was rearraigned in the Supreme Court to-day to plead to the indictment found against him. The Court caused a surprise by assigning as counsel for the accused ex-Judge Isaac N. Mills of Mount Vernon, Ralph E. Prime of Yonkers, and John M. Ligney of White Plains, the most prominent lawyers in the county. No date was set for the trial.

COTTON.—Speculative operations on the Cotton Exchange were very small again, with the price movement correspondingly narrow. Neither side exhibited many orders, even of the limited class. The disposition was general to await further information on the crop subject and the action of the English market before extensively changing preconceived ideas or outstanding accounts. The market opened steady in tone with prices unchanged to 2 points lower. Southern spot markets were officially reported by wire as follows: New Orleans, 7¾c; Mobile, 7 3-16c; Savannah, 7¼c; Charleston, 7¼c; Wilmington, 7¼c; Baltimore, nominal at 7 11-16c; Augusta, 7¾c; Memphis, 7¾c; St. Louis, 7 7-16c.

WOOL.—BOSTON, Dec. 13.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say to-morrow of the wool trade: "The market has continued quiet at unchanged prices. The London sales closed on Monday of this week firm at an advance over opening quotations of 5 per cent., making closing prices 20 to 25 per cent. in advance of the final quotations of the previous sales. This, of course, has resulted in still further strengthening the views of holders of domestic wool, some of whom are asking prices considerably above the ideas of manufacturers, who, as a class, are not disposed to purchase further until something more definite is known regarding the heavyweight season, and until the money market eases up. The tightness in the money market tends to curtail operations, and a quiet period is anticipated from now until after the turn of the new year. The sales of the week in Boston amounted to 6,409,000 pounds domestic and 235,000 pounds foreign, making a total of 6,664,000 pounds, against a total of 6,621,200 pounds for the previous week, and a total of 5,217,000 pounds for the corresponding week last year. Sales since Jan. 1, 1899, amount to 241,467,776 pounds, against 120,713,519 pounds last year at this time.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—There was a firmer market for wheat at the opening, early cables reporting an unexpected advance of ½d at Liverpool, with more or less rough weather in England; and some snow there. Another bullish influence was a report to the effect that Atwood exporters had bought a dozen loads of No. 2 red wheat, and that other export business might be expected. British consols were lower, and the decline was attributed to recent South African reverses. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board, afloat basis, were as follows: No. 2 red, New York, 74¾c, spot; No. 1 hard, Manitoba, 80¼c, spot; No. 1 hard, Manitoba, 80¼c, early January; No. 1 hard, Duluth, 80¼c, December, 18-20; No. 1 hard, Duluth, 81c, early January; No. 1 hard, New York, 79½c, spot; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 79½c, nominal; No. 1 Northern, New York, 78½c, spot; No. 2 Northern, Duluth, 77¼c, to arrive.

COFFEE.—The market for Brazilian coffee futures was only moderately active, after opening was easily unchanged prices on a decline of 5 points. The sales on the call were 1,000 bags, up to 12 M., 7,500 bags, and for the entire session 13,250 bags. The market closed quiet, not unchanged to 5 points lower. The general sentiment was not positive, either one way or the other; certainly not bearish, as receipts at Brazilian ports were not running up to the expectations of many, and the general statistical situation was growing bullish rather than bearish.

This company has secured all the rights and patents of Oliver L. Gardner for the manufacture of Artificial Lumber.

This material has been manufactured for a period of twelve years and is gradually taking the place of lumber for inside decorations on railroad cars and all classes of buildings.

It can be used as a substitute for plaster and laths in buildings, as it is sound proof and temperature proof, and it IS FIRE PROOF.

The economies and savings in the construction of cars and buildings, and many other things heretofore made of wood and plaster, made possible by the use of this lumber are very large.

It is manufactured from a WASTE material of which there is an unlimited supply, and consequently capable of earning large dividends, owing to its low cost of construction.

The engineers of the Guaranty Development Company, 10 Wall Street, New York, have made a full examination of the nature of this artificial lumber and the uses to which it can be put, and they report that its value as a commercial article is practically unlimited. A detailed report of this examination can be seen at their office.

PATENTS

New patents have recently been obtained, and applied for, covering a process for the manufacture of this material in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Austria, Russia, and Australia, which gives to this company an ABSOLUTE MONOPOLY.

Careful, conscientious work, which has cost over FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS in cash, has been put into this enterprise to develop it up to its present finished condition so that, after long usage, it now stands as a recognized commercial commodity by architects, builders, decorators, and manufacturers of railroad cars, steamships, and boxes, and there is positively no question regarding its practicability and future position as a substitute for wood in all its uses and decorations for inside work. The company now has orders which guarantee a continuous demand larger than it is possible to fill with the present plant.

The gradual decrease in the supply of wood in the world, and the increase in the demand for same, particularly the grade that is used for inside decorations, is a well-known fact, and consequently this substitute for wood is much more valuable as a commercial commodity, under these conditions, than any new commercial proposition has been for the past twenty years.

PLANTS

A plant is now erected (fully equipped with machinery) at Barberton, Ohio, for the manufacturing of this material.

A plant will be erected within the vicinity of New York, one in the West, and one in Canada, each with an earning capacity equal to the one at Barberton, Ohio.

FINANCIAL

THE EARNINGS FROM THE BARBERTON PLANT WILL, AFTER PAYING SIX PER CENT. INTEREST ON THE $1,500,000 OF PREFERRED STOCK ISSUED, PAY FIVE PER CENT. ON THE COMMON STOCK ISSUED; AND AFTER THE ERECTION OF THE PLANT IN THE VICINITY OF NEW YORK CITY, IN THE WEST, AND IN CANADA, THE EARNING CAPACITY OF THIS COMPANY WILL BE $1,800,000 ANNUALLY.

Applications are now in hand from prominent European bankers to organize corporations to manufacture and sell this artificial lumber in England, France, and Germany, and as the United States company own and control the foreign patents, a large percentage of the profits of the foreign companies will revert to the Artificial Lumber Company of America.

The books for subscriptions will open on the 18th day of December, and will close on the 23d day of December, 1899, at 3 P. M.

New York, October 12, 1899.
To the Holders of the
First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds OF THE PITTSBURGH & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

(DATED JULY 1, 1897):

Referring to our notice of December 14, 1899, we have to announce that holders of more than 60 per cent. in amount of the First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the Pittsburgh and Western Railway Company have deposited those bonds with us in accordance with the terms of said notice.

We have further to announce that we have made arrangements with the Reorganization Managers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company whereby, in case they issue any Plan of Reorganization of the Pittsburgh and Western Railway Company prior to December 14, 1900, they undertake to give all our depositors whose bonds shall not have been sold to them for cash, as stated in the next paragraph, an option for at least thirty days after such Plan is issued, to take par and interest in cash, or to have their bonds included in the Plan on the basis of new securities. They also agree that at the expiration of such option they will purchase from us for cash at par and accrued interest up to the time of delivery all bonds held by us in respect of which the option to take new securities shall not have been exercised, we agreeing to sell them such bonds. If no Plan shall have been issued by that date, the foregoing arrangements will continue in force thereafter until said Reorganization Managers terminate the same by notice to us.

If any holder of our receipts or certificates, rather than await such Plan, desires and shall elect to sell his bonds for cash, (thereby losing his right of election to take either cash or new securities after issuance of the Plan,) said Reorganization Managers further agree that, at any time prior to December 14, 1900, (and also thereafter until notice from them to us,) such holder may present his receipt or certificate at our office for proper annotation of such election thereon, and that, at the expiration of thirty days from the date of such annotation, he shall receive par and accrued interest in cash therefor at our office upon surrender of his receipt or certificate properly indorsed.

Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 129.90; Madrid, 27.95; Lisbon, 42; Rome, 6.60.

Spanish fours, 65¾.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Business was very flat on the Bourse to-day, owing to the news of the defeat sustained by the British troops at the hands of the Boers and on rumors of an advance in the German bank rate to-morrow. There was a sharp decline throughout, the downward movement being aided by other rumors that some English firms were in difficulties. Rio Tintos heavily relapsed. Kaffirs were flat. Three per cent. rentes, 100f 30c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 32c for checks. Spanish fours closed at 66.75.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—Prices opened steadier on the Bourse to-day owing to the report that the Bank of France would supply gold to the Argentine Republic. Weakness in all the departments followed, however, on the receipt of the news of Gen. Methuen's defeat in South Africa and rumors of the fall of Ladysmith. The market hardened toward the close. Exchange on London, 20 marks 51½ pfennigs for checks.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 13.—On the Bourse to-day prices were weak owing to the reports of the reverse to the British troops in South Africa. Spanish fours being particularly affected.

MADRID, Dec. 13.—Gold was quoted to-day at 27.50.

MARKET CONDITIONS.

A long list of speculative pools came yesterday to grief in Wall Street. Some of these were of large size, and liquidation of their accounts much disturbed the stock market.

Two pools in Sugar Trust surrendered. One was credited with holdings of a hundred thousand shares. Other crippled cliques were of slighter consequence. That which next to Sugar has had conspicuousness was in the local traction stocks. Metropolitan suffered on this account, and so did Manhattan and Brooklyn Rapid Transit. A new pool of 20,000 shares organized to protect Metropolitan was sold out abruptly by brokers who had its management in charge. Related to the Metropolitan combination there are said to be no less than three separate, distinct pools in Manhattan. None of these pools is said to be able to claim, however, any co-operation upon the part of Mr. George J. Gould. One of 30,000 shares in which Mr. Russell Sage is quoted as a one-fourth holder seemed to begin to let stock go just before the close.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit's friends made a much more aggressive stand. The real controllers of that property were not discoverable as sellers at any time yesterday—they seeming rather disposed to be quiet watchers of liquidation by other interests, and taking blocks of stock when offered at concessions. The largest selling of Brooklyn Rapid Transit seemed to come from quondam insiders who some time ago assumed extraordinary obligations in underwriting a pool, not only in Brooklyn Rapid Transit itself, but in Metropolitan and Manhattan at the same time. Gentlemen entitled to be considered responsible for contracts to the extent of a hundred shares of stock became subscribers in these pools for thousands of shares apiece. Certainly there can be nothing strange in the fact that such recklessness has to pay penalties.

In just such incidents, indeed, is involved the embarrassment which has overtaken Wall Street's market. Small men have had too large commitments. But such shake-ups as overtook most of the market yesterday can quickly eliminate this element; and the local traction stocks, as well as the industrial list, will later be all the better situated for the tests that now have to be met.

Of course, such a day as yesterday crowded Wall Street with sensational stories. Some were stupid, many were palpable fables. Free use was made of many prominent names. Some financiers of National credit were made the subjects of free-and-easy gossip. Conspicuous interests identified with the Grosebeck. This committee will from time to time meet and progress plans for proposed new Stock Exchange addition.

STOCK BROKER SUSPENDED.

The Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday suspended William M. Imbrie for one week for misuse of his telephone, as provided in Article 17, Section 8 of the Stock Exchange rules. This in effect provides that a member shall maintain connection by means of his Stock Exchange telephone with bucketshops or other such institutions. The specific charge against Mr. Imbrie is not published.

TWO PROSPEROUS RAILWAYS.

Several excellent statements of railroad earnings were put out yesterday. Louisville and Nashville for the first week in December reported an increase in earnings over the same week last year of $66,000—or more than $9,000 a day. The total figures are now $12,275,900, a gain over the same period of $98 of $1,960,300.

The complete November report of the Baltimore and Ohio shows net earnings of $1,140, as compared with $824,000 a year ago, an increase of $274,140. From July 1 to Nov. 30 the net earnings were $5,114,500, compared with $3,153,100 in 1898, a gain of $1,961,300. A statement of the expenses account shows a decrease in November over November last year of $38,500, while since July 1 the decrease, as compared with 1898, is $317,000.

IRON AND METAL TRADES.

Discussing the condition of the iron and steel trades, The Iron Age will to-day say: "Our monthly blast furnace statistics show that we entered the month with coke and anthracite furnaces producing at the rate of 289,500 tons weekly, an increase of 9,000 tons over Nov. 1. In other words, we are making now at the rate of 15,000,000 gross tons per annum. During the month reported furnace stocks increased about 10,000 tons, but on the other hand stocks in transit yards declined 6,000 tons. On Dec. 1 the independent furnaces were carrying stock of 95,000 tons, or a little over three days' consumption at its present rate.

"Under what pressure the iron industry is working is shown by the fact that in the Central West, including Pittsburg, the valley, the Wheeling district, the Chicago district, Missouri, and the Northwest there were in blast ninety-seven furnaces, producing weekly 170,346 tons of pig iron, while only 75 were out, with a capacity of 5,465, and only one of the latter is simply out for repairs. In the next three months three new furnaces are expected to begin operations, whose capacity should reach 12,000 tons weekly.

"Practically every ton of the iron which these furnaces can make during the first half of 1900 is sold. Last week a leading consumer in the Pittsburg district purchased about 40,000 tons of Bessemer pig iron, valley furnace, which closed out the entire available for the first half of 1900. It is understood that the same interest, and other large companies in the same section, have been taking large blocks of basic pig iron.

"In foundry irons the situation is somewhat different. There is some increase in sales in many of the districts, and there is no reason for believing that some contractions have been made. The conviction is general that the top notch has been reached for the present. While a number of founders have withdrawn from the market, some appear to believe in the future. We hear of one contract for 500 tons monthly delivery beginning in April, and continuing to the end of the year. We also note a sale of about 6,500 tons to an independent basic-iron pipe founder.

"In the steel market Birmingham reports a sale of 6,000 tons on private terms. From Pittsburg comes the news of sales of Bessemer and open-hearth billets and slabs to the extent of about 40,000 tons, for 1900 delivery, at $28 for the Bessemer and $41 for the open-hearth materials. It is well-known that some large requirements for billets for the first half of 1900 are still uncovered, but apparently sellers and buyers are too far apart. Lately offers for export have come in and which would net about $23 to $30, f. o. b. board, Atlantic shipping port. As we understand, however, nothing has been done.

"There has been a little more activity in the rail trade. Eastern mills have placed about 20,000 tons in lots, while the Chicago mills have closed for one lot of 20,000 tons, the same parties placing also about 10,000 tons of bridge material.

"Regarding the position of the markets in a number of finished rolling-mill products, reports are somewhat conflicting. In some quarters a revival in buying is observed; in others prices seem to be regarded as easier, while the mills are hunting for work to some extent.

"The week has been an eventful one in the metal markets, and notably so in pig iron, which declined under London realizing sales in 24 cents for futures, rallying slightly toward the close. Copper is now openly sold at 16.75 cents for lake and 16½ cents for electrolytic. Lead has become stronger, while the spelter has been somewhat erratic, with an upward tendency. Nickel is reported to have sold as low as 28 cents per unit of oxide form."

BIG HOLDERS SELLING.

The selling was not as it was on Monday, though regular commission houses, indicating general liquidation, but it was mainly in large blocks through a few houses. All sorts of rumors were current, but the room was fully convinced that one or two big ones have let go, or else that some large institution has parted with a very big block of stocks. The most pronounced weakness was in Sugar, the market for which at times was absolutely demoralized.

The most discouraging feature of the market was that the weakness was not confined to the industrials, but extended to the railroad stocks, such as St. Paul and Lehigh. It is needless to repeat the various rumors which were current, but they were of a sufficiently alarming character to create a feeling of decided nervousness in Wall Street during the last hour. In all probability the rumors were baseless, but it always is the case that in such a market we have had the most alarming rumors circulated."—Price, McCormick & Co.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Traders were once more actively engaged on the bear side in the market for outside securities yesterday, and further declines were recorded in a number of issues. Much irregularity marked the course of prices, which seemed generally working toward a lower level, and in most of the active stocks final quotations were near the lowest for the day. Recent declines in curb stock seem to have started rather extensive liquidation, and bear traders have profited by this condition to lower quotations and force out still more stock. Good buying is not lacking, but relatively few stocks show strength, and it is generally found easier to depress than to advance prices. Transactions were in larger amount than on the previous day, and distributed over a number of issues, though the bulk of the day's business was supplied by Amalgamated Copper, Bay State Gas, and one or two others of the more prominent stocks.

AMALGAMATED COPPER had good support, and, after some irregularity at the opening, held firm until just before the close, when efforts to bring about a substantial decline met with success. Final sales were made at 79¼, and this was the closing bid, showing a net loss of 1½ points. Trading in the stock amounted, probably, to 3,000 or 4,000 shares, most of which sold in the neighborhood of 79¾. Top price for the day was 80¼, at which figure the stock sold soon after the opening, and the lowest sale was that made just at the close, at 79¼.

NEW AMSTERDAM GAS, common, was erratic, selling off early in the day and then advancing very sharply, getting about half a point above the previous day's close. The advance was fairly well held, but no explanation was had of the strength which the stock displayed. It closed at 21¼ bid, the highest sale of the day having been 21⅝. No transaction was reported in the preferred stock, which was unchanged at 44 bid. Sales of the bonds were made at 95, and they remained offered at this figure. It was reported that a meeting of the directors was to be held some time during the day, and there seemed to be some hope that the meeting would be followed by some favorable announcement. Later it was reported that no meeting had been held.

ELECTRIC AXLE opened at 6¼ and on fairly active trading sold up to 7, a number of hundreds of shares changing hands at the top price, but it was not long held and later offerings of the stock forced the price down to 6⅜. A slight reaction brought the stock back to 6⅝, and it closed unchanged for the day at 6¼ bid.

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION declined on what appeared to be liquidating sales to 10, where several hundred shares changed hands. It closed at 10 bid, a net loss of half a point.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.—Among the few stocks that were not unfavorably affected was Royal Baking Powder preferred, which made a net gain of 2 points. A certain amount of stock had been offered at 93, but all this was taken at the close on Tuesday and yesterday little stock was found in the market. As far as reported, only odd lots of the stock changed hands and the bid was advanced practically without sales. It closed at 94 bid.

CONSOLIDATED RUBBER TIRE sold for the first time in a number of days. A lot of 500 shares was wanted, but little stock was found and only 100 shares changed hands. This sold at 6½, which remained bid. Demand for the stock seemed to come from insiders.

BAY STATE GAS was traded in probably to the extent of 7,000 shares. These sales were accompanied by a sharper movement than has occurred in this stock for some time. It sold down to 1¼ and was offered at the close at 1¼, showing a net loss of a quarter of a point.

KLEMINGTON COAL AND COKE was traded in to the extent of 300 shares at 26½ and 27.

NATIONAL TUBE was weak at the close. Sales of the preferred stock were made at 93½ and the common stock was offered at 42½, with little demand apparent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—Local speculative interest has again centred chiefly in the copper shares. This class of securities as a whole had a recovery to-day almost as pronounced as their decline on Tuesday. This was particularly true of the higher-priced securities, the buying of which came largely from investment sources. Montana, for example, pushed up 13 points, to 283; Tamarack, 16, to 200; Quincy, 10, to 140, and Butte, 5, to 53½. Tuesday's low prices for all of these offered tempting inducements for people with money, and they bought freely. In sympathy with this advance Parrot lifted 2 points, to 37; Utah, 1, to 30; United States, 1½, to 31½; Old Dominion, 2½, to 23¼; Centennial, 2, to 20; Arcadian, 2½, to 25; Isle Royale, 3¼, to 20¼. Unfortunately, however, these prices did not hold, and in the last hour many of the early gains were nearly wiped out.

At the Clearing House the ruling rate between banks was 6 per cent., and New York funds sold at 20 cents discount. Money on call still ruled from 6 to 7 per cent. Time money was obtainable on the highest grade of collateral from 5 to 6 per cent. On speculative securities money, when obtainable, ruled from 7 to 8 per cent. The market for mercantile paper was very quiet. Best names were nominally 6 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The stock market to-day displayed a heavy tone from the opening to the close. Prices, however, did not go off much, except for the stocks dealt in on both markets, such as the coalers, Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Northern Pacifics. Cambria Steel broke a point to 20; Electric Company of America, ½ to 13; Asphalt, ⅞ to 12; Marsden, ½ to 11¾; Tidewater Steel, ½ to 13½; Union Traction, ⅝ to 39½; United Gas, 1¼ to 155; Brooklyn Gas and Electric, 1¼ to 5; Welsbach Light, ½ to 44½. The Choctaws also were weak, no adequate support being offered. As a matter of fact, would-be buyers are handicapped by the scarcity of loanable funds.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Ex-Gov. Morton Buys an Apartment House—Several Fine Dwellings Sold—Dealings at Auction.

Contracts were signed yesterday in the deal by which ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton becomes the owner of the seven-story apartment house, known as the Lucile, at the southeast corner of One Hundred and Fourteenth Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, 118 feet on the avenue by 130 feet on the street. The sellers of this property are Felt & Livingston, and in part payment they take the two four-story dwellings 67 and 69 West Ninety-fifth Street, each 18 by 50 by 100, and the similar dwelling 151 West Ninety-seventh Street. The deal, which involves about $350,000, was negotiated by Frederick Zittel and Albert Booth Cohn.

Henry D. Winans & May have sold for the estate of Siegfried Gruner the four-story dwelling, with extension, 29 West Eighty-first Street, on a lot 25 feet front and extending through to Eighty-second Street. The brokers would not confirm or deny a report that Joseph Doelger, the brewer, is the buyer of the property.

Dr. S. J. O'Neil has bought the four-story dwelling 242 Central Park West, near Eighty-fourth Street, 20 by 100.

Jesse G. Bennett & Co. have sold for George Cubberly, for $37,000, the two dwellings 309 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, 17 by 55 by 100, and 106 Edgecombe Avenue, 17 by 80.

John F. Kirwan has resold at an advance over the price recently paid at auction, the five-story apartment house "Aldine," 358 and 360 West Fifty-first Street, 38.6 by 100.5.

Henry E. Nieser of the American Sugar Refining Company is the buyer of the residence 75 Riverside Drive.

W. W. & T. M. Hall have bought from Mrs. Josephine N. Cowperthwait the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 5 Mount Morris Park West, 20 by 85.

Frank T. Edmunds has sold, through Steel & Dickson, attorneys, to Lucas J. Donegan, for $36,000, the two five-story double flats 238 and 238 West Sixty-first Street, 50 by 90 by 100.8.

J. D. Putnam has sold the five-story apartment house 236 West One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, 35 by 100.

It is reported that the dwelling 9 East Eighty-first Street has been sold for about $45,000.

Charles Griffith Moses & Brother have sold for Maximilian Morgenthau to Leo C. Dessar two lots on Third Avenue, about 90 feet north of One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street.

Simon Fine was the broker in the sale of the northwest corner of Broome and Varick Streets, 63 by 90. The plot was bought by the Empire Cornice Works and will be improved by the erection of two seven-story flats.

WILD FLURRY IN STOCKS

Securities Tumbled and the Conditions Were Panicky.

FORTUNES MADE BY THE BEARS

American Sugar, of Which 225,000 Shares Were Traded in, Showed a Net Decline of 9 3-4 Points.

Serious as was the break in stocks on Monday last, it was insignificant as compared with the violent decline in prices yesterday all through the Stock Exchange list. For a time during the afternoon, and particularly toward the close, conditions were panicky, and the closing of the market alone stayed the enormous volume of liquidation and further declines.

It was not one particular class of stocks alone that suffered; it was practically all of them—standard railways not even excepted. Every conspicuous stock on the list fell materially. The tide of adverse speculation ran so strongly that everything before it was carried down. Stocks were sacrificed and fortunes were lost in rushes to sell, so wild that, as one broker put it, they displayed the elemental features of a fiend of insanity.

It was harvest time for the shorts. Selling short at the prices which had prevailed during the morning, or on Monday, they were able in the late afternoon to cover at such new prices that their profits must have been enormous. In fact, it is said that in the vigorous bear campaign of the last few days more money has been made by the bears than the bulls have been able to make in the last three months.

As for the contributing causes of the decline, they are not altogether easy to explain. For that matter, after the close of the market and a review of the situation, not even the hasty sellers could explain satisfactorily to themselves—other than because of the contagion of fear that had touched them—why they had sold so precipitately. That there was sound reason for some decline in prices was admitted: that there was sound reason for a small-sized panic, they say, hardly appears.

The news from South Africa of the British reverse, the consequent selling by London of American securities, and the hardening here of exchange rates to what some regarded as perilously near the gold export point, it is pointed out, were the principal factors in the market's decline. Then, once the decline assumed consequential proportions, the reaching of a large number of stop orders and the calling for more margins by brokers added to the seriousness of the situation. Call money, however, was easy all day.

The feature of the day was the trading in American Sugar and the material fall in the price of that stock. At the opening of the market there was suggestion of what might be expected in this stock when the quotation was announced at "2,500 shares from 35½ to 134." Then for a time the price held fairly steady, at one time advancing, only in the afternoon to fall again, and finally at the close to drop to 126½, a net loss for the day of 9¾ points. In the last fifteen minutes of the trading great blocks of the stock came out, and it was said the selling was in the Havemeyer interests. It was said, also, that not a little of the selling was for Standard Oil account, and that some of the interests of that concern had become so involved in certain copper stocks that, in order to hold on to these, they were forced to part with their Sugar holdings. Over 225,000 shares were traded in. Two firms sold 30,000 shares each, and another house 20,000. The weakness of the stock was primarily due to the report of the organization of a new sugar company, and to further evidences of dissension in the company's Directorate.

Tobacco stocks were conspicuously weak, as was also Tennessee Coal and Iron. St. Paul, the standard railway stock of the country, fell to the lowest figure it has reached this year; Great Northern dropped more than 7 points, while Northern Pacific common declined 1¾ points in the face of a dividend of 1 per cent. and an extra 1 per cent.

Some of the more positive declines were: Railroads—New York Central, 2¼; Atchison, 2⅞; Baltimore and Ohio preferred, 3½; Union Pacific, 2⅜; Burlington, 2⅝; Chicago and Eastern Illinois, 3⅝; St. Paul, 2⅝; Northwest, 2; Rock Island, 2¼; Omaha, 3; Big Four, 2; Great Northern, 7¾; Louisville and Nashville, 3¼; Missouri Pacific, 3¼; Southern, 2; Norfolk and Western, 2.

Coal Stocks—Central Railroad of New Jersey, 2; Lackawanna, 5⅞; Delaware and Hudson, 2; Reading first preferred, 3¼.

Local Transit Stocks—Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 1⅜; Manhattan, 1½; Metropolitan, 5¼; Third Avenue, 11¾.

Steel Stocks—American Steel and Wire, 2⅝; Colorado Fuel and Iron, 4⅝; Tennessee Coal and Iron, 8¾; Federal Steel common, 2¼; Federal Steel preferred, 2½; Republic Iron and Steel preferred, 2¼.

Industrials—American Malting preferred, 8⅝; American Smelting preferred, 5¼; American Sugar, 9⅝; American Tobacco, 5½; Consolidated Gas, 4; Continental Tobacco common, 3⅛; Continental Tobacco preferred, 7½; New York Air Brake, 8¾; People's Gas, 3½; United States Rubber, 8; United States Leather, 3¼.

All told, the dealings for the day totaled over one million shares. Of this number American Sugar stocks enjoyed the lion's share. American Tobacco came next with nearly 70,000 shares, Brooklyn Rapid Transit next with something like 52,000, and Southern Pacific next with over 40,000. In twenty-two stocks the dealings totaled over 10,000 shares each.

JUMP IN STERLING EXCHANGE.

Gold Export Rumors Not Borne Out by Investigation — The Views of Exporters.

While stock quotations were running down at panic rate yesterday afternoon talk of the slump took in the question of the jump in sterling exchange to almost a gold exporting point, and it was asserted with insistence that before the day closed more of such exports would be made public. This news did not take into account the fact that money conditions were almost the same as on Tuesday, when the rate for call loans was, at the close, 4 per cent., having been during the day as high as 8 per cent., with demand sterling closing at $4.86⅝. There was a jump in this rate early yesterday to $4.87½ and it rose to $4.87¾. After business hours quotations varied from $4.87½ to $4.88 in a strong market, without data for a forecast of to-day.

A tour of the houses that figure in season of gold exports or imports failed to discover in any instance that arrangements had been made to ship gold, or that a single transaction of the kind was contemplated. Some of the concerns practically make their own exchange and have facilities not affected by the general banker or exchange broker. An officer of one of the most important of the independent banks said that he knew nothing of gold exports, while arrangements to this end might be made at a moment's notice should terms be regarded as favorable.

"In times like these," he added, "in times of money stringency, a selfish policy prevails, and it is the duty of each establishment to look out for its own interests. I hold the patriotic Canadian banks and their connections responsible for the advance in sterling exchange. But I see no reason to follow their lead. The rate for gold export is likely to be high—much higher than some people imagine. England will have to pay roundly if she gets any of our gold."

Leopold Zimmermann of the foreign exchange and banking firm of Zimmermann & Forshay said that he had not heard of any arrangement to ship gold abroad. "As to gold exports," he continued, "what's the logic of people getting excited over the question? Both gold exports and imports bring up old-fangled ideas. If we export gold, according, not to a few, but many, we are on the road to ruin. Supposing that we did export $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 or even more of gold, it would be but a flea-bite on the amount of the precious metal held in this country.

"Of the prospects of gold imports all I can say is that circumstances will rule all such transactions. Demand sterling closed to-day at about $4.88. As I see it, a rate to pay for exportation would be from $4.88½ to $4.88¾ for ordinary transactions. But if England's need of gold is so great that she's got to have some of ours, she will not hesitate at paying a premium, so that exports might be made at to-day's closing rate.

"The gold and exchange situation is due: To the 6 per cent. discount rate of the Bank of England, to the Transvaal war cutting off England's gold supply from South Africa, and to our unsettled currency system. Also to be taken into account are this year's Christmas presents in money sent to friends and relatives in the United Kingdom and Europe. They exceed those of former years, and a conservative estimate of the amount is $5,000,000. Then again there are the transactions incidental to the payment of interest on our securities abroad which is due Jan. 1.

"A remedy for the money situation? Let gold go to Europe. The money's going to come back. Let them have it and end it. No serious interest should suffer by the exportation of a little gold. As to financial remedies here, it should be remembered that Secretary Gage anticipated the payment of interest on Government bonds up to July 1, 1900, but such payment was subject to rebate. If now he were to waive the rebate the situation would be bridged, and the money market would receive substantial aid.

"After all, the bottom of the present trouble and agitation is sentiment. Look at the money loaning condition. During the stock market slump this afternoon everybody who wanted to borrow found accommodation at low rates, 4 and 5 per cent. But on the stock market the bear movement was operated on sentiment."

In Wall Street the story that a syndicate of local bankers was arranging a loan of from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 was not found to have any basis. Several prominent houses secured cable dispatches disproving the story that the Bank of France had lent the Bank of England $10,000,000. A "Street" bulletin announced that "A prominent house" had received a Washington dispatch which said that the January interest on Government bonds would be paid without rebate, and that the Treasury officials were considering the purchase of $50,000,000 of bonds. This statement lacked confirmation.

The report that gold had come to New York from Canada and that the movement indicated a shipment of gold to London through such operations was confirmed by the receipt of gold from Montreal and other points to the amount of about $2,000,000. Of this the Bank of Montreal received $1,250,000, the Bank of British North America $200,000, and the Canadian Bank of Commerce $400,000. At none of these banks was confirmation had of the report that funds were being withdrawn for lending in London. Manager Robert Y. Hebden of the Bank of Montreal said that it would be nonsense to call loans here at 8 per cent. and lend the money in London at 4½ per cent. The Bank of Montreal has a balance of $15,000,000. On the other hand, it was again asserted that the local Canadian banks have within the past ten days been free buyers of sterling exchange.

The time-money market was unchanged yesterday, the ruling rate for high-class collateral for six months being 6 per cent., with ½ per cent. commission for shorter periods. On mixed collateral the rate was 6 per cent. and ½ per cent. commission for six months, and on collateral consisting wholly of accepted "industrials" 6 per cent. and 1 per cent. commission.

The money market will be aided by a shipment of $1,200,000 in French and Spanish gold made at Havana on account of the North American Trust Company on the steamship Sedgwick. The vessels is, however, due on Friday, so that the money will not go into circulation before the beginning of next week through the National Bank of North America.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 13.—The Montreal bankers unanimously deny the published statement that Canadian gold has been withdrawn from New York to be shipped to England. The managers say they can do much better in New York than in London.

BLAMED FOR MOTHER'S DEATH.

Coroner's Jury Finds Sheridan and Wife Guilty of "Wilful Neglect."

The inquest into the death of Mrs. Annie Sheridan, who died at the home of her son, Peter J. Sheridan, 67 Halsey Street, Astoria, on Dec. 4, was held yesterday by Coroner Guy. Mrs. Sheridan died without medical attendance, and, it is claimed, was neglected before death, and her body allowed to remain uncared for after death.

Sheridan and his wife, who were arrested and released under bail pending the inquest, were last night committed to the Queens County Jail without bail. The Coroner's jury found that Mrs. Sheridan had died as a result of "wilful neglect."

CONFIDENT OF FATHER'S PARDON

Nine-Year-Old Jennie McLaren Home from Her Trip to Trenton.

Jennie McLaren returned to her home, 58 Washington Street, Hoboken, last evening feeling confident that her trip to Trenton, to which city she went alone last Monday to try and obtain a pardon for her father, Thomas McLaren, who is serving a twenty-year sentence in the New Jersey State Prison for the murder of his wife, would result successfully. Jennie, who is only nine years old, and as bright as a girl twice her age, said she appeared before the Board of Pardons yesterday.

She said the Governor "and the other nice men" had promised to do all they could to have her father released. They told her, however, that there were other cases which they had to consider first. Jennie said she did not know the name of the man who gave her the round-trip ticket to Trenton.

COL. JULIUS W. ADAMS DEAD.

Was One of the First Engineers to Urge the Building of the Brooklyn Bridge.

Col. Julius Walker Adams, one of the first engineers who conceived the idea of building the New York and Brooklyn Bridge, died at his home, 155 Congress Street, Brooklyn, yesterday. He was eighty-seven years old and was born in Boston, Mass. Col. Adams was a cousin of President John Quincy Adams. He left the West Point Military Academy before graduating to become the Assistant Engineer of the Stonington and Providence Railroad. He was the chief engineer in the building of several bridges and many railroads in various parts of this country. He acquired the title of Colonel while at the head of the Hawkins Zouaves during the civil war. On several occasions he was in the service of the United States Army as consulting engineer and as chief engineer of various works constructed by the Government.

During the riots of 1863 in New York Col. Adams was in charge of the troops stationed at Printing House Square. He was consulting engineer in the construction of a Hudson River railroad bridge in 1865, and of the Wallabout Commission for Bridging and Docking the Wallabout Canal, Brooklyn. The designs for the East River Bridge were submitted to him in 1867. As early as 1855 Col. Adams agitated the necessity of a bridge between New York and Brooklyn. Upon his return from the civil war he interested William C. Kingsley in the project, and helped to keep it alive. During the early period of the big span's construction Col. Adams held various positions in connection with it.

For several years he was Consulting Engineer of the Board of City Works, Brooklyn, and also as to the distribution of water in New York City. He found time, too, to edit The Engineering News, and had previously held an editorial position on Appletons' Magazine.

Col. Adams was the last surviving member of the twelve founders of the American Society of Engineers. He was a member of the New York Academy of Science and of the Association for the Advancement of Science. He leaves one daughter.

QUEER TRAP FOR BURGLARS.

Police Give Visible Evidence of Their Presence in a Building.

The public school in Adelina Place, North Bergen, Hudson County, N. J., was entered by burglars a week ago and a wagon load of furniture carried away. The police thought the burglars might return, and two officers were stationed in the school.

Clerk Pullis of the Board of Education says the trap set for the burglars is a peculiar one, as the officers go through the building during the night with a lighted lamp, and when not doing this they place the lamp near one of the windows. Whether the lamp is thus prominently displayed to guide the burglars to the school in the darkness or to save them the trouble of lighting the gas after they break in, Mr. Pullis says, is not clear.

Murdered Baby's Body Found.

The body of a newly born girl was found yesterday in the yard back of the house at 194 Lockwood Street, Astoria. The child had been strangled to death within twenty-four hours after which its legs and arms were cut off. The body was wrapped in an old newspaper. Nothing was found to indicate who the murderer was. A search for the arms and legs was made, but they were not found.

CONGRESS.—In the House yesterday Mr. Thayer, a Democrat of Massachusetts, spoke in favor of the Currency bill. Mr. Sibley of Pennsylvania declined to speak, but announced his intention to vote against the measure. The Republican leaders say the majority for the bill will be 86. Senator Pettigrew's Filipino resolution was tabled in the Senate by a vote of 41 to 20. Congress will take a recess from Dec. 20 to Jan. 3. Speaker Henderson announced that the House committees will be announced before Christmas.—Page 8.

FOREIGN.—Fears are entertained by the British of a revolt of the Dutch colonists in Cape Colony, owing to recent Boer victories. Gen. Methuen reports his loss in the recent battle to have been 832 killed, wounded, and missing. Gen. French reports that he defeated 1,800 Boers near Nauw Poort, killing or wounding forty of them. A rumor was current in London yesterday that Gen. Buller and Gen. Clery had relieved Ladysmith, capturing thousands of Boers. The report is not credited. Winston Churchill is said to have escaped from Pretoria. At a consistory held yesterday the Pope announced the appointment of a number of Bishops. The new Bishop of Havana was installed by his Holiness, who appeared to be in good health. A secret consistory was afterward held. Walther Hauser was elected President for next year by the Swiss Federal Council. He has been Vice President of the republic this year. The debate on the budget estimates was continued in the German Reichstag. The Reichstag adjourned until Jan. 9, after the estimates were referred to the Budget Committee. Herr Richter declared in the course of the debate that Great Britain's power had been overestimated.—Pages 1 and 6.

Jury Awards $105 for Care of a Dog.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—A jury in Judge Kavanagh's court to-day awarded Mrs. Fred Leonhardt a judgment against the Consumers' Box Manufacturing Company of $105 for the care of a dog. This is at the rate of 9 cents a day for 1,200 days. Her father, John Kitzrow, was for three years watchman at the company's plant. The dog belonged to the company.

BRITISH GATHER THE DEAD

Neighborhood of the Boer Trenches Strewn with Corpses.

GEN. METHUEN'S LOSS WAS 832

Reports Show that the Burgher Casualties Were Over 700—Awful Execution by the Artillery.

MODDER RIVER, Dec. 13.—Ambulances started early yesterday morning, under a flag of truce, to collect the wounded and bury the dead who fell at Magersfontein. Brig. Gen. Wauchope, who led the Highland Brigade, was found dead near the trenches, shot in the chest and thigh. A few wounded were found near the trenches. Several wounded Boers were taken to the British hospital.

The side of the hill and the immediate neighborhood of the Boer trenches showed dead bodies all about. One wounded Boer informed a correspondent that their loss was terrible. The whole Scandinavian contingent was destroyed. Judging from information gleaned from the Boer wounded and from prisoners taken in different parts of the field, the Boer losses must exceed 700. The destruction wrought by the naval guns was enormous.

Word was passed along the Boer lines to prepare to retreat at nightfall. All confess that it was their greatest loss during the war.

The British troops have returned to Modder River owing to the lack of water near the position held yesterday.

The Daily Chronicle's Modder River dispatch, which is at variance with all the other reports, represents Lord Methuen's forces as retiring Tuesday on the camp at Modder River as the result of renewed artillery firing that day. The correspondent says:

"Tuesday forenoon the Boers brought heavy guns into action. The British artillery replied, but failed to silence them. Lord Methuen thereupon withdrew his force out of range and concentrated at Modder River."

The correspondent of The Standard at Modder River, describing the fight at Magersfontein, says:

"Six miles had to be covered before the Highland Brigade could reach the Boer stronghold. It is not yet clear through what mischance the force, which was led by guides, came upon the Boer trenches so unexpectedly and so suddenly.

"Beyond question, the Boers were aware of the approach of the British and had prepared to receive them. According to one version, two Highlanders, through nervousness or clumsiness, discharged their rifles prematurely, but it is equally probable that the advance Boer scouts conveyed the intelligence."

"Our men were totally unprepared. They had not even fixed bayonets. The disaster was all the more exasperating because of the consciousness that had the brigade been extended and with bayonets fixed, the trenches might have been successfully rushed with far less sacrifice of life."

The Highlanders did all that the most gallant troops in the world could do, but it was impossible to face the terrible fire of the Boers. The British artillery again saved the situation, and divides the honors of the day with the Scotchmen. The batteries worked for hours under a galling rifle fire.

According to the Boer stories, it was impossible for the Burghers to have escaped fearful loss. One Boer prisoner said a single lyddite shell killed or wounded over seventy Boers, and that two other shells burst over two bodies of Boers ensconced behind the range, doing fearful damage. All agree that the Boers fought throughout with the utmost gallantry. Their sharpshooters seldom missed the mark.

A Seaforth Highlander says that while he was lying wounded on the field he saw a Boer, of typical German appearance, faultlessly dressed, with polished top boots, a shirt with silk ruffles, and a cigar in his mouth, walking among the ant hills, picking off the British. This Boer was quite alone, and it was apparent from his frequent use of field glasses that he was singling out officers.

Another wounded Boer says that a lyddite shell, fired on Sunday, fell in the middle of an open-air prayer meeting held to offer supplications for the success of the Boer arms.

All the wounded are full of praise for the treatment they received from the Medical Department on the battlefield.

While the Guards were advancing on the plain, which the Boers were shelling from the adjoining ridges, they encountered and cut up a strong Boer picket posted on a hill for purposes of observation. All the members of the picket were either killed, wounded, or taken prisoners.

A revised list of the total casualties to the British troops at Magersfontein places the number at 832.

There were 650 casualties among the non-commissioned officers and men of the Highland Brigade.

The brigade lost 10 officers killed, 38 wounded and 4 missing.

Of Gen. Methuen's officers 15 were killed and 47 wounded in all, while 5 are missing and 1 is known to have been captured.

The following list of the officers killed or wounded so far as known has been received:

Highland Brigade—Killed: Gen. Wauchope, Lieut. Col. J. H. C. Goode, Capt. Elton, Lieut. Edmonds, Capt. J. R. Clark, Lieut. Cox, Capt. Cowan, Capt. Lamberton, Lieut. Col. Goff, Major Robinson, Capt. Wingate, and Lieut. Cowie.

Wounded: Col. Kelham, Major Berkeley, Major Duff, Capt. Featherstonhough, Capt. Noyes, Capt. Wolfe-Murray, Capt. Richardson, Capt. Campbell, Capt. Gordon, Capt. McNab, Lieut. the Hon. W. C. Baillie, Lieut. Scott, and Lieut. Waterhouse.

Many of the above-mentioned officers are dangerously wounded. The other officers wounded mostly sustained unsevere injuries.

Second Royal Highlanders—Wounded: Lieut. Wauchope, Major Cuthbertson, Capt. Cameron, Lieut. St. J. Harvey, Lieut. Berthon, and Lieut. Tait, who was formerly the amateur golf champion.

Missing—Capt. the Hon. Cumming-Bruce, Capt. Macfarlane, and Lieut. Ramsay.

The Marquis of Winchester of the Coldstream Guards was killed; Capt. J. Sterling, Lieut. Col. Codrington, and Major the Hon. W. Lambton of the same brigade were wounded, and of the rank and file 6 were killed and 46 were wounded.

A partial list of the other casualties is as follows:

Twelfth Lancers—One killed, eighteen wounded.

Ninth Lancers—One killed, nine wounded.

Second Seaforths—Missing, Major K. R. Mackenzie and Capt. Brodie.

Field Artillery—Twenty-one wounded.

Surgeon Major Burtchaell was taken prisoner.

Mounted Infantry—Killed: Major Milton and Major Ray.

CAPE DUTCH MAY REVOLT.

British Defeats Cause Disaffection in South Africa—Loyal Farmers Being Armed.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—"Lord Methuen's check, following Gen. Gatacre's repulse," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily News, "has had a most depressing effect upon the Loyalists, who are by no means a growing body. They are filled with dark forebodings. Dutch disaffection is rapidly growing. A large section is restless, and would need but little persuasion to join the Boers.

"There are disturbing reports from the eastern districts of Cape Colony, where many secret meetings have been held. The imperial authorities are arming the loyal farmers in the Stutterheim and Bedford districts."

BOERS DEFEATED BY GEN. FRENCH.

Repulses a Force of 1,800 with Heavy Loss.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The War Office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Forestier-Walker at Cape Town:

"Gen. French wires, under date of Dec. 13, reporting a skirmish at 4 o'clock in the morning with 1,800 Boers who were advancing southward toward Naauw Poort. The skirmishing continued all the morning, the Boers fighting on a front of fourteen miles. The enemy retired with a loss of forty killed and wounded. Our casualties were one killed, seven wounded, including one officer, and two missing."

RUMORED VICTORY FOR BULLER

London Has Discredited Advices that Ladysmith Has Been Relieved and Many Boers Captured.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A special dispatch from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says Gen. Buller and Gen. Clery have entered Ladysmith and have captured 10,000 Boers.

A special dispatch from Weenen, Natal, dated Monday, Dec. 11, says that the Ladysmith garrison had made a sortie and destroyed the Modderspruit Bridge.

The War Office has heard nothing of the story of the relief of Ladysmith. The officials do not credit the report, as, they add, the relief of the place at such an early date is believed to be practically impossible.

Firing Heard Near Colenso.

FRERE CAMP, Dec. 13.—Firing can be heard this morning in the direction of Colenso, and an artillery duel is expected today.

TROOPS TO BE HURRIED FORWARD.

Sixth Division Mobilized and Another Ordered Out.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The War Office this evening made the following announcement:

"The Sixth Division has been mobilized, and four battalions of this division will have embarked by Sunday.

"The Government has also approved of the immediate mobilization of the Seventh Division."

LONDON PRESS FOR ACTION.

Insist that Every Sacrifice Must Now Be Made.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Globe says:

"The country is prepared for any sacrifice. In the famous words of Gen. Sheridan, 'All must now go in.'"

The St. James's Gazette says:

"When we have retrieved our defeats and have restored the supremacy of our flag we can criticise and investigate. To-day we must act."

Continuing, the St. James's Gazette urges the Government to take the White Star line steamships, from the Oceanic down, and send another army corps to South Africa.

The Westminster Gazette, a liberal newspaper, which had actively opposed the war, says:

"We are bound to carry the campaign to a successful issue," and adds: "The reckoning with the Government will come later."

The afternoon newspapers of all shades of politics follow the morning newspapers in facing the situation courageously, and in demanding the immediate dispatch of reinforcements. Thus, the Radical Star says:

"The stake the gambler Chamberlain has thrown on the table is not merely South Africa, but the Empire. It is too late to regret the game. We have no choice but to play it, even if it involves sending abroad the militia. Our armies in South Africa must be amply reinforced."

BERESFORD SOUNDS A WARNING.

British Admiral Says More Men Are Needed in Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Speaking at a Unionist meeting in Hackney, London, this evening, Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford said that he long ago told the Secretary of State for War, Lord Lansdowne, that the Government was not sending enough troops to the Transvaal.

"Large reinforcements to all our auxiliaries for fighting," he continued, "must be dispatched immediately, and more ships must be placed in commission in order that Great Britain may be prepared for eventualities. The Boers are a mobile force, and they have heavy modern artillery. We need more quick-firing guns.

"I must say I have never thought that we are sending out enough men. When once it was known that we had to send an army corps, I told Lord Lansdowne—as far back as Nov. 2—that he would not be sending enough. In the Fire Department, when it is thought that four engines are needed to cope with a conflagration, it is a wise plan to send eight. The War Office should have acted on the same principle.

"This war is one of the biggest upon which we have ever embarked, owing to the surrounding political circumstances, and, if necessary, every mother's son among us must go to the front. British pluck and money will win; and then, with equal rights for all, the British flag must fly over the whole of South Africa."

BRITAIN'S DUTY POINTED OUT.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Duke of Devonshire, Lord President of the Council of Ministers, speaking in York City this evening, congratulated the country upon the calm it was displaying during a serious crisis and upon the fact that, despite the diversity of political opinion, there was only one voice regarding the duty of the Government to prosecute the war.

"The longer and more arduous the struggle becomes," said His Grace, "the more fixed should be our determination never again to let our African colonies bear the suffering and loss which they are now experiencing."

He deprecated criticisms on British commanders in the field, and, in dilating upon the attitude of foreign nations, he said he thought too much attention had been paid to the comments of foreign newspapers, especially in view of the fact that the attitude of every Power had been strictly correct.

GATACRE REPORTS HIS LOSSES.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The War Office has received from Gen. Gatacre the following list of casualties, furnished by a correspondent, who was permitted to visit the Boer camp with the Chaplains, and is believed to be reliable:

Second Royal Irish, ten killed, thirty-two wounded.

First East Lancashire, one wounded.

Second Northumberland, twelve killed, twenty-seven wounded.

All the above wounded men are prisoners.

Winston Churchill Has Escaped.

LORENZO MARQUES, Delagoa Bay, Dec. 14.—Winston Churchill, the newspaper correspondent and former officer of the Fourth Hussars, who was captured at the time of the armored train disaster near Estcourt, Nov. 15, has escaped from Pretoria.

Queen Expresses Her Sympathy.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Queen has sent a message of deep sympathy to the widow of Gen. Wauchope.

BRITISH CAMPAIGN ANALYZED.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—"There is one feature of the war in the Transvaal that is not generally considered," said Gen. Thomas M. Anderson last night, "and that is that the English are violating the military usage by fighting with three armies of invasion." He continued:

"It has always been considered good tactics in wars of invasion to concentrate the invading forces, and the rule is seldom violated. The English ampaign against the Boers is being made with three distinct armies, operating in as many parts of the enemy's country. In this case this is made permissible, and is doubtless being done for the reason that not the least important danger for the English to guard against is the invasion of the thus far pacific colonies by the Boers. These colonies are honeycombed with Dutch, and the presence of any considerable number of Boers in them might lead to revolt. This the English must prevent, as well as carry on an offensive campaign, and, if it can be accomplished at all, it will be by attacking from several different points, as is being done."

METHUEN MAY BE SUPERSEDED.

Gen. Sir Charles Warren Likely to Succeed Him.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Sir Charles Warren, who arrived at Cape Town yesterday, will possibly join Lord Methuen and take command of the combined forces. The newspapers are calling upon the Government to employ the Cunarders as well as the White Star steamers as transports, seeing the urgent necessity for getting more men to the Cape as speedily as possible. Forty thousand men could still be sent from England without calling upon the militia for foreign service. The militia effective is 100,000, and from this body 20,000, carefully selected, could easily be spared for South Africa. Moreover, the colonies are again proffering assistance.

It was freely predicted this morning, even in high military circles, that the campaign will last until June. It was also expected that Gen. Methuen would have to retire south of the Orange River, as it was claimed he could not hold out long at the Modder River, where his food supplies and ammunition were not expected to last over a week. In fact, it was said that his line of communications was probably already cut, and it was claimed that Gen. Gatacre was similarly weakened by his reverse.

The scenes at the War Office this morning when Gen. Methuen's casualties were posted were highly dramatic. There was a steady incursion of anxious inquirers from the moment the doors opened, and there was intense excitement when an official appeared bearing the ominously long lists of names.

The women present crowded eagerly forward and begged for copies of the lists. But the supply was not sufficient, and the official read out the lists. Intense feeling was evident on all the faces, and the pitiable anguish of the bereaved was chastened by the happiness of others in not hearing the names of relatives mentioned. It was a memorable scene. Some of the women were so overcome that they had to be assisted from the room.

WELL-KNOWN FAMILIES MOURN.

Capt. the Hon. Cumming-Bruce, who is reported as missing since the battle of Magersfontein, is evidently Capt. the Hon. James Frederick Hovell-Thurlow-Cumming-Bruce, the heir to the Barony of Thurlow. He is the eldest son of the Right Hon. Thomas John, fifth Lord Thurlow, who is a Privy Councillor and a Fellow of the Royal Society. He married Lady Elma Bruce, daughter of the eighth Earl of Elgin and Kincardine.

Capt. Hovell-Thurlow-Cumming-Bruce was born July 24, 1867. After passing through the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst he entered the Black Watch, or Royal Highlanders, as a subaltern. He married in 1891 Miss Constance Clifton, daughter of the late Thomas Henry Clifton of Lytham Hall, Lancashire.

The Thurlows are an old and wealthy Norfolk family. The present holder of the title was formerly a well-known diplomatist, and was well liked in Washington, where he was private secretary to the Minister in 1865-6. In 1880 he was Paymaster General of England.

SAYS BOERS FIGHT FOR GOD.

The annual banquet of the Eleventh Army Corps Association was held in the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night. Col. A. C. Hamlin, President of the organization, acted as toastmaster. The speakers of the evening included Gen. Franz Sigel, Gen. James R. O'Beirne, Gen. James Grant Wilson, Gen. Egbert Viele, Gen. Horatio C. King, Gen. Grosvenor, and Gen. Nickerson, formerly of the Confederate Army.

In introducing Gen. Nickerson Col. Hamlin said: "We never did love the Confederate Army, but we always respected it." The ex-Confederate officer then made a few complimentary remarks, and was followed by Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio, who spoke about "The Volunteer As He Is—a Real Soldier."

Gen. O'Beirne spoke on the war in South Africa. He said, in part:

"I do not wish to make any comment on the war and the way it is being conducted, but the Boers seem to be taking pretty good care of themselves, according to late reports. The indomitable Dutch spirit of those poor farmers, fighting for their country, which they by their energy have transformed from a wilderness into a garden spot on the face of the earth, is as much to be admired as the struggle our poor, half-starved army made against the same nation more than one hundred years ago.

"But for the stain of blood we could see the Dutch humor that these followers of Oom Paul Krüger have adopted in handling the flower of the British Army in all its splendid panoply. It is not strange that London cannot see through these jokes, and it is a fact that Englishmen are not happy, despite the reports that reach them of hundreds of Boers that are slain and captured.

"Too little is known about this small republic. Those men are fighting for their country and their God. But the odds are not all on one side. There are plenty of arms and plenty of ammunition in the Transvaal, and those struggling heroes who want nothing but their own may still be in the position of him who laughs last."

BRITONS ON THE WAR.

The semi-annual dinner of the British Schools and Universities Club was held at the Holland House last evening. Dr. J. A. Irwin, the President of the club, presided, and the subject of the speeches was how far the colonial co-operation with Great Britain in the prosecution of the present Transvaal war is significant of the eventual consolidation of the British Empire.

After toasts had been drunk to the Queen and to the President of the United States, the Rev. Dr. Edward H. Kraus spoke of the loyalty of Canada at the present time, as evidenced by the sending of a contingent of troops to South Africa. "The heart, the desire, the ambition, the destiny of Canada," he said, "is one with Great Britain, with Australasia, and with the coming confederation in South Africa. England needs her colonial dependencies. She is getting too small, and needs standing room. This war indicates that she needs men—men of her own blood, and her imperial necessity must be satisfied through the establishment of an intercolonial or imperial council chamber.

"Statesmen in this country complain that Great Britain held back the settlement of the Alaskan question too long because of Canadian wishes, but they forget that Canada has risen to the dignity of a nation within a nation. Canadian support of the present war is due simply to the feeling that fellow-subjects of the British crown have been treated with unreasoning cruelty and have been denied the fair rights of men."

R. M. Stuart-Wortley, who was introduced as the brother of one British soldier in Ladysmith and another with Gen. Buller, read a cable message which he received yesterday afternoon from a member of Parliament, saying Ladysmith was safe, and that there was no anxiety about Methuen, who would be reinforced. Continuing, he said:

"The British Empire is at stake, and it does not matter whether it takes 50,000 men or 100,000 men, or half a million. We have got to win, and we shall win."

In regard to the relations between the United States and Great Britain he said:

"We are bound to come together, and when we do, it will not matter what the rest of the world does."

The other speakers included David A. Munro, John Ford, and W. M. Massey. Among those present were Dr. P. Shannon, John Moulson, Duncan McCreary, George G. Ward, and Edward Litchfield.

COLER TO THE CITY CLUB

He Appears Before It as a "Wild Indian of a Democrat."

SAYS RAMAPO SCHEME IS DEAD

Discusses Rapid Transit, a Salt Water Supply System, and Other Municipal Questions.

Controller Coler was the principal guest and speaker at the first dinner of the City Club for the season of 1899-1900, at 19 West Thirty-fourth Street, last night, when the announced subject was "The Municipal Ownership of the Water Supply of the City of New York."

The dining room was comfortably filled, and President Wheeler H. Peckham presided, others at the principal table being Richard Watson Gilder, Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, F. C. Moore, Dr. Herman M. Biggs, and James B. Burnet.

When coffee was served President Peckham spoke in eulogy of Washington, and then a silent toast was drunk, standing, to the memory of the Father of His Country. Mr. Coler was then introduced as "a member of a political association which, as a whole, has not vigorously commended itself to our admiration." When the laughter following this sally had subsided, Mr. Coler said:

"I do not know that I always agree with the methods of the club in some ways, but I think I do in intent, and a wild Indian of a Democrat coming here and being more or less frank with you may lead to a better understanding all around. I believe in issues rather than men." He then read his address, in which he dealt largely with rapid transit, a salt-water supply system, and other matters outside of the subject of the evening. In part it was as follows:

"There comes a time in the history of municipalities when great problems and grave conditions must be met in a spirit of liberal and progressive statesmanship, else golden opportunities will pass unimproved and return no more. The City of New York has now reached a stage of development where conditions demand a somewhat radical departure from the business and methods that have heretofore prevailed in the conduct of public affairs. The time has come when we must realize that the consolidated city is a great and rich municipality and that it cannot be properly governed and its resources and possibilities developed under regulations designed for a smaller community.

"Under the debt limit provision of our present State Constitution, which applies to this city with the same restrictions that are imposed upon the smallest and poorest village of the interior, we must continue to crawl along in the wake of the tax assessment and wait for private property to grow in value before we can properly develop the public property and provide the public benefits to which the people feel they are justly entitled.

"The city derives a profitable revenue from two great public works, the docks and the water supply. The present water system of the city is a paying investment. By that I mean that after paying the interest on the bonds issued to acquire it and amortizing the principal thereof, there remains a substantial profit over the cost of maintenance.

"Of course this system must be enlarged and extended from time to time, because we are not going to buy any water from the Ramapo Company or any other private corporation, [applause,] but the receipts will increase even more rapidly than the expenditures, and it is only a matter of time when the city will own, free of debt, a vast system of water works that will return to the public treasury a large revenue.

"I believe the city should own the entire water front, and should have the power, as it has the financial ability, to construct the greatest system of docks in the world."

Mr. Coler said of the rapid transit project that while municipal ownership was contemplated and the city would own the property in fifty years without having paid a dollar from direct taxation, still it all must be charged against the borrowing powers of the city, thereby checking improvement in other directions. This, he said, was not intelligent financiering. The time had passed, he added, when the city would dispose of public rights and powers without adequate compensation.

Many questions were put to Mr. Coler after he had concluded, the first being, "Is Ramapo dead?"

"It's dead if Judge Gildersleeve's decision is not upset," he replied.

Mr. Moore, who is a member of the Board of Fire Underwriters, and who fulfilled, did not agree with this. "I have fought this Ramapo scheme off and on for something like twenty years," he said. "It isn't dead, and never will be, I fear."

He compared it to a man he had heard of who had got his liver in such a healthy condition that when the rest of him died they had to kill his liver with a club. "When New York is a deserted village you will still have to kill Ramapo with a club—the City Club," he said. He, too, advocated salt water mains in the city for fire protection and other needs, but said that they could not be obtained while Ramapo was "hanging on a tree."

Dr. Herman M. Biggs, head of the bacteriological department of the Board of Health, said: "It is almost a truism that an abundant supply of pure water is absolutely necessary to maintain the healthfulness of any community. A guarantee of purity in the water supply is only to be afforded by absolute municipal control, best obtained through municipal ownership. The purity of the water supply is of far too great importance to the inhabitants of any great city to justify its being placed in the hands of any owners but the municipality."

DEAF AND DUMB SCHOOL BURNED

Institute at Edgewood, Penn., Destroyed—500 Pupils Escape.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 14.—The Western Pennsylvania Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, situated at Edgewood, was destroyed by fire this evening. The 300 pupils in the building were panic-stricken, but the teachers quickly secured control of them and it is believed all were saved. The institute was a large five-story brick building which covered an acre of ground.

The loss is placed at $150,000, with insurance of $100,000. The cause of the fire, while not positively known, is believed to have been a bursted gas pipe. While the confusion and excitement was great, there were no accidents to pupils or teachers.

Officials of the institute say the school will be rebuilt at once.

The pupils are being taken care of temporarily at the Home for Aged Couples, which is close by, and at the homes of the residents of Wilkinsburg. Definite arrangements will be made for their disposition to-morrow.

ENGLAND WANTS OUR GOLD.

The Bank of England Raises the Buying Price of Eagles.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The Bank of England has raised the buying price for United States gold coin to 77s. 9½d.

The Daily Mail says that a small amount is certain to come from New York.

The Times says: "The Bank of England, while raising the buying price of eagles a half penny, will, it is believed, pay 77s. 9½d. for bar gold, which concession, in connection with the granting of certain facilities in regard to advances, will very likely bring both bars and eagles from New York in fairly large quantities."

FIRE TAKES THREE LIVES.

Two Women Suffocated and a Man Burned to Death Early This Morning in Brooklyn.

Three persons lost their lives in a fire which occurred at 1:30 o'clock this morning in an old-fashioned farmhouse at 200 South First Street, Brooklyn.

The house stood in the rear of the lot. When the firemen had extinguished the flames it was found that two women had been suffocated and a man had been burned to death.

The names of the victims could not be ascertained, and nothing is known as to the origin of the fire.

KENTUCKY DEMOCRATS ACT.

Committees Recommend Contest Before Legislature to Oust the Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 14.—The State Central Executive, and Campaign Committees of the Democratic Party in secret session voted unanimously to-day to recommend a contest before the Legislature to oust the Republican Governor and Lieutenant Governor, and indorsed the action of the minor candidates in filing their contest before the State Contesting Board.

A committee consisting of ex-Gov. J. M. McCreary and four other prominent Democrats was appointed to draft resolutions in accordance with the vote of the committees.

MORE NEW YORK CENTRAL STOCK

Company Decides to Increase It to $115,000,000.

ALBANY, Dec. 14.—The stockholders of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company voted at a meeting held in this city to-day to increase the capital stock of the company from $100,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, to $115,000,000, divided into 1,150,000 shares of the par value of $100 each. There was no opposition to the addition of the resolution providing for the increase.

The stockholders will hold another meeting in this city Dec. 28 to pass upon the lease of the Boston and Albany. It is not expected that there will be any opposition to the ratification of the lease.

DWIGHT L. MOODY IS WORSE.

Complications Cause His Physicians Much Anxiety.

WEST NORTHFIELD, Mass., Dec. 14.—Dr. N. P. Wood, the family physician of Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, issued the following bulletin this afternoon:

"Dwight L. Moody has not been as well during the past few days. Complications have arisen which have caused much anxiety. His lower extremities are swelling, and albuminuria has appeared, which is considered to be due to the heart trouble. Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck was called in consultation on Wednesday. He is quite hopeful of ultimate recovery. Mr. Moody is confined to his room, and sees only his family and most intimate friends."

SWISS MINISTER'S GENEROSITY.

Gave $5 to a Colored Woman Who Had Lost That Amount.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Swiss Minister has acquired a pleasant notoriety by an act of Christmas generosity that was observed yesterday. Mrs. Mary Friedman, the wife of a poor laborer living at Anacostia, a suburb of Washington, was in a Seventh Street shop to make some purchases. Mr. Pioda arrived while she was making known a loss of five dollars with some indications of distress. He listened while she related with great minuteness the circumstances of her loss, and saw her start to return home in a hysterical condition. He followed her to the door and, stopping her, pressed her to accept from him the gift of a five-dollar bill to make good her loss. Mr. Pioda was not known by the woman, but he was recognized by some of the clerks in the shop, who soon made his action known.

HARDWARE COMPANY'S TROUBLE

The H. D. Smith Concern of Meriden, Conn., in Financial Straits.

Special to The New York Times.

MERIDEN, Conn., Dec. 14.—The H. D. Smith Company, manufacturers of carriage hardware at Southington, capitalized at $300,000, is in financial straits. A meeting of five of the principal creditors was held to-day to devise plans for continuing the business without recourse to a receivership. The principal creditors are the Southington National Bank, the Southington Savings Bank, and the Bristol Savings Bank, but a statement of either liabilities or assets is refused.

The company is one of the pioneers of the carriage hardware industry, and all the stockholders with one exception are members of the Smith family. Since the death of H. D. Smith, the founder, about a year ago, there has been friction in the management, and this is said to be the primary cause of the present trouble.

E. P. Hotchkiss, Secretary of the company, said to-day: "We hope to be permitted to go along, although we admit we are in financial straits. Business is good. We have lots of orders, a large amount of important goods and book accounts that place the company in a position to meet all liabilities if sufficient time allowance is given us."

May Boycott Union Stock Yards.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—A boycott against the Chicago Union Stock Yards is being discussed by live stock shippers of the Southwest as a result of Judge Kohlsatt's opinion in the $2 per car switching charge made by the Western roads entering this city. The original accusation was made against the railroads by the Union Stock Yards Company, and the railroads, in turn, advanced the fee and tacked it on to the charges made for transporting live stock. Cattlemen in the Southwest are unanimous in declaring that the shippers will take strong action on the question in both the State and National conventions of their associations. It is hinted that a general boycott will be declared against the Chicago yards.

Germans Want American Fruit.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—In view of the circular sent by the Prussian Government to the Chamber of Commerce and other bodies, inquiring as to the desirability of a duty on fruit, the Society of Hamburg Fruit Dealers has adopted a resolution declaring emphatically that American fruit is indispensable there and protesting energetically against a duty. The Hamburg Chamber of Commerce is known to be of the same opinion and will take a similar course. Imports of American apples are said to be increasing, with lowering prices, and therefore the poorer classes are now able to enjoy the fruit.

Advance in Price of Stoves.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—An advance of a full 25 per cent. in the price of stoves and ranges has been decided on by the Association of Stove Manufacturers now in session here. The advance will take effect Jan. 1. It is claimed the advance was made necessary by the increased prices of iron and steel.

"That was on Jan. 2, 1899," said Mr. Weeks. "You knew then where the defendant was employed?"
"I think I did."
"Then it was not until you knew that Molineux was in the employ of Hermann & Co. and not until you knew of his connection with the case that you gave an opinion?"
"That is right," said the witness, just as Mr. Osborne interposed an objection.
"He didn't give an opinion until months after," said Mr. Osborne, for the benefit of the jury, and the Recorder warned him.
Mr. Weeks then drew from the witness the statement that he made no distinguishing marks on any exhibits that came to him later and that he kept no record of the dates when they came into his possession. He said he used some and discarded others, as he found them useful, and that they were later marked by the District Attorney. He was asked to bring samples of the writings he had examined, and Mr. Osborne said if he did so they would fill the courtroom. They consisted, he said, of writings of all the Knickerbocker Athletic Club employes and many others, and to get them would be impossible.
Mr. Weeks then told the witness to bring with him to-day the scraps of writings which he still had and which came to him on Jan. 1, and also to bring his letter copying book. After some argument the witness promised to do as requested, and the session closed.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE'S BILL.

Presentation of Ernest von Wildenbruch's "Haubenlerche."

Ernest von Wildenbruch's play entitled "Haubenlerche" was presented last night at the Irving Place Theatre. Lena Schmalenbach, the principal character, is employed in the paper mill of August Langenthal, who intends to marry her. Lena, however, has promised to become the wife of Paul Ihlefeld, a foreman at the factory. The proprietor's brother, a shiftless youth, insults Lena and his action forces the mill owner to confess his love for the girl and request her hand in marriage. Though surprised at the honor, she feels unhappy, as she loves the foreman. Her uncle, an old rag-picker, urges her to accept her employer's proposal, and thus be enabled to send her poor, invalid mother to the seashore. Lena consents. The affected foreman decides to leave the factory when he hears of the engagement.
Then the shiftless brother of the mill owner, anxious to prevent the marriage, persuaded Lena to consent to flee to Berlin, promising that her former sweetheart will follow and marry her there. The girl meets the tempter at midnight to begin the journey. When in his room he tries to get her intoxicated. Through the window she suddenly sees her former sweetheart and immediately joins him. The commotion attending her escape rouses Langenthal. Learning the situation, he releases the girl from her engagement and gives his consent to her union with Paul Ihlefeld. The title rôle was played by Miss Emmy Schroth. The other principal parts were represented by Mrs. Wilhelmine Schlüter, Miss Martha Schiffel, Julius Ascher, Paul Faber, Rudolph Klein-Rhoden, and Rudolph Senius.

GRAND OPERA TENOR CHALLENGED.

Edouard de Reszke's Representative Resents Salezа's Reply to Criticism.

Some of the artists who are to appear in the season of grand opera about to begin at the Metropolitan Opera House are at odds with Maurice de Nevers, a representative of Edouard de Reszke.
M. de Nevers, according to the artists concerned, remarked in Boston that there were no tenors in the present Grau Company. MM. van Dyck, Alvarez, Dippel, Salignac, and Saleza felt that this was aimed at them, and took exception to it. As the representative of his companions, M. Saleza called M. de Nevers to account.
Mr. Grau tried to arrange a peaceful settlement of the affair by bringing the tenor and M. de Nevers together in his office. Instead of appeasing there, M. de Nevers, it is understood, sent a letter of apology to the members of the company. M. Saleza replied by forbidding M. de Nevers ever to address him under any circumstances. The tenor's note was regarded as an insult, and M. de Nevers notified him that his seconds would call upon him in Paris next March.
In his apartments at the Hotel Normandie yesterday the tenor expressed surprise that the affair had become public. He has not as yet decided what he will do regarding M. de Nevers challenge.
"In my opinion," said M. Saleza, "the man does not talk or act like a person who means fight, and furthermore, I do not know anything about his reputation or social standing, and until he can prove himself my equal in these respects it would not be proper for me to take any notice of him."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 14.—The first public performance of the French play, "Le Pedant Joue," was given by the Cercle Francaise of Harvard in Brattle Hall, Cambridge, to-night. The music was excellent, the play well staged, and there were some good ballets.

Lafayette Dollars Coined.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14.—The first Lafayette dollar was struck off at the United States Mint in this city to-day. This coin will be presented by the President of the United States to the President of France. The second coin struck off was forwarded to Mrs. McKinley, while the third was given to Mrs. Kate Thyson Marr of Washington.

Men Wanted in the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The navy is still 4,000 men short of the legal maximum, in spite of the best efforts of the recruiting officers. Secretary Long has suggested to Congress that enlistments might be increased by extending to sailors enlisting the benefit of the act allowing to apprentices in similar circumstances a full outfit of clothing. Under the present system the men are kept in debt for months after enlistment by the purchase of the necessary outfit from advance payments.

Wood's Appointment Pleases Cubans.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 14.—The news of the appointment of Major Gen. Wood as Governor of Cuba was received here with enthusiasm. Even the most bitter Cuban Nationalists agree in praising him as a soldier and an administrator. There is a great deal of speculation regarding his successor in the Governorship of this department, and a universal desire is expressed for a progressive young man of Gen. Wood's type.

WEST OPPOSES NEW YORK

Objects to Apparent Selling of the National Convention.

CHICAGO HAS STRONG CHANCE

Republican Committeemen Fear that Mr. McKinley Cannot Afford to be Renominated Near Wall Street.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—In the fight for the Republican National Convention New York's prospects are not bright, unless conditions suddenly change.
Some of the Western men present an argument against New York that must be felt to be embarrassing. They say that, while the Republicans seem reasonably sure of winning next year, it will not do to send the convention to a city that may get it by outbidding other seekers for it. To have the matter of selection conducted as an auction would be bad, but to allow New York to be the highest bidder would be doubly unfortunate. Said a Western member of the National Committeee, who would not be quoted: "The Republican Party is strong enough to take some chances, but it does not seem wise to me to hold the convention in New York and to have the country ring with the cry of the opposition that the President, the friend of the bankers, desired to get his renomination in Wall Street."
This sentiment, if anything in the way of sentiment, will keep the convention from New York. Chicago is pretty nearly strong enough, before the poll, to win. New York will be likely to help Chicago if it cannot win for itself.
New York has been in evidence all day, and its force of representatives was increased this afternoon by the arrival of many members of the committee appointed to secure the convention. Not all the committee to speak for New York has yet arrived, but most of those appointed are here or will be present to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, when the National Committee meeting assembles at the Arlington.
The committee includes Thomas C. Platt, United States Senator; Chauncey M. Depew, United States Senator; Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, Ex-Lieut. Gov. Edward F. Jacobin, Edward Lauterbach, Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, Gen. A. G. McCook, Henry W. Cannon, Charles A. Moore, William L. Strong, William Brookfield, Cornelius N. Bliss, Levi P. Morton, Gen. Howard Carroll, Col. J. J. Astor, Gen. W. C. Wallace, Brayton Ives, Gen. C. H. Collis, Col. John W. Vrooman, Gen. B. E. Tremaine, Wilbur F. Wakeman, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, George Bidwell, Gen. James M. H. Varnum, Lemuel E. Quigg, Cornelius Van Cott, John Claflin, Frank S. Witherbee, Job E. Hedges, Chester Griswold, Alfred Ray, William Barbour, R. A. C. Smith, F. B. Gibbs, Louis F. Payn, Louis Stern, George C. Boldt, James H. Breslin, Francis B. Thurber, Col. Joel B. Erhardt, Gen. Samuel Thomas, William Berri, Dr. A. H. Doty, John H. Starin, Philip B. Low, A. B. Rogers, Frederick P. Morris, L. G. Bloomingdale, James Talcott, William Muir, Aaron Vanderbilt, Walter B. Atterbury, Col. W. Scott Proskey, Frank Brainard, R. E. A. Door, Simeon Ford, Col. George A. Price, M. J. Dady, G. Waldo Smith, Frank S. Gardner, William F. McConnell, William E. Pulsifer, the Hon. John Ford, and the Hon. John W. Jacobus.
The Merchants and Manufacturers' Board of Trade was represented by J. A. Heckman, Charles Hauptner, F. T. Hered, and H. A. Patterson.
New York is urging its advantages with industry and confidence. Its many hotels, its traveling conveniences, its neighborhood attractions, its hospitality, are held up to the National Committeemen as worthy of consideration, and they are reminded that as New York, of all the large cities, has never been honored by selection as the place for a convention, it should be so favored in a year in which there is not the slightest doubt about who is to be named for President, and many reasons for going to the greatest city of the country to make the ticket. As for Philadelphia, the New York opinion is that the convention might go to New York or to Chicago, but never to the Quaker City.
"If the convention is to go to a suburb of New York," said Gen. Howard Carroll, "send it to Brooklyn or Jersey City, but not to so inconvenient a suburb as Philadelphia."
Gen. Carroll said that New York had prepared to undergo an expense of $150,000 on account of the convention. If more money was necessary to assure the success of the convention, the men who were determined to secure the prise would not stop to any reasonable expense to justify New York's pretensions in trying to obtain an honor never yet accorded to it.
The most buoyant delegation of "boomers" to-day, and easily the most confident to-night are those from Philadelphia. They have come here in large numbers, have fitted up their room, which is advantageously located, with cheerful banners, and hospitable sentiments of welcome, and their boomers, headed by Mayor Ashbridge, have been unceasing in their efforts to induce the convention to renominate Mr. McKinley in the City of Brotherly Love. The Philadelphia confidence seems to have been inspired very largely by the report that a "deal" had been made with the opponents of the Payne resolution, calling for a reapportionment of delegates upon the basis of Republican votes cast in the last Presidential election, by which votes for Philadelphia were to be given for votes against reducing the number of Southern delegates to the National Convention.
While this arrangement, said to have been made, is denied by some of the leaders who have been mentioned as parties to it, the report unquestionably stimulated the advocates of Philadelphia. They have worked briskly since morning, only checked by occasional disquieting reports that came from friends of committeemen, who declared that all reports about pledges on any ground were to be received with caution. But the Philadelphia badges, dainty little affairs, easily pinned upon the coat, were to be seen everywhere.
Chicago is now fairly well represented by a committee that has not brought badges, that is not bidding for the convention, that is not apparently anxious to get it, but is very willing to receive it, and calmly confident that Chicago will be the choice after the representations of Philadelphia and New York have been fully heard. Early in the day the report was circulated that Chicago would make conditions to which the members of the National Committee could not listen, for a moment. The reported conditions were that Chicago would guarantee a convention hall at an expense of $25,000, and would bear other burdens at some cost, but that it was expected that a sufficient number of tickets would be demanded to enable the committee from Chicago to assure subscribers that they would be able to recoup from the sale of the tickets.
Mr. Sam Raymond, who is a leading man in the delegation of Chicago citizens, said to-night that he was the only man who could say what were the terms upon which Chicago wished to have the convention; that the report about the demand for tickets was so and not so. Chicago certainly expected to receive some tickets to the convention, if it provided the hall at its own expense. But it was not here to outbid anybody, and it was here to offer what it considered fair terms.
The prospect for the adoption by the National Committee of the much and long-talked-of Payne proposition is, according to Mr. Payne better than ever before. Indeed, Mr. Payne says that he has enough votes to put it through, and send it to the convention with a favorable report. Col. McClure of Arkansas, the leading opponent of it, indicates the weakness of the opposition by asserting that Payne has but twenty-three votes, which is only three less than a majority. Southern men who would not openly advocate the proposition admit that it is equitable and patterned after the common method of apportionment of representation.
There was a decidedly prominent "boom" to-day for Lieut. Gov. Woodruff for Vice President. The New York Republicans who were working with Mr. Woodruff to win the convention for their city, came in contact with it, and inspected it with smiles and complacency. Senator Hanna watched it float about the Arlington, but had no comment to make. Indeed, he has had no comment upon anything, being quite noncommital as to convention place, with the rumor that he, in sympathy with the Administration, is for Chicago without desiring to prejudice the chances of any other city.

THE FIGHT AGAINST GARDINER.

Deputy Attorney General and City Club Men in Conference.

Deputy Attorney General John C. Coyne was in the city yesterday, and for several hours was in conference with members of the City Club in reference to the charges which have been preferred against District Attorney Gardiner, and which will be heard by Ansley Wilcox of Buffalo, whom Gov. Roosevelt designated for this purpose.
Those present at yesterday's conference with Mr. Coyne were the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Fulton McMahon, Arthur F. Cosby, and James W. Pryor. The evidence which will be presented at the hearing was carefully gone over, and the case of the prosecution mapped out. Mr. Coyne will handle the case, as the Governor requested the Attorney General to take charge of the matter and prosecute the charges against the District Attorney.
Mr. Pryor said that the hearing probably would commence Jan. 3, if the trial of Roland B. Molineux is finished by that time.

Union League Club Meeting.

Secretary of War Elihu Root presided at the regular monthly meeting of the Union League Club last night. Ten new members, one of whom is Abner McKinley, were elected. The following committee was selected to nominate officers for next year: Robert M. Gallaway, George B. Fowler, Henry S. Wilson, Nathaniel A. Prentiss, James H. Dunham, George Blagden, and William Carpenter. It is announced that Mr. Root had refused to accept the nomination for President of the club for another term.

WISHES RULING ON FREE SILVER.

State of Colorado Will Carry Question Into Court.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 14.—After studying on their plans for months the United States Monetary League, with the aid of the State authorities, will test the law regarding free coinage. A. W. Rucker of Denver, President of the league, will conduct the suit. The case will come up by the United States Monetary League giving the State of Colorado as a present a solid silver brick of 100 ounces and representing $100 at par ratio.
The State thereupon will send the brick to the United States Mint at Washington with the demand that it be coined into 100 silver dollars.
"This demand, of course," says Mr. Rucker, "will be refused. Upon the refusal suit will be entered in the United States Supreme Court, for we have a right, under the Constitution, to demand that the bullion be coined. The question will be raised as to where the Constitution lands us. The suit will be brought in the name of the State of Colorado to secure more rapid action than otherwise would be given it."

HARVARD CLASS DAY OFFICERS.

W. A. M. Burden Elected First Marshal by the Senior Class.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 14.—The elections for the class day officers of the senior class at Harvard were held to-day. The polls will be open again to-morrow for the election of the various committees. The officers elected to-day are as follows:
First Marshal—W. A. M. Burden; Second Marshal—F. L. Higginson; Third Marshal—W. A. Boal; Secretary—Elliot Spalding; Orator—Bolling; Poet—Arensberg; Ivy Orator—Seasongood; Chorister—Swain; Odist—Brooks.
Burden is first in his class and Captain of this year's football team. Higginson of Boston is President of the Hasty Pudding Club and Captain of this year's and last year's crews. Boal plays left guard on the football team. He comes from Chicago. Spalding of Cambridge is manager of this year's football team and business manager of The Harvard Crimson. Bolling was on the Yale debating team last year, and is President of the Weld Boat Club. Swain played for two years on the 'Varsity football team, and is leader of the 'Varsity Glee Club.

Offers Free Coffee for Firemen.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Church Temperance Society, which maintains the "Owl" and "Wayside Inn" lunch wagons, and of which Mrs. Julia Bowdoin is President, has asked permission of the Fire Department to dispense free coffee to the firemen at serious fires which may occur this Winter. The matter has been referred to Chief Croker.

Divorce for Mrs. John F. Gaynor.

Justice Giegerich, in the Supreme Court, yesterday granted a decree of absolute divorce to Mrs. Carrie B. Gaynor from her husband, John F. Gaynor. He also awarded Mrs. Gaynor $10,000 in cash and $150 a month alimony. The Gaynors were married at the Coleman House on Sept. 2, 1890, by Alveret C. Preston. They have no children.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Rain, turning to snow, easterly winds, shifting to westerly.

Typical Winter weather prevailed last night, except in the Atlantic and East Gulf States, and marked high pressure and low temperature were general, except in the Upper Ohio Valley and lower lake region, which were covered by a moderate storm that had moved rapidly northeastward from the West Gulf Coast since yesterday morning. A temperature of 20 degrees below was recorded at Valentine, Neb., yesterday morning, and freezing weather extended into Central Texas. There have been general though mostly light snows in the Upper Mississippi Valley and lake region, and rains south of the Ohio River and in the West Gulf States. There were also light showers in the extreme Northwest. A marked depression is central off the North Pacific Coast, and there have been general rains on the coast as far south as Central California and also snow in the northern plateau.
It will be much colder to-day in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, with heavy frost in Northern Florida to-night and light frost in Central Florida. It will also be colder to-day on the Upper Ohio Valley, Middle Atlantic States, and New England, except in Maine. The storm on the North Pacific Coast will doubtless move eastward, but with diminished intensity on account of the close proximity of a marked high area in the British Northwest. The high area in connection with the general high pressure in the interior of the country will cause a continuance of the cold weather throughout the country for several days. It will rain to-day in the South Atlantic States, followed by clearing weather, rain in the Middle Atlantic and South New England States will turn into snow, and be followed by fair weather to-morrow. In Northern New England it will snow to-day and be generally fair to-morrow. Snow is also indicated for to-day in the extreme Northwest, Wyoming, and Western Colorado, probably extending to-morrow through Eastern Colorado and Kansas. On the Atlantic Coast easterly winds will shift to westerly by to-night, becoming fresh to brisk. Cold wave signals are displayed at Kalispel, Havre, Helena, Montana; Eastern Texas, except at Abilene, Ark.; Northern Louisiana, Vicksburg, and Western Tennessee.
The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	—Weather Bureau.— 1898.	1899.	TIMES. 1899.

THE PRESIDENT ATTACKED

Civil Service League Says He Failed to Keep His Promise.

WOULD NOT EXTEND THE RULES

Had Agreed, the Committee Asserts, to Add More Places to the Classified List Than Were Withdrawn.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 14.—At the opening meeting of the nineteenth annual convention of the National Civil Service League the league attacked the Administration of President McKinley in regard to the order of May 29, removing officers from the list. Secretary George McAneny of New York, in his report, said the league had attempted to find out the facts regarding certain violations of the rules of the service in the Treasury Department of the National Government. He had written, he said, to Secretary Gage for the information, and received a letter in reply, stating that it was not proper to give information to the public which was of a private nature. The matter was taken up by the league, and the following resolution, offered by Charles J. Bonaparte of Maryland, was unanimously adopted:
The league pronounces the action of the Treasury Department in refusing access to public records relating to matters of public concern a violation of the undoubted right of citizens in a free country to learn from official sources how faithfully the public servants they pay administer the laws. The force of the reason assigned for this refusal is gravely impaired by the fact that similar information had been previously furnished to the league by the department under the present Secretary of the Treasury. This refusal exposes to reasonable suspicion the good faith of the officials responsible for it, and suggests the existence of abuses which the records withheld from inspection might disclose, and we demand that this unworthy policy of concealment and secrecy be abandoned.
The Secretary then gave a review of the conversation between President McKinley and a committee from the league, sent to him concerning the order of May 29, when so many offices were removed from the civil service lists. The Secretary said it was the understanding of the league with President McKinley that in case it became necessary for him to issue this order he would add at least as many offices to the classified service as he was compelled to remove. Mr. McKinley was asked, the Secretary said, if he would not comply with a request of this kind and replied as follows:
"It is my intention to include a good many more than those excluded."
"Up to the present time no new additions have been made, which is a matter of great surprise to the league," reported the Secretary. "Later another letter was addressed to the President, calling his attention to the promise which he had made the committee on a former occasion." This communication, which was sent to President McKinley Nov. 16, and not heretofore made public, was in part, as follows:
"We, the undersigned, members of the Executive Committee of the National Civil Service Reform League, respectfully invite your attention to the following facts:
"In January, 1899, a special committee appointed by the league called upon you for the purpose of remonstrating against your contemplated executive order for excluding certain places from the classified service, and to this committee you cap read your intention of adding other places to the service greater in number than those excluded. After the promulgation of your order of May 29, under date of June 3 this special committee, consisting of William Dudley Foulke, Richard Henry Dana, and Herbert Welsh, addressed to you the following letter:
"The undersigned, as members of a committee of the National Civil Service Reform League, which waited upon you in January, 1899, in regard to your then proposed order for excluding certain places from the classified service, beg to remind you of the fact that in our conversation you expressed the hope that if you found it necessary to make these exclusions you would at the same time include within the classified list, subject to competitive examination, at least as large a number of places as those omitted, so that it might appear that no backward step had been taken.
"To this you replied that it was your intention to include a great many more places than those excluded and that you hoped to make the order so comprehensive that the reform of the civil service would then be so complete that nothing further would need to be done in regard to it.
"Our disappointment was therefore great when, upon the appearance of your order, we found not only that the number of exclusions was far greater than had been previously supposed, but that there was none of the inclusions which you had asserted as it was your intention to make.
"We are not hope that it is still your purpose to make some substantial and important extensions of the present classified system."
We believe that the large number of exclusions made by your order of May 29 from the requirement of competitive examination has been injurious not only to the civil service of the Government, but to the country at large, and we hope to satisfy you of this by the results of certain investigations which we intend to lay before you at an early date, and ask you for a reconsideration of that order.
We beg leave to inquire whether we may not look for the additions to the classified service promised in the Republican platform of 1896, and which we were then assured it was your intention to make and, if so, whether it will be agreeable to you to state at what time such additions may be expected.
This was signed by George McAneny, Secretary; Carl Schurz, Richard Henry Dana, and eighteen others.
Along with the communication to the President was submitted the following letter received by Mr. McAneny:

Executive Mansion, Nov. 16, 1899.
My Dear Sir: I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of the letter of the 10th inst., signed by yourself and other members of the National Civil Service Reform League, and to say that it will be brought to the attention of the President.
J. PORTER,
Secretary to the President.

Reports were then submitted by local associations from a number of cities.
This evening President Carl Schurz delivered in the course of which he vigorously denounced the President's attitude toward civil service reform.

JUSTICE IN CHINA'S DEMAND.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Asiatic Association, held yesterday at 65 Wall Street, resolutions were adopted in regard to the proposed revision of the Chinese tariff and of the treaty of Tientsin. The preamble recognizes the justice of China's demand for an increase of customs dues, which were fixed on the basis of the exchange value of silver in 1858. The resolutions set forth, however, that in making proper concessions to the financial necessities of the Chinese Empire the United States should demand a strict observance on the part of the Government of China of the agreement made in reg

PRESIDENT AT MT. VERNON

Mr. McKinley Eulogizes the Character of Washington.

MASONS JOIN IN CEREMONIES

Many High Government Officials Take Part in Commemorating the Great Patriot's First Centenary.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The most interesting feature of the ceremonies at Mount Vernon to-day in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Washington was the speech of President McKinley in eulogy of the character and services of the great statesman. Masons of high degree from all over the United States and Canada, Senators and Representatives in Congress, high officials of the Government, and distinguished private citizens were participants and spectators of the solemn service.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY SPEAKS.

The President said:

"We have met to participate in a service commemorative of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. Here in his old home, which he loved so well and which the patriotic women of the country have guarded with loving hands, exercises are conducted under the auspices of the great fraternity of Masons, which a century ago planned and executed the solemn ceremonial which attended the Father of His Country to his tomb. The lodge in which he was initiated, and the one over which he afterward presided as Worshipful Master, accorded positions of honor at his obsequies, are to-day represented here in token of profound respect to the memory of their most illustrious member and beloved brother.

"Masons throughout the United States testify anew their reverence for the name of Washington and the inspiring example of his life. Distinguished representatives are here from all the Grand Lodges of the country to render the ceremonies as dignified and impressive as possible and most cordial greetings have come from across our borders and from beyond the sea.

"Not alone in this country, but throughout the world, have Masons taken interest in the observation of this centennial anniversary. The fraternity justly claims the immortal patriot as one of its members; the whole human family acknowledges him as one of its greatest benefactors. Public bodies, patriotic societies, and other organization, our citizens everywhere, have esteemed it a privilege to-day to pay their tribute to his memory and to the splendor of his accomplishments in the advancement of justice and liberty among men.

"'His fair fame, secure in its immortality, shall shine through countless ages with undiminished lustre.'

TRIBUTE TO HIS SAGACITY.

"The struggling Republic, for which Washington was willing to give his life, and for which he ever freely spent his fortune, and which at all times was the object of his most earnest solicitude, has steadily and wonderfully developed along the lines which his sagacity and foresight carefully planned. It has stood every trial, and at the dawn of a new century is stronger than ever to carry forward its mission of liberty. During all the intervening years it has been true, forever true, to the precepts of the Constitution which he and his illustrious colleagues framed for its guidance and government. He was the National architect, says Bancroft the historian, and but for him the Nation could not have achieved its independence, could not have formed its union, could not have put the Federal Government into operation. He had neither precedent nor predecessor. His work was original and constructive, and has successfully stood the severest tests. He selected the site for the capital of the Republic, he founded and gave it the name of the Federal City, but the commission substituted the name of Washington as the more fitting, and to be a perpetual recognition of the services of the Commander in Chief of the Continental Army, the President of the convention which framed the Constitution, and the first President of the Republic. More than seventy millions of people acknowledge allegiance to the flag which he made triumphant. The Nation is his best eulogist and his noblest monument.

"I have been deeply interested and touched by the sentiments of his contemporaries, uttered a hundred years ago on the occasion of his death.

"The Rev. Walter King of Norwich, Conn., in the course of an eloquent eulogy delivered in that city on Jan. 5, 1800, said in part: 'By one mighty effort of manly resolution we were born anew, and declared our independence. Now commenced the bloody contest for everything we held dear. The same Almighty Being by whose guidance we were hitherto conducted beheld us with compassion and saw what we needed—a pilot, a leader in the enterprise we had undertaken. He called for Washington, already prepared, anointed him as His servant with regal dignity, and put into his hands the control of all our defensive operations.

CHARACTER OF THE MAN.

"'But here admiration suppresses utterance. Your own minds must fill out the actual character of the man. A description of the warlike skill, the profound wisdom, the prudence, the heroism, and integrity which he displayed in the character of the Commander in Chief would suffer materially in hands like mine. But this I may say—the eyes of all our American Israel were placed upon him as their savior, under the direction of Heaven, and they were not disappointed.'

"The Rev. Nathan Strong, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church in Hartford, spoke as follows on Dec. 27, 1799: 'He was as much the angel of peace as of war; as much respected as deeply reverenced in the political cabinet for a luminous coolness of disposition, whereby party jealousy became enlightened and ashamed of itself, as he was for a coolness of command in the dreadful moment when empires hung suspended on the fate of battle. His opinions became the opinion of public bodies, and every man was pleased with himself when he found he thought like Washington. Under the auspices of this great warrior, who was formed by the Providence of God to defend his country, the war was ended and America ranked among the nations. He who might have been a monarch retired to his own Vernon, unclothed of all authority, to enjoy the blessing of being a free, private citizen. This was a strange sight, and gave a new triumph to human virtue—a triumph that hath never been exceeded in the history of the world, except it was by his second recess, which was from the Presidency of the United States.'

"And on the day preceding, Dec. 26, 1799, in the course of his memorable funeral oration before both houses of Congress, Major Gen. Lee, then a Representative from the State of Virginia, gave utterance to the noble sentiment, as forceful to-day as in those early years of our National life: 'To the horrid din of battle sweet peace succeeded, and our virtuous chief, mindful only of the common good, in a moment tempting personal aggrandizement, hushed the discontent of growing sedition, and, surrendering his power into the hands from which he had received it, converted his sword into a plowshare, teaching an admiring world that to be truly great you must be truly good.'

ADMIRATION FOR HIM GROWS.

"While strong with his own generation, he is stronger even in the judgment of the generations which have followed. After a lapse of a century he is better appreciated, more perfectly understood, more thoroughly venerated and loved than when he lived. He remains an ever-increasing influence for good in every part and sphere of action of the Republic. He is recognized as not only the most farsighted statesman of his generation, but as having had almost prophetic vision. He built not alone for his own time, but for the great future, and pointed the rightful solution of many of the problems which were to arise in the years to come.

"The Nation needs at this moment the help of his wise example. In dealing with our vast responsibilities we turn to him. We invoke the counsel of his life and character and courage. We summon his precepts, that we may keep his pledges to maintain justice and law, education and morality, and civil and religious liberty in every part of our country—the new as well as the old."

FORMAL CEREMONIES.

The formal ceremonies were elaborately planned and successfully carried out. They were conducted by the Masonic bodies and by the Red Men of the United States. The movement for the day's observance originated in 1893 with the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of Colorado, the proposition being made by Most Worshipful William D. Wright, Grand Master of Colorado, who was present to witness the carrying into effect of his long-cherished idea. Charge of the ceremonies incident to to-day's commemoration was placed in the hands of the Masons of Virginia, it being in the Old Dominion that Washington was obligated as a Master Mason, and there that he participated enthusiastically in Masonic work and observances.

The officers of the Grand Lodge of Virginia and the membership of Fredericksburg Lodge, in which Washington was made a Mason, and of Washington-Alexandria Lodge, over which he presided as Worshipful Master, had the chief part in the duty of seeing that to-day's observances were appropriate. That the duty was well performed was evidenced by the solemnity and beauty of the ceremonies and by the immense concourse of Masons present. Thousands were in attendance from all parts of the country, and almost every jurisdiction in the United States and a few from foreign countries were represented by some of their grand officers and members.

The visiting Masons, many accompanied by the ladies of their families, congregated in Washington early to-day, and escorted by the Masonic bodies of the District of Columbia, headed by the Grand Lodge of the district, made the pilgrimage to Mount Vernon by boat. The Virginia Masons assembled at Alexandria and thence, escorted by Fredericksburg Lodge and Washington-Alexandria Lodge, as bodies, proceeded to Mount Vernon, also by boat.

At 10 o'clock President McKinley, himself an enthusiastic Mason, accompanied by Secretary of State Hay, Secretary of the Treasury Gage, Secretary of the Navy Long, Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, and Postmaster General Smith of the Cabinet; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen, Major Gen. Miles, Adjt. Gen. Corbin, Secretary Porter, Assistant Secretary Cortelyou, Major John A. Johnston, and Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, Past Grand Master of the State, left Washington on a special electric train for Mount Vernon, arriving there at 11. The Presidential party was greeted by Grand Master Duke of Virginia and by him was escorted to the mansion.

It was nearly an hour and a half afterward before all of the steamers bearing the Masonic bodies arrived. After the President and his Cabinet had reviewed them from a platform on the east front of the mansion, a procession was formed and moved, as on the day of Gen. Washington's funeral, Dec. 18, 1799, to the old vault, where the remains were first deposited. There, in the immediate presence of the grand officers of the various States and the assembled Masons, solemn funeral rites were conducted.

A dirge by the Third Cavalry band was followed by the invocation, preached by the Right Rev. A. M. Randolph, Bishop of the Southern Episcopal Church of Virginia. After music by an octet of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, Grand Master A. A. Burnand of Colorado delivered an oration on the life and work of Washington, laying particular stress upon his Masonic life and accomplishments.

CEREMONIES AT THE TOMB.

The procession re-formed and moved then to the tomb where the remains of Washington and those of his family lie now. The tomb was magnificently decorated with flags and festoons of evergreens and flowers. Here the beautiful and impressive Masonic services were conducted. The Grand Masters of the thirteen original States formed in line, facing the representatives of the other jurisdictions, the Grand Lodge of Virginia and visiting brethren standing in a semi-circle, facing the entrance to the tomb with joined hands. Prayer was offered by the Rev. G. H. Ray, D. D., Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Virginia.

Then the Grand Master of Virginia called upon each of the jurisdictions of the thirteen original States, the jurisdictions of the Western States, and those of Canada, Belgium, and Nova Scotia for messages and tributes sent by them, and all responded.

Then the Grand Master of the District of Columbia deposited within the tomb the lambskin apron, as a token of innocence; the Grand Master of Missouri deposited the white glove, as a token of friendship, and the Grand Master of California deposited the evergreen, as an emblem of the Masonic faith in the resurrection of the body and the immortality of the soul.

Scores of beautiful wreaths and bunches of evergreens were then deposited within the tomb, one of the most beautiful tokens, an immense wreath of ivy immortelles and acacia blossoms, being offered by President McKinley.

The procession returned to the east front of the mansion, where President McKinley, introduced by Grand Master Duke, delivered the oration.

The President was interrupted frequently by applause, and at the close of his oration he was cheered heartily. The exercises at the mansion were concluded with a benediction pronounced by Brother Edward H. Calisch, rabbi of Beth Ahaba synagogue of Richmond, Va.

RED MEN PAY TRIBUTE.

At 3 o'clock a delegation of the Improved Order of Red Men, in charge of the Great Incohonee, George E. Green of Binghamton, N. Y., and Charles H. Litchman of Marblehead, Mass., arrived at Mount Vernon to pay the tribute of 220,000 Red Men to the memory of Washington. He was one of the founders of the Sons of Liberty, to which the Red Men trace back their origin through varying names. The chiefs to officiate at the tomb were selected by Great Incohonee Green, who appointed as master of ceremonies Urban H. Hester of Ohio, Past Grand Sachem.

Among the distinguished chiefs present were Judge Robert T. Daniels, Griffin, Ga.; Charles C. Conley, Philadelphia; George W. Lindsay, Baltimore; Dr. William Hancock, Philadelphia; Andrew J. Paton, Danvers, Mass.; George T. Fowler and John W. Loudenslager, Baltimore; John C. Bell, Pikesville, Md.; J. Guest King, Annapolis, Md., and Josep Maris, Wilmington, Del.

After Chief Nester had read the call for the observance of the day and the Great Prophet Robert T. Daniels had invoked the great spirit, Acting Great Incohonee Litchman pronounced the oration upon Washington. It was an inspiring tribute, exquisite in thought and diction, and quite worthy of its great subject.

He was followed by the Great Chief of Records, Charles H. Conley, with a beautiful message to the Red Men of the world. In conclusion, he deposited within the tomb a handsome silk flag on a standard to which was attached four ribbons of the colors of the order—green, orange, blue, and scarlet—respectively inscribed: "1799—George Washington—1899," "December 14, 1899," "Great Council, United States," and "Improved Order of Red Men." A great wreath of red immortelles was then deposited within the tomb as a "fit emblem in our belief in that immortality of the soul which rises superior to all the ills of life and, through the bright blessing of hope, gives us promise of eternal joy."

Dry Goods Merchant Kills Himself.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 14.—William E. Clarke, a member of the dry goods firm of Daniel Miller & Co. of this city, committed suicide this morning by shooting himself through the head. He was walking along Chase Street, near Cathedral Street, when he suddenly pulled out a revolver, placed the muzzle against the back of his head, and blew out his brains. Mr. Clarke recently suffered an attack of the grip, which is thought to have unsettled his mind. He was sixty years of age. A widow, two sons, and a daughter survive him.

DEPEW ON WASHINGTON

Delivers the Oration at Exercises in the National Capital.

THE FIRST PRESIDENT'S TASK

He "United Liberty with Law, and Liberty with Union"—No Flaw in His Public or Private Life.

WASHINGTON Dec. 14.—The Great Council of the United States of the Improved Order of Red Men held exercises in Convention Hall this evening to commemorate the centenary of the death of George Washington.

Great Incohonee George E. Green of New York presided, and speeches were made by the Chairman, Past Great Incohonee Charles H. Litchman of Massachusetts, and Great Prophet Robert T. Daniel of Georgia.

The orator of the evening was Senator Chauncey M. Depew of New York. He was heartily applauded as he rose to speak, after being introduced as "the greatest orator of his kind." His address was in part as follows:

"Washington's career demonstrates the value of character. In genius and acquirement in several lines Hamilton, Jefferson, and Adams were his superiors. Each of them had a large following, but the following formed a faction. All parties reposed unquestioning confidence in the uprightness and unselfish patriotism of Washington. 'There is but one character which keeps them in awe,' said Edmund Randolph. 'A favorite fad of the leveling up by universal education in our day is the one that no man is indispensable to the people, the army, the Government, a cause, or an industry. But in the clearer view of a century's retrospect we now see that the death of Washington at any time between 1776 and 1797 would have changed the destiny and delayed, if not destroyed, the development of this Nation.

FRAMING OF THE CONSTITUTION.

"From the evacuation of New York by the British in 1783 until the adoption of the Constitution in 1788 were the trial years of representative government. The Continental Congress was without authority to meet the necessities of the young Confederacy, and the jealousies of the colonies threatened chaos and ruin. It was Washington who summoned the conference which resulted in the calling of the convention to frame a Constitution. That body sitting with closed doors, its members full of local prejudices and antagonistic views, the fierce passions of sectional strife surging about its place of meeting, must create institutions which would meet the critical conditions of the hour, and have elasticity and expansiveness enough for the growth and development of a republic of continental area and vast population. History gave them the precedents of a democracy like Athens, which was impossible in a large country, or royal authority, either absolute or mildly checked. It told the disheartening story of the leagues between nations and cities which had ended in fraternal strife and ruin.

"The journal of this majestic convention was confided to Washington and not opened until thirty-three years afterward. Each succeeding generation has scanned its pages with eager interest, but little is revealed of the mighty debates of these State builders. We know that Washington was its President, and the weight of his all-powerful influence was for a Union of States in a government strong enough to resist internal dissensions and repel foreign foes. When the Constitution was perfected a new and novel form of government was presented to a wondering and skeptical world. No King, no aristocracy, no classes, no State Church, a Supreme Court which could declare void acts of Congress, decrees of the President, and laws of the several States; paramount Federal power, with the sovereignty of the States, aroused incredulity at home and contempt abroad. The large colonies feared loss of influence and the small ones loss of independence. Washington called upon his comrades of the Continental Army and his associates in revolutionary conventions to save liberty by union. In the convention of each State his name and influence were potent with weak or wavering delegates. Washington favoring the adoption of the Constitution carried eleven States for its ratification, and the election of Washington as first President of the United States brought in the other two.

WASHINGTON'S GIGANTIC TASK.

"Washington knew neither envy nor jealousy. He summoned to his Cabinet the ablest and most distinguished men. Hamilton was the advocate of centralization, Jefferson of State rights, and Adams and the others of different and antagonistic views of the prerogatives of the President and the powers of Congress. To build a Nation out of chaos and to hold up and hold together the young Republic until stable foundations could be laid under it was the gigantic task of Washington. The waves of party passions surged against him, intrigues and conspiracies were formed to undermine him, and Jay and Hamilton and other supporters of his policies were stoned or burned in effigy; secret correspondence and the vilest charges and insinuations inspired by members of his official family and published broadcast in the press were used to break the trust the people had in him. Often discouraged, but never disheartened; often aggrieved, but never angry, calmly, patiently, and heroically he united liberty with law and liberty with union. He created public credit, found sources of revenue, promoted progress and energized development, and brought the new machinery of administration and its many departments into harmonious working, until by his genius and firmness the young Republic grew to be a Nation which inspired loyalty at home and commanded respect abroad.

"The French Revolution threatened to involve the world in war. The waves of its madness swept over the United States, and were followed by a passionate demand for an offensive and defensive alliance with France, which would have destroyed our Government. Washington alone grasped the perils of the situation, and remained calm and immovable.

HIS WORK COMPLETED.

"Eight years after the foreboding entry in his diary on accepting the Presidency he returned to Mount Vernon. His work was completed. He had given National life to the stately sentences on the parchment containing the Constitution. Elastic and indestructible institutions, principles, and policies were working harmoniously and smoothly for liberty and union, and National growth and grandeur. The pace had been so set for the perpetuity of the American Republic that neither party passions, nor sectional discord, nor civil war could destroy it or impair its glorious opportunities for its citizens and its inspiring example for peoples of other lands struggling for their rights.

"After forty-nine years devoted to the public service Washington was permitted by his grateful but reluctant countrymen to retire to the private station he so much coveted and his beloved Mount Vernon. In a century distinguished for brutal tyranny, reckless ambition, destructive party spirit and popular frenzy, the life and career of Washington first astonished and then won the admiration and reverence of the world. His home on the Potomac became a mecca, and pilgrims of royal birth, of great achievement, of passionate zeal to meet the foremost man and most exalted character of the ages came to pay him homage and to be received with cordial and gracious hospitality.

"From thence one hundred years ago today his spirit ascended to heaven, leaving his people in tears and his country draped in mourning. Europe joined in the universal sorrow. The British Channel fleet lowered their flags at half mast. Napoleon Bonaparte ordered that black crape should be suspended from all standards and flags for ten days, and arranged an imposing funeral ceremonial and testimonial oration. Lord Brougham, with characteristic clearness and eloquence, condensed the judgment of mankind. He said: 'It will be the duty of the historian and the sage of all nations to let no occasion pass of commemorating this illustrious man, and until time shall be no more will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and virtue be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington.'

THE HERITAGE OF AMERICANS.

"If the brightest intelligence, most hopeful spirit, and most brilliant imagination standing by the bier of Washington had predicted the results for a century of the experiment of government of the people, by the people, and for the people, his prophesies would have been commonplace compared with the marvelous blessings which to-night are the glorious heritage of Americans.

"Washington's Farewell Address is chart and compass for the twentieth as it has been for the nineteenth century. It is at once the sum and substance of the principles of our National development and perpetuity and the forecast of our fate. Its central idea is that the liberty and happiness of our people at home and our position among foreign nations is wholly dependent upon the preservation of the union of the States. For that idea a million of citizens shed their blood, and against it a half million died in battle, but the centennial of his death finds us a united people, and at every crossroads, and in every hamlet all over our land, the Stars and Stripes floating from the schoolhouses is eloquent testimony that the present and coming generations have one flag and one country. He advocated the maintenance of the public credit as essential to National prosperity.

"At one period and another, in times of industrial distress and mercantile troubles, wild schemes of finance, fiat money, and debased currency have captured the support or large sections of our citizens, but the century closes with the credit of the United States in the first rank among Nations, and our faith and honor untarnished. Washington advised free, popular education, by which law and liberty should rest upon intelligence, and the most complete and beneficent system of common and high schools embrace all our youth. He warned against party passion rising to revolution, and when the partisans of a defeated candidate for the Presidency believed him wronged in the count, the strife was settled not by civil war, but by a high court of arbitration. He was strenuous that our Government should form no permanent alliance with any European power, and that we should keep out of European policies, conflicts, and politics. We always have been, and we always will be, free from such entanglements, and an effective treaty of offensive and defensive alliance could never be confirmed. He zealously impressed the necessity and lesson of religion and morality. We have abolished slavery, and extirpated polygamy, and the Churches never had so strong a hold on the faith and understanding of the people.

ASSIMILATION OF ALL RACES.

"American liberty assimilates all races which come under its influence and authority. It not only converts the immigrants from every land into good citizens, but it has made the territory of Spanish Florida, of French Louisiana, and of Mexican Texas, California, Arizona, and New Mexico the safe seats and centres of material prosperity and political power. Its educating and uplifting force is already producing beneficient results in Cuba, Puerto Rico, and Hawaii. In less than one generation it will change the conditions of brigandage and anarchy, produced by centuries of oppression, into those of enlightened self-government. With the suppression of the insurrection and the extension of the authority of the United States over the Philippine Islands, will come to a people who have been long ruled by force and fraud American law and justice and American recognition and administration of the rights and remedies for the wrongs of every individual. Protection for life and property and the equality of all before the law breed the habit of loyalty to order and the faculty for self-government. Peace and prosperity which follow will substitute public spirit and patriotic citizenship for secret police and hostile garrisons.

"The peril in the nineteenth century was disunion, that of the twentieth will be congestion. The productive power of invention, steam and electricity create a surplus which endangers the health, happiness, and lives of the people of Europe and America. But dependent races of the Orient and of Africa, and the stimulating processes of Western civilization upon their wants present limitless markets. The United States which stood on sufferance at the doors of king's palaces at the death of Washington is entering upon its hundredth anniversary as an equal in the affairs of the world, among the great powers of Europe. At Manila we are at the door of the East, and none can close it against us.

GOOD-WILL FOR BRITAIN.

"The intensely hostile feeling of 1790 toward Great Britain has developed in 1900 into mutual respect and cordial good-will. Without any alliance, without any violation of the sacred warning of Washington against European entanglements, there is an emulous and friendly rivalry in commerce and a (rank) sympathy in many purposes and aspirations which make for the peace of the world and are the hope of the future for civilization and humanity under the guidance of English-speaking peoples.

"In the fingers of time monuments and reputations decay and crumble. Statesmen, soldiers, authors, and orators fill the stage for a period and gradually drop out of sight and memory. A few worthies of the eighteenth century live in the admiration or affection of their own countries. Of them all only Washington is in the thought and reverence of the whole world. The resistless harvester in his annual rounds shoulders his scythe as he passes before this beneficent intelligence and pure fame, salutes, and marches on. We, his countrymen, after a century, whose searchlight has revealed the vices and weaknesses of our heroes and made our ideals common clay, find no flaw in his public or private life, no sentence in the many volumes of his utterances which we would blot out. The orator who stands in my place in the coming centuries to recount the marvelous story of the great Republic, to recall its architects and builders, will find the wisdom and example for its guidance and growth in the achievements, character, and life of George Washington."

Exercises at the Jumel Mansion.

Services commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington were held in the old Jumel Mansion, Edgecombe Avenue and One Hundred and Sixty-first Street, now the home of Gen. Ferdinand P. Earle, yesterday afternoon. The services were conducted under the auspices of the Washington Heights Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. Ferdinand P. Earle is Regent. The meeting was held in the room occupied by Washington as his council chamber from Sept. 16 to Oct. 21, 1776, while he made the house his headquarters after the battle of Harlem Heights, Sept. 16, 1776. Prayer was offered by the Chaplain of the chapter, the Rev. Dr. John T. Pavey, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and addresses were delivered by the Regent, Mrs. Earle; by the Secretary, Mrs. Emily Fay, and by the Historian, Mrs. Eliza Jumel Cary, granddaughter of Mme. Jumel. During the ceremonies a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the porch of the mansion by Gen. Earle's son.

Founders and Patriots of America.

The New York Society of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America commemorated the centenary of the death of Washington by a largely attended meeting at the Hotel Manhattan last night. Charles A. Hoyt, the newly elected Governor, presided and made an address. The Rev. Daniel F. Warren, D. D., presented appropriate resolutions on the death of Gen. Washington, which were unanimously adopted. George J. Corey, Deputy Naval Officer of the Port of New York, gave a discourse illustrated with views, on "The Three Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers—England, Holland, and America."

Exercises in the Schools.

The National flag was half masted on all the public schools of this city yesterday, and exercises commemorative of the centenary of the death of Washington were held from 2 until 3 o'clock. The programme followed in most of the schools was the singing of patriotic songs, orations upon the life of Washington, and the reading of extracts from the proceedings of Congress at the time of his death.

At the Morristown Headquarters.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Dec. 14.—The headquarters of the Washington Association, which house Gen. Washington occupied as headquarters during the Winter his army encamped here, were draped in mourning, to note the one hundredth anniversary of his death. At noon a salute of sixteen guns was fired and the church bells were tolled. To-night a public memorial service was held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

IN HONOR OF WASHINGTON

Anniversary of His Death Commemorated by Patriotic Societies.

THE SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S

Dr. Hutton's Eulogy Before the Order of the Cincinnati and Sons of the Revolution.

Imposing ceremonial marked the service in commemoration of the death of Washington, held under the auspices of the General Society of the Cincinnati and the New York State Society of the Sons of the Revolution in St. Paul's Chapel yesterday. While the service was in progress a salute of 100 guns, fired at one minute intervals, thundered from Castle William. The chapel had been decorated both inside and out for the occasion. Washington's pew was hidden completely by two large flags, stretched across the seats, and the picture of the arms of the United States above it was enframed in flags. The picture of the arms of the State of New York over Gov. Clinton's pew on the opposite side of the church was also decked with flags. Among the decorations were the Bourbon flags of France.

While the galleries were filling with women and other spectators privileged by ticket to enter the church, the members of the two societies assembled in the vestry house in Church Street. At 11:45 o'clock a detail of six men from the Veteran Corps of Artillery, constituting the Society of the War of 1812, under command of Adjt. Howland Pell; a detail of six men from the Seventh Regiment of the National Guard, under command of Sergts. Reginald L. Foster and Lyman G. Fiske, and a detail of six men from Squadron A, (dismounted,) the whole force being marshaled by Regimental Adjt. Falls of the Seventh Regiment, formed a guard of honor at the west porch. The two societies then marched in procession to the church through the churchyard in the following order:

Grand Marshal John Butterfield Holland, the committee of the General Society of the Cincinnati, composed of Talbot Olyphant, New York, (Chairman;) Asa Bird Gardiner, New York, (Secretary General ex officio;) Thornton K. Lothrop, Massachusetts; George W. Olney, Rhode Island; Charles Isham, Connecticut; Richard Dale, Pennsylvania; Henry Rutman Duval, Maryland; Heth Lawton, Virginia; Alfred Bowring Hardee, South Carolina, and Frederic Wolcott Jackson, New Jersey; the committee of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, with Frederick S. Tallmadge as Chairman. Next came the Wardens, Vestrymen, and Vicars of Trinity Parish, headed by William H. Vibbert.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Morgan Dix, rector of Trinity Church, Chaplain of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, commandant of the Military Society of 1812; the Rev. Maclean Holmes Hutton, Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J., General Chaplain of the Society of the Cincinnati; the Rev. F. L. Humphreys, Canon of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, General Chaplain of the Society of the Cincinnati, Chaplain of the Veteran Corps of Artillery, and the Rev. William M. Geer, Vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, assisted by many other clergymen. It opened with a processional, the hymn "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand." This was followed by prayers, the reading of special collects for the Society of the Cincinnati and the Sons of the Revolution, the reading of Scripture, and the singing of the "Te Deum."

The oration was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Hutton.

Upon the career of Washington, the ideal American, he said, it was not necessary to dwell at length. He continued:

"If you look for traces of his influence in his own day and in our own time, how his influence of character shines out. In his services to the Republic he has left reasons for thankfulness that he was the first man and the first gentleman of the Nation. There is reason to question whether our cause might not have been lost had we not had him for our military leader.

"When the Constitution was drafted, it was Washington who spoke the word which secured the ratio of representation in the Government of the United States. It is clear enough now that, had the ratio been different, the history of this country would have been different, and chaos would have come again. Nor should we forget that, as the first President, he vetoed the passing of a law the result of which would have been to make us a conglomeration of weak republics, instead of what we have become, a puissant world power.

"Because of his character, because of his priceless services to his country, because he is an inspiration to us all, his name is recalled this day. He lives as the veritable ideal and visible materiality of the spirit of our fathers. May this spirit never leave us or our children, never, never."

At the conclusion of the service, as the assembly filed out, the organist played Dudley Buck's concert variations of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

A painful incident occurred while the service was in progress. James P. Allen of 322 St. Nicholas Avenue, a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, was stricken with apoplexy, and had to be carried out. An ambulance was summoned from Hudson Street Hospital, and after being attended to by the surgeon, he recovered sufficiently to be able to return home in a carriage.

NAPOLEON ON WASHINGTON.

His Estimate Quoted Before Daughters of the Cincinnati.

The Daughters of the Cincinnati celebrated the anniversary of Washington's death at Delmonico's yesterday afternoon by listening to speeches, singing "America," and enjoying a subsequent collation. Prof. William M. Sloane of Columbia University, the first speaker, dwelt on Napoleon's ordination of ceremonies in honor of Washington just after the great American's death, and of the oration delivered on that occasion, which was Napoleon's composition.

"In this oration," said Prof. Sloane, "he said that George Washington was a man solid, rather than brilliant, wise rather than enthusiastic; that the prevailing character of his mind was judgment rather than enthusiasm; that he was moved by forethought rather than rapture; that after taming the foolish enthusiasm and strife of all parties, his work complete, he had laid aside all earthly weapons, taking only to himself such rights and privileges as belonged to a citizen, and retired to private life.

"The estimate of George Washington's character made by Napoleon is, on the whole, the one by which posterity ought to judge him. It should be added that he was in the very highest degree a historical man and not an idealist. He knew the past well, and he understood perfectly the present. He never undertook anything beyond the capacity of the people of his time. Every one of his tasks he performed a little better than the previous one, because he had his feet on the solid ground of knowing what was and what was not possible. Such greatness as this is superlative greatness."

The Rev. Dr. Huntington, rector of Grace Church, said that Washington's chief characteristics were self-respect and absolute honesty. "It is fitting," said he, "that his statue should stand on the steps of the Sub-Treasury—the spot where he took the oath of office—an evidence of fidelity, a witness that this country means to keep its promises."

Among those present were Miss Fannie Schuyler, Mrs. Montgomery Schuyler, Mrs. Samuel Sloan, John S. White, Richard H. Greene, Mrs. Asa Bird Gardiner, Miss Julia Delafield, and Mrs. Charles F. Roe.

The Order of Foreign Wars.

The sixth annual meeting of the Military Order of Foreign Wars was held last night at Sherry's. The annual dinner will be given on Jan. 11. The ticket elected contains the following names: Commander—David Banks; Vice Commander—Brig. Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, United States Volunteers; Secretary—Charles Palmer Robinson; Treasurer—George Livingston Nichols; Register—Dwight Lathrop Elmendorf; Judge Advocate—Samuel R. Betts; Surgeon—Delevan Bloodgood, Medical Director United States Navy; Chaplain—The Rev. Morgan Dix, D. D., LL. D.

Masons Observe the Day.

The centennial of the death of Washington was celebrated at the Communication of Perfect Ashlar Lodge No. 611, F. A. M., held last evening at their rooms in Terrace Garden. The ceremonies were conducted by the Master, Dr. C. G. Fischlowitz.

UNION ALUMNI AT DINNER

Their Twelfth Annual Reunion Held at the Savoy.

RUSSELL SAGE NOT PRESENT

Financier Was to Have Replied to a Toast, but Did Not Appear—President Raymond Heard.

The Union College Alumni Association of this city held its twelfth annual reunion at the Hotel Savoy last evening. About 115 persons attended. A business meeting, at which Dr. Daniel M. Stimson, President of the association, was re-elected for another year, was followed by a dinner, at which he acted as toastmaster. In the opening address he alluded to the recent death of Robert C. Alexander, who was an enthusiastic Union alumnus, and advocated the idea of a permanent memorial to Mr. Alexander as a present to his Alma Mater.

There were several speeches, but one that had been looked forward to with an unusual degree of interest had to be cut out of the programme. Russell Sage had promised to come and discuss "Old Times," recalling the days of his youth in the neighborhood of Schenectady, where Union College is situated, for the benefit of the alumni, but a sudden cold at the eleventh hour spoiled this plan, and the veteran financier lost an opportunity to make his mark as a post-prandial orator. Gen. Daniel Butterfield, who had gained the promise of Mr. Sage's attendance, declared that he would make an effort to get Mr. Sage at next year's dinner.

Charles R. Miller responded to the first toast, "Our Country." He advocated the policy of expansion, and declared that the recent remarkable advance in commerce was not the sort of thing to induce the Nation's active business men to listen to the advice of those who preach anti-imperialism and the danger of the President's setting up an empire.

President Andrew V. V. Raymond of Union College was then introduced to respond to "Old Union." He declared that the master passion of America to-day was a desire for wealth, bringing with it a tendency to narrow education to practical lines, and that this condition emphasized the value of the college in broadening men's minds and lifting them above sordid affairs.

"The most casual observer," said he, "must recognize that our very prosperity is complicating Government problems; and when, in addition, he considers the outreach of our National life within the last two years and the obligations thus assumed, he is compelled to acknowledge the supreme importance of governmental questions in the thought and effort of the American people. Responsibility for Hawaii, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Philippines has introduced questions which cannot be settled by the multiplication of our factories and the increase of our commerce; questions of human rights, of National duty; questions of citizenship, which call for large intelligence, comprehensive knowledge, broad sympathies—in a word, the higher education represented by the American college."

Gen. Daniel Butterfield was next introduced to explain the absence of Mr. Sage. He read the following letter, which he had received while at the table:

I regret that I cannot be present. I am suffering from a severe cold of a week's standing, and severe hoarseness, which makes it prudent and proper for me not to be out. I regret this disappointment. Yours truly,

RUSSELL SAGE.

Ex-Postmaster Gen. Thomas L. James, whose theme was "Our Times," paid high tributes to Union Alumni, one of whom, ex-Senator Warner Miller, was at the banquet. Of the other, Postmaster Gen. Charles Emory Smith, Mr. James said that he was probably the most brilliant member of President McKinley's Cabinet, and that his recent report showed him to be great in administration. Mr. James said he had heard some suggestions of Union College moving to Albany. To do so, said he, would be a sacrilege.

Gen. Wager Swayne responded to the toast "The Army and Navy."

WOULD KEEP DR. PURVES.

Congregation Hopes to Retain His Services in Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 14.—Dr. George T. Purves, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, has not yet indicated what he will do relative to the call to be extended to him by the Fifth Avenue Church of New York City.

The Church here has adopted resolutions renewing expressions of loyalty and affection. The resolutions declare the belief that the field which he now occupies in Princeton is one of no less importance than a large city pastorate, and expresses the hope that Dr. Purves will decide to remain in Princeton.

TREASURER INGERSOLL MISSING.

Accounts of Tompkins County Official Found to be Short.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 14.—The whereabouts of Charles Ingersoll, the Treasurer of Tompkins County, who has been missing for the past two days, had not been learned at a late hour to-night.

The Board of Supervisors at its executive session this afternoon passed a resolution requesting Gov. Roosevelt to remove Mr. Ingersoll from office. Chairman Van Ostrand of the board said that Ingersoll's accounts had been investigated with the result that a sh

Rain Coats for Men and Women

Reliability counts most of all in the buying of mackintoshes. It is a very true story that a mackintosh, bought for a good many dollars, was found to be sleeveless after hanging a few days in a closet next the chimney—the sleeves were only "soldered on."

All the seams must be both sewed and cemented to make a garment perfect, while, of course, honest attention must be given to the fabric. We've taken the trouble. You need only choose to please your fancy and your notion of cost. Guaranteed? Of course. We take every risk on all the goods we sell.

For Men—

Double-breasted box coat at $3. Tan color. Others up to $22.50 for mackintoshes, and up to $30 for the more elegant "rain coats." These have no rubber in their make-up.

MANICA LIMPS INTO PORT

Broken Shaft Repaired at Sea and Salvage Saved.

A SHIP ON FIRE FOR DAYS

Heathdene's Master Reports Alarming Experience at St. Michaels—Norton Vessels' Ill-Luck.

The British steamship Manica, twenty days out from Shields, England, recently reported by the steamship Albano as being disabled at sea, reached this port yesterday. That she came in under her own steam, saving her owners salvage claims, was due to the clever work of her chief engineer—Mr. Gooding—who, while the vessel was laboring in troubled seas, successfully repaired a broken shaft. That she was not swamped at sea despite the good work of the engineer is put to the credit of her master, Capt. Smith, who spent night and day on the bridge while the work was in progress.

The Manica sailed Nov. 22, and for ten days made good weather of it, but after passing the forty-first parallel, on Dec. 2, she ran into a heavy northwester, against which she could make barely steerage way, laboring heavily the while and her screw racing violently. Shortly after 4 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 2 all hands were startled by a crashing noise that was loud above the roar of wind and sea, and a shaking of the fabric, as though it was being rent apart. The shaft had broken in the shaft alley, and the two broken ends were pounding about menacingly. The engines were stopped instantly, but as the vessel fell off into the trough, it became necessary to use chains to make fast the broken ends of the shaft to prevent their flying about and injuring the vessel's bottom.

It was soon afterward that the German steamer Albano, bound from Hamburg for New York, came along. She made out the signals of distress which Capt. Smith had displayed, and, on coming up, stood by while arrangements were made for taking the disabled vessel in tow. A hawser was got aboard, and an attempt was made to tow, but the lines parted time and again, and the Albano was forced to abandon the Manica to work out her own salvation or secure help from some other steamer passing on the steamer lane.

Again the helpless craft fell off and the sea striking her abeam thundered against her side and washed completely over her, carrying everything movable overboard and doing considerable damage about the decks. One of the funnel guys was carried away and the funnel threatened to go adrift. Seamen were got to work rigging new guys, however, and others were set about improvising a sea-anchor contrived from three spars fastened together at the ends, triangle shape, covered with tarpaulin and weighted at one end so as to float upright. The steamer's bow being very high out of the water, so that it was difficult to keep her head up to the sea, the sea-anchor was streamed out astern and she was thus kept end on to the seas while the engineer's force worked on the broken shaft.

The break was fortunately not a square one, and it was necessary therefore only to fit the ends together and get clamps about them. There were no suitable spare clamps aboard, and in this dilemma the engineer cast about until he bethought him that those which covered the crank-shaft bearings would answer the purpose, while the bearings could be more easily attended to. The work was finished on the night of Dec. 3, and the engines were then started slowly. The shaft held, and the steamer continued on to port at low speed, a distance of 1,600 miles.

The Manica anchored off Liberty Island yesterday. After discharging her cargo she will go into dry dock to receive a new section of shaft.

The British steamer Heathdene, consigned like the Manica to Norton & Son, arrived yesterday. She, too, had an unfortunate voyage behind her to report. She came from Calcutta via the Suez Canal and St. Michaels. She reported that on Nov. 13 when 36 miles west of St. Michaels fire was discovered in the coal bunkers and the bridge hold. Capt. Sandal returned to St. Michaels and spent five days fighting the fire, which was finally subdued after a small portion of the cargo had been jettisoned. It included some plumbago, coir, and tea. Some of the cargo was also got onto the deck and deluged with water, being saved from fire, but badly damaged with the water.

Three other Norton vessels have had bad luck recently. A report from Cape Town last week announced that one of them, the Mashona, had been seized by a British gunboat and taken into Cape Town, where some flour in her cargo was confiscated.

The steamship Bucerios of the same line was recently on fire in Erie Basin, and one of her crew who jumped overboard was drowned, and the steamship Monmouth arrived here on Tuesday in tow, having put into Bermuda disabled.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS

Samuel W. Moody has been appointed general agent of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company for Central and Southern Illinois.

The Potomac Fire Insurance Company of Washington, D. C., which has applied for admission to this State, will be examined next week by the State Insurance Department.

The discriminatory fire insurance taxation measure, which was recently introduced in the Georgia Legislature has been referred to the next session of the Legislature, so that no legislative action on this subject is expected during the present session.

The insurance on the dwelling of Arthur H. Sigler, at 2,063 Anthony Avenue, which was considerably damaged by fire late Wednesday night, was distributed as follows: On building—Greenwich, $3,000; on furniture and fixtures—Greenwich, $2,500. C. R. Young & Co. will adjust the loss.

Most of the fire insurance companies doing business in the State of Texas have withdrawn from the rating department of the Jalonick Bureau in order to avoid any conflict with the Attorney General after Jan. 31, when the Texas anti-trust law, which was passed last Spring, will go into effect. This action is taken on legal advice, and is designed to prevent a repetition in Texas of the difficulties arising out of the Arkansas anti-trust law. The survey and inspection department of the Jalonick Bureau will be maintained.

The Brokerage Committee of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange at its meeting to-day will take action on the proposed extension of the brokerage certificates, whose expiration would otherwise occur on Jan. 1. A recommendation from Exchange Manager Hess is expected, stating the length of time for which certificates should be extended in order that the work of renewing certificates of brokers in good standing may be completed before the date of expiration is reached. Several cases of alleged violation of the agreement are also likely to be heard.

President George T. Cram of the Western Union (fire underwriters) has just held an extended conference with the Governing Committee in Chicago in regard to the opinion of Attorney General Douglass of Minnesota, confirming the recent decision of Commissioner O'Shaughnessy of the Minnesota Insurance Department to the effect that the discriminatory clause of the graded commission rule is in violation of the Minnesota anti-trust law. The Chicago conference resulted in an agreement upon a policy of inaction until the Minnesota officials take some definite step toward the enforcement of the Attorney General's ruling.

West End Republican Women.

The Woman's Republican Association of the West End held a social meeting yesterday afternoon in the club rooms at 2,307 Broadway. The guest of honor was Madam Lydia Von Finkelstein Mountford, a native of Jerusalem, who is a lecturer upon the Holy Land and kindred subjects. Besides an address from Madam Mountford the programme included piano solos by Mrs. S. G. Pratt and several songs by Mrs. Emma A. Bulen.

Illinois Brewer Hangs Himself.

LA SALLE, Ill., Dec. 14.—Herman Brunner, head of the Peru Brewing Company, committed suicide at his home last night by hanging. He had been mentally deranged for some time. While a physician was in the house in consultation with members of the family Mr. Brunner slipped unobserved from his room to the garret that had been equipped as a gymnasium and by means of cords from an exerciser strangled himself to death. He had accumulated a fortune, principally out of the brewing business, and was a prominent Mason.

NO TUNNELS OR NEW ARMORIES.

Armory Board to Be Informed by the Mayor—Controller's Comment.

Mayor Van Wyck took occasion at the meeting of the Armory Board yesterday to emphasize his dislike for Controller Coler's East River tunnel plan and to announce that all the city's money would be spent in such ways as would prevent the construction of tunnels.

The Mayor's outburst was the result of an application to the board for an armory for the Second Naval Battalion of Brooklyn. Gen. Butt had expressed himself as favoring the building of the armory, when the Mayor put a veto on the plan by exclaiming: "We won't build any more armories; that's settled. We will have to spend $40,000,000 for an underground railroad, $30,000,000 for bridges, and $10,000,000 for additional water supply. That's $80,000,000, and if we do all this within the next five years it will be all we can attend to. They want us to spend $100,000,000 for tunnels, but we will have no money for tunnels."

When Controller Coler heard of the Mayor's remarks he said: "This administration was elected on a platform that called for municipal ownership of franchises, and the first thing it did was to try to vote away a great franchise to private individuals. There are men elected on that ticket who have not raised their voices in opposition to that grab. Why don't they speak out? They can talk on other subjects. In the meantime, we shall see if there is to be no money for tunnels."

The Mayor will have another chance to discuss the tunnel project to-day when the Board of Estimate meets. At this meeting it is probable that the resolution of the Board of Public Improvements asking for an appropriation for making a survey of tunnel routes will be taken up.

CARTER CONTRACTORS BAILED.

Examination of Col. Gaynor and His Associates Set for Dec. 22.

Four of the five contractors who were associated with ex-Capt. Oberlin M. Carter at Savannah, Ga., surrendered themselves yesterday to United States Commissioner Shields to answer a charge of having conspired to defraud the United States Government of $875,000. They were released on bail, and their hearing was set for Dec. 22. At their examination they will endeavor to show that there are no grounds for the charges, and that they should not be removed to Georgia for trial. Consequently the Government will have to fight the case as hard at the examination before Commissioner Shields as though the case were before a jury.

The prisoners are D. B. Green, Col. John P. Gaynor, E. H. Gaynor, and William T. Gaynor. Michael A. Connally, lately of Savannah, Ga., also indicted, is yet to be heard from. It is said that he has left the country.

The contractors are represented by Abram J. Rose, counsel for Capt. Carter. Mr. Rose said that now the real facts of the alleged Savannah improvement frauds would be brought out, and that they would exonerate Capt. Carter, who was convicted by military men ignorant of the legal method of taking evidence.

Col. John P. Gaynor was placed under $20,000 bonds, which were given for him by William B. Kirk of Syracuse. D. B. Green was required to furnish bail in a similar amount, and James D. Leary of this city was accepted as his surety. William T. Gaynor and Edward H. Gaynor were held in $10,000 bail each. Mr. Kirk being accepted as bondsman for the former and Edgar Alvord of Syracuse for the latter.

COMPLAIN OF SUBURBAN LINE.

Bronx Residents Formulate Charges Against Union Railway Company.

Property owners and residents of the Borough of the Bronx who have, as they allege, suffered for years from the indifference to their complaints shown by the Union Railway Company, have started an active campaign to compel the company to provide shelters at the many important transfer points in the borough. In this campaign the Citizens' Committee on Street Railway Service and Adequate Waiting Facilities has taken an important part in agitating for remedial measures.

At a recent meeting of this committee, it was resolved to call upon the city authorities for assistance in the fight against the railroad company. With this end in view, a letter was sent to President Guggenheimer of the Council requesting the Railroad Committee of that body to consider the matter of requiring the street railways to provide adequate waiting accommodations at their terminals and points of transfer throughout the city. The Board of Health has also been addressed asking its assistance in requiring that the rear platforms of street cars be kept clear.

The waiting room which was opened recently by the Union Railway Company at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Third Avenue is declared to be well fitted for the purpose for which it is intended, but the complaint is made by those who have occasion to use it that it is not conveniently located. It is pointed out that the cars going up and down town stop on the north side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, nearly a block away from the waiting room, and this necessitates the crossing of the wide place at the intersection of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street to reach the cars. A request has been sent by the Citizens' Committee to the railway company to have the cars going up and down stop on the south side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street in front of the waiting room and the cross-town cars west of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street.

Another complaint against the company concerns the waiting room which has been located at the Southern Boulevard and Westchester Avenue. This room is kept closed between midnight and 6 o'clock in the morning, while the cars on the Southern Boulevard and Westchester Avenue are run all night, or during the hours that the waiting room is kept closed, thus greatly impairing its usefulness.

An attempt is being made to induce the Union Railway Company to run its cross-town cars from Eighth Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street to Port Morris all night. The Manhattan Railway Company sells transfer tickets, which are supposed to be good for the cross-town trolley cars at all hours, but which cannot be used on the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street cross-town line after 1 o'clock in the morning, when this line ceases operations, although the law requires the cars to be run continuously at not less than twenty-minute intervals.

Reduced Rates Obtained for Buyers.

The Merchants' Association has received information that the Central Passenger Association, which met in Chicago Wednesday, has granted reduced rates to this city for what is known as the Spring buying season, which commences in January and continues until April. The trunk lines had previously granted these rates, so that the reduced rates will be in effect in all the territory from the New England boundary to the Mississippi River, including Chicago and St. Louis, and south to the Ohio River. The officers of the association expect that the Spring buying season will be the largest in the history of the city.

Work on Museum of Art Stopped.

Work has been temporarily suspended on the addition to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in Central Park owing to a difference between the Bridge Builders' Association and the Iron Workers' League. Unless the dispute can be settled it may not be possible for the contractors to get the roof of the addition on before severe weather sets in.

Child Drank Whisky and Died.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 14.—Mamie Bustard, aged four years, drank more than a pint of whisky last night and died after remaining unconscious for about three hours. The spirits had been purchased by John Bustard, the baby's father, and the bottle was left standing on Mrs. Bustard's bureau, where the child managed to reach it when no one was about.

Connecticut Boy Burglar Caught.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 14.—Harry Platt, the last alleged member of the gang of boy burglars who carried out a series of burglaries in this section, was arrested this afternoon. Platt escaped when the gang was broken up, and has since been living in a hut in the woods.

LABOR BANQUET LACKED MUSIC.

Non-Union Orchestra Was Provided by the Detroit Committee.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 14.—The annual banquet of the American Federation of Labor, held in the Griswold House to-night, lacked the usual accompaniment of orchestral music. The reason was that the orchestra provided for the dinner was discovered to be non-union.

The fact was duly reported in to-day's convention, along with a resolution declining the invitation to the banquet tendered by the local committee. Despite assertions of the Detroit men that it was the best they could do under the circumstances, the difficulty would not down until it was announced that the music would be left out of the programme.

BANKER AND CLUBMAN HELD.

Junior Hatfield Accused of Misappropriation—His Slander Suit.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 14.—Junior Hatfield, manager of the Dime Savings and Loan Association, was arrested to-day on a charge of having misappropriated about $2,000 of the association's funds. Ex-Gov. George T. Werts is the President of the association, and Frank M. Foye is Secretary and Treasurer. The arrest followed an examination of the accounts by the agents of a New York surety company which is on Hatfield's bond.

Hatfield is a prominent member of the Tourists' Club and a leader in athletic sports. He attained notoriety some time ago by bringing suit against the father of his dead sweetheart, a Mr. Sisson, for $100,000 for slander. He claimed Mr. Sisson slandered him to Miss Sisson, thus preventing the marriage. Miss Sisson died about the time the suit was instituted.

AN INTERNATIONAL SHOOT.

Contest Between British and American Volunteers Arranged.

FRANKLIN, Penn., Dec. 14.—An international shooting contest between teams representing American volunteer soldiers and English volunteers has been arranged by Gen. Willis J. Hulings, who was Colonel of the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Regiment during the Spanish war, and who has just returned from Europe.

The first contest will be between a team of the Queen's Westminster Volunteers and one selected by Gen. Hulings from his former command. The time has been set for next June, in London.

The trophy will be presented by Thomas R. Dewar, as a perpetual challenge cup. Mr. Dewar, in tendering the cup, stipulates only that it shall be shot for by regimental teams of Great Britain and her colonies and the United States, the cup to be held by the winners until defeated, the shooting to take place in the country where the cup is held.

THE LACKAWANNA DISASTER.

Coroner's Jury and Prosecutor Differ as to the Responsibility.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 14.—Prosecutor Emery is far from being satisfied with the verdict rendered by the Coroner's jury in the recent Lackawanna disaster. The jury held George W. Cappell, the conductor, and William Snedeker, the rear flagman, of the express responsible, and last night Coroner Yates issued warrants for their arrest. Cappell lives at Halstead, Penn., while Snedeker lives at Cortlandville, N. Y. They are expected to come here and give themselves into custody.

The company on the night of the wreck issued a statement holding John Riordon, engineer of the accommodation train which ran into the express responsible. The company's investigation did not cause it to recall this. Mr. Emery seems to think this solution of the accident was more in accordance with the facts than that reached by the jury, as to-day he personally appeared before Justice Keys and swore to a complaint, based upon information and belief, charging Riordon with manslaughter, and a warrant was issued. Riordon was notified to surrender to-morrow. He will do so.

LEGAL AID SOCIETY'S WORK.

Poor Clients Assisted in Recovering $500,000 in Twenty-five Years.

The work of the Legal Aid Society was discussed from various points of view last night at the meeting held by the Ladies' Auxiliary Committee of that organization at the Assembly Hall in the United Charities Building. Mrs Louise Waring, the Chairman of the committee, presided, and after an opening address introduced Arthur Von Briesen, President of the society, who in the course of his remarks said that in the twenty-five years' existence of the organization it had taken up 100,000 complaints and had recovered over $500,000 for poor clients in small amounts.

C. C. Beaman discussed "Legal Aid from a Lawyer's Aspect." J. Augustus Johnson spoke on "Profection for the Sailor." Miss Noelle Leow discussed "The Practical Side of the Legal Aid Society," while the Rev. Thomas H. Sliker spoke on "The Legal Aid Society as a Social Force." Miss Jeanne Franko, violinist, played several selections.

WATER SCARCITY IN BROOKLYN.

Lack of Filtering Plant Wastes Vast Quantity as Reported.

Deputy Water Commissioner Moffett said yesterday that six million gallons of water are being wasted daily at Springfield, L. I., for the want of a filtering plant. For over a year, he says, he has been trying to get an appropriation of $125,000 for this purpose.

"The situation," he said, "is really alarming. Personally, I do not favor any plan to have a private corporation furnish the city with water. I am confident there is plenty of water on Long Island for this generation and the next, if we could only get at it."

Engineer in Chief Robert Van Buren said: "The situation in Brooklyn is so alarming that I have resolved to have it on record that I called attention to the facts. We are running on a dangerous margin of supply to-day."

Filtering Plants Recommended.

At a meeting of the Health Board two weeks ago a report was submitted by Charles F. Roberts, the Sanitary Superintendent, recommending that action be taken by the authorities of the city to improve the Croton water supplied to the citizens. Filtering plants were recommended as having been found efficacious. Mayor Van Wyck said yesterday that the city was going to spend $10,000,000 on its water. He would not say whether part of this was to be spent on filtering plants.

Christmas Appeal for Children.

The Children's Aid Society has sent out its Christmas appeal for aid for poor children. The society has had during the year an enrollment of 15,773 destitute children. The society asks for presents of clothing, dinners, food, shoes, and similar gifts, besides money and voluntary help to support its lodging houses and schools. Twenty dollars will place a homeless child in a comfortable home in the country, $30 will send a homeless street boy to the society's farm school, $100 will provide dinners at one of the industrial schools for one month, and $300 will support a needed kindergarten for a year.

New Bridge and Church Property.

The report that the Commissioners of the new East River Bridge had decided to pay $120,000 for the property of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, at Bedford Avenue and South Fifth Street, Brooklyn, was declared yesterday to be unfounded. Commissioner Bell said that the commission had had under consideration an informal offer of the property at a price a little over $100,000, and had rejected it as too high. Both Commissioner Bell and the rector, the Rev. S. M. Haskins, said that the price probably would be determined by condemnation proceedings.

Mr. Bloch Makes a Denial.

A letter has been received in this city from I. Bloch, Director of the Cercle de l'Escrime at Paris, and of the Casino at Dieppe, in which he objects to certain charges relative to his character made in some of the New York papers on Oct. 14 last. These statements, he asserts, are without foundation and grow out of the malice of certain persons in Europe for the purpose of injuring his reputation. The New York newspapers, he says, have been deceived.

Dr. John Hall's Former Home Leased.

The house that was occupied by the late Dr. John Hall, the former pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which is a part of the church property, has been leased to Charles A. Gardiner. The Trustees of the Fifth Avenue Church decided that as they had no pastor they would rent the house, and when a new pastor was obtained would provide a home for him elsewhere.

UTONOMY FOR FILIPINOS

olicy of House Democrats Set Forth in a Joint Resolution.

VACUATION IS DEMANDED

nother Resolution Provides for an nquiry Into Slavery and Polygamy in the Sulu Islands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Two joint resolutions were introduced in the House of epresentatives to-day by Representative illiams of Mississippi, which are the re-t of consultation among a number of emocratic leaders in the House and are derstood to be expressive of their gen-l position on the Philippine question. e principal resolution is as follows:

Whereas, The hope has been held out that the ilipinos now waging war against the forces of United States in the Island of Luzon would down their arms if authoritatively assured t it was the intention of the Government and people of the United States ultimately to ant to the people of that island their indepen-nce and the absolute control of their domestic airs, and

Whereas, Such is the intention of the Govern-nt and of the American people, who do not lieve in wars of conquest or criminal aggres-n against other peoples and have frequently clared their horror thereof; now, therefore, be ection 1. That it has always been our intent l purpose to recognize the inalienable rights the Filipinos to self-government and national dependence, and that in pursuance thereof we ll make formal recognition of these rights and ithdraw our land and sea forces upon the es-blishment of peace and the inauguration of a nstitutional Government, or Governments, by s people of the islands or any of them, provid-the said Government agrees, or the said Gov-nments agree, to refund the $20,000,000 which s paid by us to the Queen of Spain; to give in fee simple, with right of sovereignty vest-in us, a place suitable for a naval station, d other places fitted for coaling stations, and grant the American people in perpetuity the ht of free access to all of their ports for ds, merchandise, and persons bent on peace-missionary pursuits.

ec. 2. We pledge our friendly assistance and unsel in the work of inaugurating such a move-nt.

ec. 3. We pledge ourselves to treat as an un-endly manifestation toward the United States y foreign interference or aggression for the iod of ten years from and after the establish-nt of such a Government, provided that the vernment and people of said islands shall sur-nder into our keeping during that period the ire question of their foreign relations, and ll pay the expenses to which we may be put such troops as shall, at the request of said vernment, be kept on Philippine territory and such ships and civil forces as may be kept in Philippine or adjacent waters for the pur-es of the protection herein promised.

The other resolution is as follows:

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States ovides that "Neither slavery nor involuntary vitude except as punishable for crime shall ex-within the United States or any place subject their jurisdiction," and

Whereas, The Island of Sulu, one of the Phili-ine group, is and has been for some time, by rtue of the ratification of the treaty of Paris tween Spain and the United States "within e United States or subject to their jurisdic-n," and

Whereas, It is currently reported and believed at slavery does actually exist in said islands, d

Whereas, It is furthermore currently reported d believed that it exists by the connivance or press agreement of the Federal authorities, erefore, be it

Resolved, By the House of Representatives that President be and he is hereby requested, if his opinion compatible with the public interest, transmit to the House such information as ay be available on that subject, including offi-al documents, agreements, or conventions en-ed into by and between the authorities, civil nd military, of the United States and the so-alled Sultan of Sulu, his agents or representa-es; be it further

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee of this ouse be, and is hereby instructed to investigate d report upon the legal and Constitutional as-cts of our Governmental relations to the peo-e of the Philippine Islands, and especially to ose of them in the group hitherto or now ruled the so-called Sultan of Sulu, and to determine d report to the House whether or not in the inion of said committee the said islands are thin the jurisdiction of the United States, d if in the jurisdiction of the United States, ether or not the Constitutional prohibition of ivery and the statutory prohibition of polyg-my do or do not apply to them and their peo-e, and should or should not control Federal offi-ials in all their acts and conduct in connection th the Government thereof.

Mr. Jones (Pop., Washington) introduced bill to extend the homestead law to the ilippines, so that soldiers serving in the ars with Spain or the Philippines shall ve the benefit of homestead settlement the Philippines.

ONGRESS SHOULD NOT ACT YET.

enator Lodge Says the Philippine War Must First Be Ended.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Senator Lodge, hairman of the Senate Committee on the hilippines, said to-night:

"It will ultimately become the duty of the hilippine Committee, I suppose, to deal with ll questions connected with the islands, nd to consider for submission to the Sen-e the policy which the United States ould pursue in regard to them. But these re, of course, questions of the future. The aramount necessity of the present moment the restoration of order in the islands, he ending of the war, and the extinction the last embers of the insurrection, which as now degenerated into mere brigandage. his is all work for the army, and is an ex-cutive function. Until peace and order e absolutely restored, there ought not to e any Congressional action.

"The only immediate duty for the com-ittee that I can see now is to gather to-ether and put into compact form all possi-le information in regard to the islands, so hat when the time comes for Congressional ction Congress may have all the knowledge btainable which will enable it to act in-elligently."

ILIPINO STRONGHOLD TAKEN.

aptured by Arnold's Little Force—MacArthur Occupies Ibaand—Many Spanish Prisoners Free.

MANILA, Dec. 14.—A detachment of Col. ayes's cavalry, under Lieut. Arnold, has aptured Blacnabato, the mountain strong-old where the last insurrection was ended ith a peace treaty. A large quantity of unitions of war was secured.

Major Batchelor's battalion of the wenty-fourth Infantry is making slow rogress in the Aparri Valley. The vil-gers are giving the colored troops anquets and balls everywhere.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Gen. Otis to-ay cabled to the War Department as fol-ows:

"Gen. Lawton reports Bulcan Province eed of insurgents yesterday. Troops ourth Cavalry captured strong mountain osition Blacnabato, with food supplies, othing, cartridge factory, and barracks.

"MacArthur's troops occupied Ibaand, own south on western coast Luzon; slight pposition, and few light casualties.

"Eighth instant Bates reports from Zam-anga that he has garrisoned Basilan, nd is sending troops to Cottobato and avoa, and that the condition of affairs is atisfactory.

"Eighteen hundred Spanish prisoners re-eived in Manila; over two thousand more n route; thirteen hundred shipped to Spain th instant. These prisoners much better hysical condition than Spanish troops sur-endered when Manila capitulated."

FILIPINO RESOLUTION LOST.

enator Pettigrew's Inquiry Tabled in the Senate by a Vote of 41 to 20.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—In the Senate o-day Mr. Pettigrew's resolution asking or information as to whether the flag of he Philippine Republic had ever been salut-d by the American forces in the Philip-ines came up in the regular order.

Mr. Chandler moved to lay the resolution n the table. Mr. Pettigrew asked a with-rawal of the motion, but this was declined. There was, however, no objection to an ex-lanation by Mr. Pettigrew, and he spoke riefly, saying that his only purpose was to scertain whether certain newspaper state-ments concerning the recognition given guinaldo's forces by our fleet in Manila ay in the Summer of 1898 were true.

He said the statement had been repeatedly ade that vessels bearing the Philippine ag had passed in and out of the harbor at that time, and that the flag had been aluted on different occasions by the Amer-can forces. He had never seen a contra-iction of this report, and he considered it important to know whether it was based upon fact. He had also seen frequent statements to the effect that at one time our forces had turned over prisoners taken in a battle on Subig Bay to the Filipinos.

If this was true, he would like to know the facts and the circumstances under which they occurred. He knew many other people who would like to know these facts. He therefore considered the resolution a proper one, and hoped that Mr. Chandler's motion to lay on the table would not prevail.

Mr. Chandler replied that every word of the resolution and speeches made upon it would be cabled to Manila. For this reason he hoped that the resolution would be disposed of as promptly as possible. Mr. Pettigrew called for the yeas and nays on the motion to lay on the table. The vote resulted: Yeas, 41; nays, 20.

Three Democrats—Lindsay of Kentucky, McLaurin of South Carolina, and McEnery of Louisiana—voted with the majority, as also did Senator Stewart of Nevada. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts was the only Republican to vote nay.

LIEUT. BATSON WOUNDED.

Amputation of Foot Probable—He Organized Macabebe Scouts.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The following dispatch was received from Gen. Otis to-day. It is dated Manila, Dec. 14:

"Lieut. Batson, Fourth Cavalry, organized four large companies Macabebe scouts, led advance of Lawton's troops and attended Young's cavalry Northwestern Luzon. Batson leading with conspicuous gallantry in several hard-fought engagements. On Nov. 19 seriously wounded in foot; amputation probably necessary. Can he not receive Majority in some staff corps as reward for efficient service?"

Big Demand for Beer in Manila.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 14.—Considerable shipments of beer from here to Manila have been going on. A consignment of five cars goes out to-day to San Francisco, thence by vessels of the Southern Pacific line to Hong Kong, where it will be reshipped to Manila. The remaining fifteen cars of an order of twenty cars will go next week. The beer is all bottled, and the consignee is a saloonkeeper in Manila, who says that he has a demand of eight cars a week, and that in addition to this he can find a market for a much larger regular consignment.

CUBANS GIVE UP MANY ARMS.

Hiding Place of Three Field Guns and 10,000 Rifles Disclosed to the Americans.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 14.—For some months it has been suspected that large quantities of military stores were in the possession of Cubans at some point in the interior. Yesterday the Mayor of Tunis, a small town in the District of Holguin, voluntarily disclosed the location, and surrendered three effective field guns, 10,000 rifles, and a large amount of ammunition to the Americans.

The guns had been stored in an obscure place, in a rough country, under palm leaf blinds. It would have been almost impossible to find them unless their whereabouts had been voluntarily revealed. The Holguin district is one of the wildest in the island, and has been regarded as a probable starting point for a possible uprising.

The Mayor of Tunis, who was formerly a rabid Cuban politician, says he had become convinced that the possession of these arms by the Cubans was a source of danger.

GEN. BROOKE IS INDIGNANT.

Denies Emphatically that He Protested Against His Recall by President McKinley.

HAVANA, Dec. 14.—Governor General Brooke is indignant at the reports cabled from Washington which represent him as having protested against the order of the President relieving him of the Military Governorship of Cuba. He says:

"I am a soldier and obey orders. I would direct the arrest of any officer who protested against my order, and would always render to a superior authority the respect which I would exact from a subordinate."

His friends, however, express the opinion that he has not been treated with due consideration. They think that some intimation should have been given him of the contemplated change, whereas, as a matter of fact, the first knowledge he had that he was to be removed, and to be succeeded by Major Gen. Wood, was derived from newspaper dispatches.

The Patria says:

"The administration of Gen. Wood at Santiago has been thought well of by Cubans of all grades. It must also be admitted that he governed the most sensitive and independent section of the island without once offending the dignity of the inhabitants. He understood the exigencies of the situation, and recognized the rights of the people."

The Lucha says:

"Judging from past experience of Gen Wood, he will make an excellent Governor General. Cuba has cause for self-congratulation. In Santiago his policy was one of harmony. He was the first to promulgate habeas corpus. In a country where the embers of international hate are still smoldering, a man of his clear intelligence may be expected to solve prudently many complicated political problems."

The Nuevo Pais says:

"Those who know Gen. Wood best assert that he is a brave soldier and a thorough statesman as well."

The members of Gen. Brooke's Advisory Cabinet to-day tendered their resignation, but were asked to remain in office until the arrival of Gen. Wood.

STEPS TO PREVENT BRIGANDAGE.

Insurgents Who Ill-Treat Friendly Natives to be Severely Dealt With.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—At the War Department it is learned that an order has been sent to Manila directing the military officers there to adopt a course that will render unsafe to the Filipinos the continuation of cruel acts upon friendly natives who have disregarded the instructions of the insurgent leaders. Many have been killed or maimed by the insurgents for their refusal to give further aid to the rebellion.

The assumption at the department is that Aguinaldo, since the dispersal of his army and the apparent futility of attempting to reorganize it for military purposes, has determined to lead a war of brigandage. It is believed that the rebellion is practically wiped out; that there are only small bodies of Filipino insurgents left with arms in their possession; that they are far from points occupied by United States troops, and that they will follow the lives of outlaws until caught red-handed in attempts to kill careless troops who may fancy they are in secure neighborhoods.

Late reports from the Philippines inform the department that the followers of Aguinnaldo who have been committing barbarous acts were evidently obeying instructions in disregarding flags of truce, using flags to mislead and expose American troops, and generally conducting themselves in a way to forfeit the continuance of operations against them as if they were controlled by the rules of civilized warfare. In order to protect and encourage non-combatant natives who are reported to be in constant danger, our officers are to be asked to adopt severe measures to discourage assassination and brigandage.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

General Passenger Agents Arrive at a Satisfactory Agreement Regarding Rates.

As a result of a two days' meeting of the General Passenger Agents of the Trunk Line and Central Passenger Associations, representing all the lines between New York, Chicago, and St. Louis, all rate differences of any consequence among the lines have been adjusted and the situation has been considerably clarified. Resolutions were adopted shortly before the close of yesterday's session at the Trunk Line Association headquarters, 143 Liberty Street, in which all the roads agreed to abolish commissions for the sale of tickets, and also to maintain the tariffs as filed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission, the agreement to go into effect Jan. 1.

The effect of this will be not only to bring the roads into much better and closer relations than they have been for some time, but also, if the agreement be lived up to, to do away with secret rate cutting, which has had a demoralizing effect on rates. It will, too, do away to some extent at least with the business of scalpers, who, in some places, it is said, have been able to buy direct from the railroads at a price below the regular tariff price, and sell to their patrons still below regular rates at a profit. Harmonious action in this respect alone, railroad men say, will mean a saving to the railroads of something like $150,000 a month.

Each railroad also is to refuse to become a party to any irregularity on the part of any other railroad, and it is understood that if any road finds it is embarrassed by an improper reduction of rates by a connecting line, it shall, instead of retaliating, first call the attention of Commissioner Farmer to the matter, and he will endeavor to bring about an understanding and a restoration of the rates.

Representatives of twenty-five railroads were present at the sessions, including the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Erie, Lehigh Valley, West Shore, Lackawanna, Jersey Central, Ontario and Western, Grand Trunk, Wabash, Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, Baltimore and Ohio, and Lake Shore.

At the conclusion of yesterday's session, which was said to be a very harmonious one, Commissioner Farmer said: "While there has been a good condition in the trunk line territory for the past year, the east-bound situation has not been altogether satisfactory. But now, with so complete an understanding and so excellent an agreement, the situation is materially improved, and we hope for very substantial benefits as a result."

The members of the associations will hold another meeting early in January, when a system of adjudicating complaints arising from the enforcement of the resolutions passed yesterday will be decided upon.

It was reported to the meeting that the condition of rates at Buffalo, which has been a hot-bed of rate-cutting, is entirely satisfactory now, and that normal rates on passenger business out of that city will be restored to-day.

Santa Fe Stockholders Meet.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 14.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Santa Fé was held in this city at noon to-day. A meeting of the Board of Directors was held immediately following it. At the stockholders' meeting the acquisition by purchase or lease of a number of branch railroad companies was approved. H. Rieman Duval, Thomas H. Fowler, Charles S. Gleed, and Victor Morawetz, whose terms as Directors expired to-day, were re-elected.

BROOKLYN ELEVATED NUISANCE.

Health Board Inspector Finds that Drains Discharge Into Streets.

Inspector George V. Convery of the Health Department reported yesterday that he had carefully investigated the condition of the Brooklyn elevated railroad stations. He said he found no cause for complaint as to the cleanliness of the stations and the sanitary condition of the toilet rooms. He found fault, however, with various drains and rainwater leaders, which, unconnected with the sewers, discharged their contents on the sidewalks or roadways.

Striking instances of these nuisances, according to his report, may be found under the elevated tracks about the bridge plaza, where "from almost every pillar of the structure a five-inch drainpipe discharges into the street, day or night, sunshine or rain, to the discomfort of those whose business calls them afoot to that section of the city." Orders, it is said, have been served on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to abate these nuisances.

MR. HYDE THANKS FIREMEN.

Vice President of the Equitable to Chief Croker.

Vice President James H. Hyde of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, in a letter addressed to Fire Chief Croker, received at Fire Headquarters yesterday, expresses his thanks to the department for the efficiency, vigilance, and care of the members of the force who responded to an alarm of fire at his mother's residence, 11 East Fortieth Street, on Saturday, Dec. 9. Mr. Hyde's letter is as follows:

"Edward F. Croker, Chief:

"It gives me great pleasure to thank you for the promptness with which you responded to the alarm Saturday afternoon for a fire at my mother's residence, at 11 East Fortieth Street, and for the care and attention which you gave to the property. The Fire Department is certainly to be congratulated on having such an efficient Chief and you for having such an efficient force. My mother and I appreciate the vigilance and care displayed. Believe me, my dear Mr. Croker, JAMES H. HYDE."

Secretary Docharty, under instructions from the Commissioner, replied to Mr. Hyde, expressing the sincere thanks of the Commissioner, as Chief Executive of the Fire Department, for the acknowledgment of the service rendered by the firemen from Mr. Hyde, and stating that if real meritorious work on the part of the uniformed force was always acknowledged in the same manner as expressed in Mr. Hyde's letter, it would prove an added incentive to the firemen to act promptly, efficiently, and bravely upon all occasions where their services were required.

The Boy Beloved of Washington.—Edward Cary, author of "Life of George William Curtis," in a contribution entitled "Lafayette, the Boy Beloved of Washington," will give a review of episodes in the relations of the young Marquis Lafayette and Gen. PUT POISON IN HIS WELL.

Mystery in an Attempt to Kill Stage Driver's Family.

KENSICO, N. Y., Dec. 14.—A sensation was caused in Armonk to-day when it became known that an attempt had been made to poison the family of Robert Cox. He is proprietor of a boarding house in Armonk and operates the stage route from Armonk.

Mr. Cox at daybreak arose and, going to his well, drew water which was used in cooking breakfast. Several of the members remarked that the coffee and the food had a very strange taste. Cox left the house to go over his route. He forgot a package, and returned. He was alarmed to find his family all sick. As the symptoms indicated poisoning, Cox jumped on one of his fastest horses and, without hat or coat, rode to the residence of Dr. Clark. When the physician reached the house he found the members of the Cox family in agony. He promptly administered antidotes, and after working over the different members for several hours succeeded in getting them all out of danger.

An examination of the well showed that at least a pound of paris green had been thrown into it during the night. Mr. Cox says he does not know of any enemy he has.

MRS. GOULD IN AN ACCIDENT.

One of Her Horses Knocked Down by a Collision with a Truck.

The brougham of Mrs. George J. Gould, to which her favorite team of park horses was attached, met with an accident about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Nineteenth Street and Fifth Avenue and one of the horses was injured. Mrs. Gould was in the brougham at the time, but suffered no injury.

The carriage was going up Fifth Avenue, and at Nineteenth Street the shaft of one of Rand & McNally's trucks, the driver of which was trying to avoid a collision with a cab, struck one of Mrs. Gould's horses and knocked it down. In falling the horse pulled its mate down and, to add to the complication, the truck ran into the cab which it had been trying to avoid. It was thought at first that Mrs. Gould's horse was fatally hurt, but when its harness was removed it jumped to its feet and, dashing to the pavement, became entangled in a pile of empty boxes and packing materials and was again thrown down. With considerable difficulty it was rescued from its position and taken to a veterinarian. The driver of the truck was subsequently arrested, but Mrs. Gould's coachman declined to prosecute him.

Mrs. Gould witnessed the first part of the accident and then stepped into a drug store, where she ordered a cab to take her to her residence.

BREWERY UNION AIMED AT.

Combination of Albany and Rensselaer Counties' Interests Being Urged.

Representatives of Moore & Schley of this city are operating in Albany and Rensselaer Counties to bring about a consolidation of all the brewery interests there. The story is that Richard Croker, ex-Senator Edward Murphy, Jr., M. M. Nolan, ex-Mayor of Albany; Anthony N. Brady of Albany, and others are largely interested in a financial sense. Mr. Murphy is one of the owners of the Excelsior Brewery, in Troy, and is wealthy.

A Cohoes brewer who is at the Sinclair House said to a TIMES reporter yesterday:

"The movement to combine the breweries in Albany and Rensselaer Counties is still in progress. When I left home yesterday agents of Moore & Schley of Broadway, who are to finance the scheme, were still at work. Undoubtedly the undertaking would be successful in a pecuniary sense if those going into the combination do not ask too much for their plants.

"As I understand it, the proposed syndicate has obtained options on about all the properties excepting those of Edmund Fitzgerald and Jo anton of Troy and Samuel Bolton & Lansingburg. But to make the combi a go these concerns must be acquired. I suppose they will sell if enough is offe."

EDUCATIONAL UNIFICATION.

Regents of the University Strongly Favor the Proposed Plan.

ALBANY, Dec. 14.—The commission to unify the educational system of the State met to-day. Regent St. Clair McKelway, on behalf of the Regents of the university, presented a statement and a provisional draft of amendments prepared by a special committee of the Board of Regents. The statement says in part:

"We cordially approve of the general purpose to place the whole educational system of the State under the supervision of the Regents, and we specially commend the proposition to make the Chancellor of the University the chief executive educational officer of the State. We fully believe that with suitable enlargement of its powers and adequate compensation that office would invite to its duties the greatest of educators and promote the development in this State of a system of public education of surpassing excellence."

"We deprecate as impolitic and probably baneful any needless changes in the legislation of the Board of Regents or in the powers of the Department of Public Instruction.

"There is now clearly manifested a substantial unanimity of sentiment throughout the State in favor of such unification under the Regents. If considered simply by itself, it doubtless would easily obtain legislative sanction.

"At the first meeting of your honorable body, Commissioner Ainsworth, the recognized representative of the Department of Public Instruction, was reported as voting in favor of such unification. It would likewise receive the unanimous approval of the Regents. Thus the two educational departments of the State would be in accord.

"Less than such a measure of unification would not effect the purpose that led to your appointment, and we respectfully suggest to you to propose just such unification and nothing more."

"The measure and methods of educational unification thus approved, have the further merit that they would require very little legislation and could go into operation immediately, without disturbance to the current work in the public schools or to the State's needful supervision. The unification would come into effect quietly, and little, if any, immediate change would be needed, even in its personnel of the officers and employes of the Department of Public Instruction.

"The bill as favored by the Regents provides that their Chancellor shall take the place of the present Superintendent of Public Instruction, and be clothed with all the powers that official possesses, and gives the Regents authority to provide a salary for that official."

A telegram was received from United States Senator Depew stating: "I thoroughly approve of unification under the Regents, with their Chancellor elected as chief executive."

STANDARD OIL TRANSACTION.

Rumored Absorption of National Docks and Storage Company.

Two deeds that caused much speculation were filed in the Hudson County Register's office at Jersey City yesterday. They show that the Standard Oil Company has conveyed to the New Jersey Storage Company its oil yards, buildings, and apparatus at Bayonne. At the same time the National Docks and Storage Company conveys to the New Jersey Storage Company its docks and property at Black Tom Island, near Cavan Point. The consideration named is $30,000 in the first case and $25,000 in the second.

Charles H. Sterling, President of the National Docks and Storage Company, declined to give any information, but denied that his company had been absorbed by the Standard Oil Company, as was reported in Jersey City.

The New Jersey Storage Company filed articles of incorporation on Nov. 13. The incorporators are Charles E. Hodge of New York, James R. Taylor of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and J. W. R. Crawford of Metuchen, N. J. The capital stock is $200,000. Charles McQuillan of Bayonne is named as the principal agent. The objects set forth by the articles are: "To lease, purchase, and maintain tidewater oil terminals, petroleum lighters, and steamers for oil transportation, build and maintain warehouses, and do a general storage business."

The first deed filed reserves to the Standard Oil Company the ownership and management of the railroads and oil and water pipe lines on the property. An agreement was also filed showing that the National Docks and Storage Company will not abandon its business, but will transfer its tidewater terminal from Black Tom to Constable Hook, Bayonne, the Standard Oil Company also giving it the privilege of laying a water pipe from Communipaw to Constable Hook in consideration of $8,500.

A Teachers' Association Election.

At the annual election of the Teachers' Mutual Benefit Association yesterday, the following ticket was elected for the ensuing year: President—Samuel Ayres, M. D.; Vice President—Joanna J. Hill; Recording Secretary—Abner R. Holley; Financial Secretary—Alanson Palmer; Treasurer—Andrew J. Whiteside.

SHIP FRIESLAND LIBELED.

Coffee Consignees Seek Damages Due to Fouling the Lassell.

The Red Star Line steamship Friesland, which on Dec. 5 fouled the coffee ship Lassell while that vessel was detained at Quarantine, staving a hole in her side, was libeled yesterday in the United States District Court. The action is taken by John Arbuckle, William V. R. Smith, James N. Jarvie, Edwin H. Peck, and several other consignees of the coffee in the Lassell's cargo. The coffee is declared to be worth $175,000, and damages for that amount are asked from the owners of the Red Star Line, the International Navigation Company. The Lassell is still beached off Staplelton.

The coffee steamship Roman Prince came up the Bay and anchored off Liberty Island yesterday. The other coffee steamer, Ragusa, is still in Quarantine. The coffee is to be taken off both vessels in lighters and landed, under the recent ruling of the Board of Health. There are 24,000 bags on the Ragusa and 27,000 bags on the Roman Prince.

WAR VETERANS' CONSTITUTION.

Adopted by Their New Spanish-American Association.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 14.—The Spanish-American War Veterans' Association met here to-day and adopted a constitution. The association is the successor to a similar organization formed last September in Washington, D. C., by Gen. Keifer, who was elected Commander in Chief.

Dissatisfaction arose among the officers under Gen. Keifer, and they all resigned, claiming that he was using the association for political purposes. Col. W. J. Hueling of Pennsylvania was recently elected Commander in Chief of the new organization, and he notified the members yesterday of his acceptance. The constitution adopted provides that politics must be kept out of the association.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

THE REPUBLICAN SLATE.

The only remaining doubt as to the programme of the Republican managers for 1900 is now dispelled by the selection of Secretary ROOT as the candidate for Vice President. To this the assent of Mr. ROOT is believed to have been secured, and the plan will be carried out unless circumstances that cannot be foreseen shall interfere. The occurrence of any effectual interference is extremely improbable. The place for the convention has not been definitely determined, but there is little question that New York can secure it if really desirous to do so.

In view of the degree of certainty as to the result of the election the place of holding the convention excites but little interest, and if it shall come to New York it will be due to the wish of the managers to follow a plan of campaign that will be as broadly National as possible. It is thirty-one years since a National Convention of either great party has been held in this city, and the eminent citizen of the State then placed in nomination much against his will was not greatly surprised when he was overwhelmingly defeated. It would be a neat and courteous attention on the part of the Republicans to select this city next year for the nomination of one of our citizens on a Presidential ticket with such safe prospects of success.

Naturally a campaign for the election of a ticket that can thus confidently be arranged in advance is not likely to arouse intense enthusiasm. It will be not unlike that for the second election of MONROE—whom, by the way, Mr. MCKINLEY resembles in some striking regards—which is known in political history as having inaugurated the "era of good will." And since the result of the election is so comfortably assured, those of us who differ from the fortunate party in some of its most conspicuous doctrines, and who regret that there is not an active and respectable opposition to combat those doctrines, can congratulate ourselves that the party, since its last victory, has steadily advanced its position as to the currency, which is by far the most important point of domestic politics now in dispute. And while we must all concede that Mr. MCKINLEY'S claim to a renomination is by all the conventions of politics fully made out, we of New York can feel an especial pleasure that his companion on the ticket is to be a New York man with such a well deserved and well established reputation for talent and character.

THE SPECULATOR AND THE INVESTOR.

It was the general remark of shrewd and experienced observers yesterday that Wall Street was full of bargains, and, though the net result of the violent fluctuations of prices on the Exchange was to leave the level about the same as at the closing on the previous day, the remark remained true.

It would not do to deny that such disturbances as took place on Wednesday and were in a way continued first in one direction yesterday and then in the opposite and again in the first have their effect on general business. That is inevitable even if the effect were only psychologic and sympathetic. But it is very slight and is bound to be temporary. Sudden difficulties in the speculative market can be very serious when the business of the country is over extended and credit is inflated and the commitments of financial institutions are extravagant. When, as at present, the contrary of all these conditions is known to prevail, when business generally is at once active and conservative and there is no strain anywhere on ordinary commercial and corporate credit, the influence of Wall Street excitement is limited and fleeting.

It is to be understood that the "bargains" created by the flurry in the Street are for the investor and not for the speculator. It is the man who is able to pay for what he buys, looking to the rate of return on his purchases or to an advance in the price to the level justified by that return, who can realize handsome profit from the sacrifices that those are compelled to make who act on quite different principles. The line between the investor and the speculator is not difficult to draw. It does not necessarily consist in the extent of risk assumed so much as in the ability to face that risk without ruin. The typical speculator is he who gambles with the money he is able to borrow, and whose ability to pay depends on the success of the venture. To a man indulging in this game the facts are easily obscured by his hopes and his appetite. He compares his "margin" with the possible profits and neglects to compare it with the certain liability assumed and the possible losses. On the approach of the latter he is almost forced to "protect" himself by the assumption of further risks, forgetting that at the last the difficulty of borrowing on such terms as he is compelled to seek must grow greater and still greater, until the crash comes. Then follows the liquidation which is the Wall Street term for something very like a deluge. Such perturbations as are now vexing the Street need concern no man who has kept his debts fairly within what he knows that he can, if necessary, pay.

NEW YORK.

A Representative in Congress ought to stand up for his State as well as for his country and his party. There is some present need of reminding the New York members of the House of Representatives that this is one of their duties.

In every currenoy debate it is the custom of ignorant demagogues in the House—Populists, Bryan Democrats, and some Republicans—to make vicious and lying attacks upon this State and this city. Either because they believe it themselves or because they wish to make other persons more ignorant than themselves believe it, they continually affirm that New York is the natural foe of the rest of the country; that it is a vast and insatiable parasite, fastening upon the body of the Nation and greedily sucking its life blood; that it hungrily seizes upon the gains of trade and the wages of toil, drawing to itself all the money of the country, insomuch that a great money power has been built up in this city, a thing they personify as a sort of devil, a ravening and predatory beast, an Erymanthian boar which the 16-to-1 Hercules is to slay.

It is much to be desired that some New York member gifted with a flow of swift words and a capacity for public indignation should speak up for his State whenever its Populist traducers fall upon it with their calumnies. It may be said that New York needs no defense; that falsehood and abuse cannot harm a sovereign State nor diminish the happiness of its people. That is not altogether true, but even if it were true that New Yorkers do not mind being vilely lied about, it is deplorable that the detested spirit of sectional hatred and jealousy should be fostered in that hall where the Representatives of all the States meet together in perfect equality to legislate for the whole Union. It is not so much that New York needs defense as that her calumniators would profit by correction. An ignorant man is always and everywhere a pitiable object, but when he occupies a seat in the House of Representatives he becomes not only an object of pity but of apprehension. He can do great mischief. It is the duty of his fellows to instruct him, gently if his dull ear is open to soft speech; with reproof and the lash of invective and words that sting and shame if he is one of those defiantly ignorant fellows who unblushingly hold up the straitened forehead of a fool.

It ought not to be difficult to get the idea through even the thickest skull that New York prospers only when the rest of the country is prosperous. Her wealth increases in proportion as the general wealth increases. If times are hard in Alabama or Texas the stagnation is at once reflected in business here. But times would always be hard all over the United States if New York habitually pillaged the people of their humble accumulations. If there were an actual money devil in Wall Street, and he drew into his own maw the cash proceeds of the sweat of the land, New York would be the greatest sufferer, not the chief gainer. New York cannot be conceived of as having interests separable from the interests of the rest of the Union any more than the head can be held to have one interest and the body another. We are all nourished by a common prosperity and wax rich and powerful through the prevalence of general conditions of good fortune and by mutual helpfulness. The injury of one is the concern of all.

Nor is the accumulation of a great store of money in this city a detriment or a danger to the rest of the country. We are aware that the new Socialism holds that wealth is culpable because it promotes business, which is a crime. But it is not with Socialism that we are now dealing. The Populists in Congress, some of them innocently misguided and some of them blatherskites from choice, are not haters of wealth, for they continually complain that they have not enough of it. They should be forced to see and understand that even the little they now possess would not be theirs if the capital accumulated in New York had not been poured out in vast sums to build the railroads and telegraphs and factories of the West and South and to develop the resources of the soil and mines and forests of the country. It is from concentrated capital, not from capital dispersed all over the country, that the money is obtained for great undertakings. No transcontinental railroad would ever have been built if its promoters had been obliged to visit the bankers of every little town and city in search of purchasers for their shares and bonds. The Federal Government could never dispose of its bond issues in time of need if ready capital were not always stored up in New York. Witness the complete failure of the attempt to borrow money by a "popular issue" of bonds. If New York capitalists had not subscribed for the bonds only an insignificant amount of money would have gone into the Treasury.

The evil things charged against New York are mythical and imaginary. The accusations are mischievous. They react upon those who make them and spread delusions among the people. No man ought to be permitted to get up in the House of Representatives or the Senate and traduce a State without undergoing prompt castigation and reproof from some representative of that State.

PAYN, ROOSEVELT, AND ROOT.

There is one gratifying circumstance about the interview with which the malodorous "LOU" PAYN has favored our esteemed contemporary The Sun. That is the entirely conclusive showing it makes that "LOU" is in pain. We pointed out, a good many days ago, that it was quite a moral impossibility that the Governor should renominate "LOU." But it is one of the circumstances of disrepute that the disreputable person should not be fully aware of the extent of it. One Governor of New York had already committed political suicide, largely by naming "LOU" to protect the interests of the assured of the State. And yet "LOU" appears to have thought that another Governor would retain him. Even if Gov. ROOSEVELT were a Black in morals and mentals, that was a length to which, merely as a prudent politician, he could not have gone with the example of his predecessor before him. And yet "LOU" most unreasonably squeals and barks because the Governor will not and can not stand him, even though the refusal of the Governor to renominate him is as intelligible from the point of view of "LOU" as it is from the point of view of a decent and reputable citizen.

"LOU" is so much agitated by the refusal of the Governor to continue him in office, and the open search of the Governor for a citizen who is fit to take his place who is also willing to take it, that he permits himself to declare war on the Governor in consequence. Doubtless "LOU" has been making the utmost use of his office to strengthen himself politically, according to his lights. Probably there is not a Republican scamp in the State, who has been found out, who is not willing to join him in his fight against the Governor. It is possible that the "cohesive force" of the elements which can be rallied under the standard of "LOU" may be able to impart a certain vivacity to the procedures of the Republican Convention in which the nomination is made for the next Governor of New York. That is a prospect rather to be welcomed in the interest of the public amusement, seeing that the fate of "LOU'S" own political creator shows that the cohesive force of all the Republican politicians of his kidney cannot avail either to make or to mar the fortunes of a Republican aspirant to the Governorship.

But there are larger issues before "LOU," and it is to be expected that he will seize them. Mr. ELIHU ROOT is no longer in municipal or State politics. But he is getting to be very much in National politics. As things stand now, he is sure to be the next candidate of his party for the Vice Presidency of the United States. Here is an opportunity for the political activities of "LOU" which is much more urgent than revenge upon an official who has merely failed to see his way to renominating him. Mr. ROOT has done much worse than that. The adjective "malodorous" which we just now applied to "LOU" is not ours "in this connection," but Mr. ROOT'S. It is he who publicly described "LOU" as having been for a quarter of a century before 1895, when the characterization was made, "a stench in the nostrils of all decent men." It was he who said that, during this period, "LOU" had been carrying a load of "shame and infamy." If it behooves "LOU" to defeat the renomination of the Governor, who has simply declined to renominate him, much more must it behoove him to defeat the nomination to the Vice Presidency of the man who has said these things about him, and who has also proved them to the satisfaction of "all decent men." It is true that Mr. PAYN might answer that describing him as a stench in the nostrils of all decent men, or to be described as carrying a load of shame and infamy, did not "injure him in his business" nearly as much as refusing to renominate him for Superintendent of Insurance. But the disrepute which Mr. ROOT fastened upon him is the chief reason, no doubt, why Gov. ROOSEVELT refused to renominate him. He is really bound, not merely as a sensitive and shrinking citizen, but also as a politician who is in politics on business, to take his revenge upon the Secretary of War as well as upon the Governor. We admit that it seems to be rather "a large order."

THE BRITISH RESERVES.

It is not surprising that the recent reverses of the British arms should have stimulated the British press to call for large and immediate reinforcements. These reverses, by the way, have been entirely confined to the Cape Colony side and the southern border of the Orange Free State. On the Natal side there is no complaint of insufficiency of numbers in the forces operating under the immediate command of Gen. BULLER. It is suggested by the facts of the campaign thus far that one of the points of superiority in the strategy of the Boers has been the admirable use they have made of their necessary and natural advantage of the "interior lines." It seems that while they have held the superior force on the Natal side quiescent they have rapidly concentrated their own force upon the advances of Gen. METHUEN and Gen. GATACRE, upon both of whose forces they have inflicted defeats. Upon no other hypothesis is it easy to reconcile the clear fact that the British have more men in South Africa than the whole arms-bearing population of the two republics with the fact that the Boers appear to outnumber the British wherever the fighting is going on.

That the British need more men is evident. The question is, Where are they to get them? Our London correspondent, in his cable letter last week, referred to the new Seventh Division then making ready for embarkation as having been "scrambled up out of odds and ends." Whoever has had occasion to look over the composition of this division, as given by the English press, will not dispute the accuracy of this description. There are various estimates of the strength of the British forces in South Africa. The British Under Secretary of War last week computed them at 100,000, including troops "to arrive." The London Times, a little earlier, estimated the total of "British regular troops" at 82,000. But, whatever the number, it is not disputed that all the regular troops available are already in South Africa, nor is it disputed that they are not sufficient.

If England had gone to war with a first-class power, and had been compelled to make a campaign in foreign parts, she could not have commanded more soldiers than she has now in the field. The talk about "immediate and strong reinforcements" is mostly moonshine. No wonder that the British public should be beginning to ask questions about the "proportion between their efforts and their objects." No wonder that they should be beginning to ask whether their real objects could not have been otherwise attained. No wonder that the question of Mr. CHAMBERLAIN'S "new diplomacy" should begin to seem a very serious question, a question of ends as well as of means.

THE ASTORIA GAS COMPANY'S "GRAB."

The principle of law and policy involved in the grant of land under water to the Astoria Gas Company is simple enough to any one who will take the trouble to get at it under all the queer misrepresentations with which it has been surrounded. The only question is: Ought the land that has been granted by the State to have been reserved for the city at such time in the future as it shall be needed, and the city shall have complied with the conditions imposed before any claim to it can mature?

The land referred to is an irregularly shaped parcel about 700 feet long on the main shore line and about as much more along the channel of a creek, lying under the water directly in front of land already owned by the company. All the land under water for a long distance on either side of the strips in dispute belongs to the company, which obtained it with the land lying back of it from the original owners. The little parcel now granted to the company gives it a nearly continuous shore line convenient for its business. It is worth more to the company many times than it can be to any one else, and the State has no right to grant it to any one else. The riparian owner, that is, the owner of the adjacent shore, is the only party to whom at present the State can grant it.

Any possible right the city might obtain to it in the future is contingent and remote. Its utility, should it be obtained, is extremely doubtful, and it would cost a good deal to make it available. The public benefit from the grant to the gas company is considerable and may fairly be held to outweigh all the advantage that could possibly accrue hereafter from a grant to the city. The conditions under which the city could ask for a grant of this land under water are the following: Public streets must be laid out and opened through the adjoining land, a plan or plans for the building of docks at the ends of these streets and between them along the water front must be made by the Dock Board and approved by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. Then and only then the State could make a grant to the city, and the city could use the land under water for docks after compensating the adjacent owners for their inalienable right of free approach to the navigable water.

The land in dispute consists of some sixteen acres only. It is on the shore of Flushing Bay, above Hell Gate, in an entirely rural and unoccupied region. The utility of it to the city in the distant future under the conditions imposed seems to us too slight to be regarded. It may be added that the talk of the land being worth a million dollars to the city is nonsense. The city does not own it, and could never get a title to it that would allow it to be sold.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Laboring apparently under the delusion that there is controversy as to when the twentieth century begins, The Boston Herald devotes the better part of a page to the publication of letters from college Presidents to whom it had submitted inquiries on the subject. Of the fourteen who took the trouble to answer, either personally or by proxy, this simplest of questions, eleven patiently repeated the self-evident propositions that there are 100 years in a century, and that each century ends with the conclusion, not of the ninety-ninth year, but of the one hundredth. These eleven included President CHARLES W. ELIOT of Harvard—whose statement of the axioms was perhaps the clearest and therefore the best of the lot—and the heads of Yale, Chicago University, Princeton, Cornell, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania, Vassar, Bowdoin, Dartmouth, and Brown. President CAPEN of Tufts wrote a few sentences too enigmatic for the comprehension of ordinary mortals. Only President CAROLINE HAZARD of Wellesley and President L. CLARK SEELYE of Smith betrayed that they were the victims of a belief in an imaginary, nonexistent and impossible Year 0, and from that false premise deduced the false conclusion that the twentieth century begins on the first of next January. Of course, it is only an incident that these two very obviously mistaken persons are guiding the destinies of colleges for women. The accuracy of the reply made by the ruler of Vassar is good evidence, if any were needed, that a tendency to ignore facts and logic is not a required characteristic in the occupants of these positions. We notice that some people have hastily assumed that the Pope's authority is on the side of the ninety-nine-years-is-one-hundred contention. That depends on what he means when he expresses the hope that "1900 will usher in a far more happy century." To usher in is not necessarily to be part of. When Cardinal GIBBONS was asked for light on this point he replied: "The midnight mass is intended, as a celebration ushering in the final year of the present century, which begins, as all scholars know, with 1900." A successor of the learned Gascoar was hardly likely to misunderstand the calendar.

—Political rivals, it seems, can be courteous in victory and good tempered in defeat. At any rate they can be so in Boston, for as soon as Gen. PATRICK A. COLLINS learned the result of the Mayoralty election Tuesday evening, he wrote to Mr. THOMAS N. HART, the successful candidate: "Accept my cordial congratulations on your election. May your administration redound to the credit of our good city and to your own reputation." To this Mr. HART replied: "I thank you for your kind and welcome letter. I join with you and all good people in the hope that the government of Boston may be honorable and creditable." That is certainly a most pleasant ending of a hot campaign. When asked to comment on the election, Gen. COLLINS said that it was not for him to tell the many causes of his failure. "It was," he added, "in essence a clear Republican victory. Though the city is normally Democratic it has never in modern times remained Democratic more than four years in succession. There has always been an interregnum. The interregnum has just come, and we are all compelled to gracefully bow to the result."

—"How can you," writes somebody who evidently rejoiced in the thought that his question would worry us terribly, "how can you treat with respectful interest the absurd statement that a dog knows and announces daily the moment when his master takes a train many miles away, and yet have only scorn, sometimes angry and sometimes contemptuous, for the claims made in behalf of Christian Science?" Here is, indeed, a fine mingling of false assumption and grotesque misinterpretation. Whatever of "respectful interest" we showed in the dog story was due to the fact that its truth or falsity can be decided by observation, and in no slightest degree depends on the abandonment of common sense and the substitution for it of suppositions diametrically opposed to reason and experience. We are not, perhaps, either so credulous in regard to the collie Leo or so skeptical about "Christian Science" as our critic imagines. On the presentation of sufficient evidence—it is not now at hand—we are ready to admit that dogs, or some dogs, as the case may be, are in physical relation with human beings too far away to be seen, heard, or smelled. The reality of the alleged phenomenon is highly improbable, but improbability always disappears when confronted by a fact. The trouble with the Eddyites is that they do not distinguish between facts and fancies. Possessing, as they undoubtedly do, a valuable means of producing certain desirable effects, they fall into the error of all quacks and assert that all other desirable effects can be produced by the same means. Their occasional cures are therefore accompanied by vastly more numerous failures, some of them merely ludicrous and others fatal to the individual dupe and dangerous to whole communities. Thus are the mysteries of Leo and of the "Christian Scientists" widely different, and we see no inconsistency in showing a sort of respect for the one and a sort of scorn for the other.

—With the war in the Philippines reduced to its present form, it is no wonder that the American officers find difficulty in seeing how the few remaining insurgents differ from brigands. All hope of attaining independence is gone, and the natives in arms cannot expect to accomplish anything more than a little desultory killing and burning, indistinguishable from murder and arson. It was natural, with affairs in this condition, that the suggestion should have been made to treat all rebels hereafter captured, not as prisoners of war, but as criminals charged with the commission of capital crimes. The necessity for this action may come in time, but its immediate adoption would certainly be premature. MAXIMILIAN was persuaded to issue his fatal "Black Order" by men who said about the Mexican patriots, with at least a semblance of truth, most of the things that can now be said about the Filipinos. And the result was a long series of horrors, and on both sides the war degenerated into mere slaughter. To what degree Mexico owes her liberty to the desperation and hatred created by the decree against the Jaurists is an irrelevant question, but there is a lesson worth heeding in the instant exaggeration of the ordinary cruelties of war that followed the issuance of the order that armed resistance to the Imperial Government should be punished as treason. While AGUINALDO remains at liberty the Filipinos have the shadow of an excuse for claiming to be soldiers engaged in operations which, while obviously and extremely irregular, are still after a fashion military. To shoot them with only the scanty formalities of a drum-head court-martial might be logically justifiable, but it would be most injudicious.

HERE'S THE WHOLE STORY.

From The Chicago Record.

I was nineteen, she twenty-eight,
When first I saw her lovely face,
Her fairy form of luscome grace.
I knew that I had met my fate
When, as I saw her golden hair,
Her carmine lip, her cobalt eye,
I muttered, with a furnace sigh,
"Ye gods, but she is passing fair!"

She twenty-eight and I nineteen!
I took to gloves and neckties bright
To find more favor in her sight.
Of my affections she was queen.
Alternate hope and dark despair
Would mount or rankle in my breast;
She spoiled a good deal of my rest—
I said that she was passing fair.

She twenty-eight, I twenty-eight!
I saw the powder on her face;
Her form has angles more than grace,
Her eyes are blue, but not quite straight.
I really thought my love would last,
But fleeting years will love impair.
I thought that she was passing fair—
And so she was—but now she's past.

THE BOSTON ORCHESTRA.

Second Evening Concert at Carnegie Hall Last Night.

The second evening concert of the fourteenth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this city took place last night at Carnegie Hall. The audience was one of the size and brilliancy which it is usual to find at these concerts, and that it was made up largely of the steadfast friends of the orchestra was manifested by the applause which followed the solo number, composed by one member of the band and played by another. The concert was one of those delightful entertainments which the Boston men provide so often for our delectation and for which we are duly grateful to them.

The programme consisted of Mendelssohn's overture to "The Fair Melusine," Charles Martin Loeffler's concert piece for violin and orchestra, entitled "Nights in the Ukraine," Richard Strauss's indescribable composition called "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" and Beethoven's second symphony. The novelty of the evening was Mr. Loeffler's piece, in which his deskmate, Mr. Franz Kneisel, took the solo part. The work was written some years ago, and was played by the composer in the early days of the Boston Orchestra. The content of the three movements is set forth in three excerpts from the prose writings of the Russian, Nicolai Gogol. They are too long for reproduction here. These excerpts begin with the relation of the manner in which the Russian peasants while away the long Winter nights after the outdoor work is done. Rude and boisterous sport and the dance are the main features of these "sitting-up nights," as they are called, and Mr. Loeffler has endeavored to embody in music the spirit of the festivities.

He has made three movements, of which the first is called a pastoral, the second "The May Night," and the third "The Parobki Armise Themselves." The "Parobki" means the young fellows of the peasantry, who in old times in this country would have been called the "young bucks." The composer's purpose was plainly to make music pictures, or, what is inevitable when this is attempted, mood pictures. He has followed closely the schedule laid out in the writings which he has chosen to illustrate, and the natural result is that his work is not in any of the accepted forms, but in one which he has made for his purpose. There can be no quarrel with him on this ground, for the right of the composer of romantic music to make forms to suit his emotional or descriptive plan is now conceded. It is undeniable that the hearer who tries to follow Mr. Loeffler's work without any attention to the things which he has set out to illustrate will be confused, but that is no proof that the music is not well made. On the contrary, it is extremely well put together.

Indeed it may be said that in this composition, as well as in others, Mr. Loeffler has shown immense cleverness in the structural part of his labor. He has used Russian themes, and has used them with a fine feeling for their color and their significance. He has made mood pictures which are as full of the Russian character as if they had been the diversions of a Davidoff or a Borodine. The sadness, the tenderness, and the rude barbarism of Little Russia breathe through these scenes, and the orchestral tints are eloquent. Mr. Loeffler is a decadent of the decadents, and he revels in the musical production of the vast barren spaces of the Ukraine and the tragic melancholy of the people. His violin part is formidably difficult, but its place in the general scheme is well defined, and it has something to say. On the whole, then, this may be set down as a clever and interesting composition, though it will not please the ticklers for well-defined patterns in music. Mr. Kneisel played the solo part with finish and sympathy. Both he and Mr. Loeffler were warmly applauded by the audience.

It is not necessary to deal at length in this place with the composition of Mr. Richard Strauss played last night. It was fully discussed when it was first performed here. Such music is unfit for publication. It does not increase one's respect for the art of composition. It leaves a bad taste in the mouth. Certainly some of Till Eulenspiegel's pranks would not bear description in prose, and there is no use of making their nature so plain through the medium of ugly music. For some of this music is appallingly ugly, and without any good excuse. There is no reason why music should apparently wallow in the mire.

After this obstreperous thing the second symphony of Beethoven came with a most gracious modesty of art into the presence of the assembly. This music, if it is not of the mightiest pattern of its maker, is at least clean and decent, and one can listen to it with self-respect. It was played with charming clarity and smoothness by the orchestra. And the meed of praise must not be withheld from the playing of the Strauss monstrosity. It was a veritable triumph of orchestral virtuosity. So be it. If tubas and bassoons and English horns must misbehave themselves, it is a blessing to have them do it with an air of gallantry and an assumption of virtue.

UNANNOUNCED STAGE DEBUT.

Daughter of John Drew Seen Twice in a Small Role.

Miss Louisa Drew, daughter and only child of John Drew, made her début on the professional stage at last Wednesday's matinée and evening performances in "The Tyranny of Tears" at the Empire Theatre, when she appeared in the rôle of a maid, a small part, but one which she filled with much credit.

That Miss Drew was to appear was kept a profound secret, as it was recently announced that the young actress would not make her début until next season, when she would be seen for the first time in an important rôle as a member of her father's company. It has been known by those intimately acquainted with Mr. Drew that he proposed to introduce his daughter to the public in a rôle which would give her an opportunity to display her talents, which it is declared she possesses in abundance. It was to familiarize herself with the ordeal of appearing before a large audience that she took part in the Wednesday performances.

The young actress has been abroad for the last four years completing her education. She first attended school in Boulogne, France, and then became a student at the French convent school, Marquise de San Carlos. In a college in Dresden she studied German.

During Mr. Drew's visit to Europe last Summer his daughter expressed a desire to return home and prepare herself for a stage career. Miss Drew has a graceful stage presence. She is tall, slender, and has a rather dark complexion. She recently celebrated her eighteenth birthday.

Decision for Mrs. Edward J. Morgan.

Mrs. Edward J. Morgan, the wife of the actor, who on the stage is known as Adelaide Cushman, and who is suing her husband for a separation on grounds of cruelty and abandonment, obtained a favorable decision yesterday from Justice Gildersleeve of the Supreme Court upon her motion for alimony and counsel fees. Justice Gildersleeve allows her $125 for counsel fees and $25 a week alimony.

SPANISH MINISTRY ATTACKED.

Its Resignation Demanded in View of the Vote on Tuesday.

MADRID, Dec. 14.—In the Senate to-day Señor Ruiz asked what the Government intended to do in view of the Parliamentary conflict relating to the budget.

Señor Silvela, the Premier, replied that there was no conflict, but simply a divergence of opinion regarding the appropriations to various departments of the public service and regarding the continuance of certain posts.

Señor Davila (Liberal) said that after yesterday's vote in the Chamber of Deputies (when the Chamber by a vote of 101 against 100 rejected a motion demanding the abolition of the Under Secretaryship of the Navy and of other posts at the Ministry of Marine) there was no longer a Government; and he called upon the Cabinet to resign.

Señor Silvela retorted that the naval vote had in no way weakened the Cabinet, which would remain in office as long as it continued to enjoy the confidence of the Queen Regent.

In the Chamber of Deputies the debate on the naval estimates was continued.

GERMAN INFLUENCE IN TURKEY.

Acceptance of Prof. Rieder's Educational Plans Shows It Has Increased.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—The Lokal Anzeiger has a special dispatch from Constantinople announcing that the Sultan has issued an irade accepting the educational plans of the German Professor Rieder. This indicates a great gain in German influence in Turkey.

Prof. Rieder's plans embrace an immense hospital in connection with the nearly finished Military Medical School, where instruction, modeled on German university methods, will be given. They also call for a preparatory school, where the Sultan will make the daily study of the German language obligatory for five years.

STRIKERS MAY COMBINE.

Their Rights Defined in a Decision Against Glass Bottle Blowers' Association—Coercion Unlawful.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 14.—A decision which is regarded as of great importance was rendered to-day by Vice Chancellor Reed. It accompanies an order allowing an injunction against members of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of the United States and Canada.

The suit was instituted by the Cumberland Glass Manufacturing Company, representing all the manufacturers involved in the strike which tied up the glass blowing district in and about Bridgeton last Spring and Summer.

The strike was amicably settled long ago, but the case had advanced to such a stage that it could not be recalled. Although the injunction now allowed is valueless to those who sought it, the opinion is one that, if not upset, will form a basis for further actions, and which settles just how far labor organizations may go in the conduct of a strike.

The opinion holds that under an act of 1883 it shall be lawful for workmen to combine together for the purpose of inducing or persuading other workmen to leave or strike, so long as the methods employed are persuasive and not coercive. Under the common law, such combinations were conspiracies, but this was changed by the act of 1883.

The Vice Chancellor says, in part:

"Every employe has the right to engage, or refuse to engage, with whomsoever he chooses, just as every workman has the right to enter, or refuse to enter the service of any employer, as he may choose. The freedom of the individual workman to seek employment belongs to every citizen. It has been held that since the passage of the act of 1883 a combination which before that time would have been held to be a conspiracy becomes, by the force of this statute, a lawful combination. The purpose of the act was undoubtedly to legalize strikes—namely, the organization of concerted, simultaneous cessation of work by bodies of workmen.

"The words employed by the statute cover a combination for the purpose of persuading others to combine for the purpose of entering or leaving an employment. The words would seem to intend a legalization of a combination to induce others to join in a strike, and are, perhaps, broad enough to legalize a combination to persuade individual workmen to quit. The methods to induce a workman to quit or refuse to enter an employment must be persuasive and not coercive.

The Vice Chancellor then reviews the laws and rulings in other States, and says:

"Taking the testimony so far as it stands substantially uncontradicted, I conclude that the crowds spoken of in the complainant's affidavit as 'guards,' judged by its size and acts, were designed for coercive, as well as persuasive, purposes.

"Conceding that a number of strikers could remain in the vicinity of the factory yard to see what was going on, yet when the number became a crowd and when the acts of the crowd expanded into occasional attacks upon property and abusive language toward employes and interference with those seeking to enter the yard, the 'guard' became a coercive instrument. A permanent guard in a public street in front of citizens' houses or factory is in itself a nuisance."

The Court holds that the Glass Blowers' Association cannot be enjoined, for the reason that it did not know of any violence that it tacitly or expressly approved.

Under the decision it will hereafter be needful for a person or corporation seeking an injunction against strikers to prove coercion against individuals or associations before a writ may be issued.

ART AT THE UNION LEAGUE.

For its first monthly art exhibition of the season, the Art Committee of the Union League Club has secured and displays in the club's gallery twelve paintings owned by Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, and which individually and as a whole make up one of the most important, interesting, and valuable little art displays ever seen in this city. Senator Clark has been for some years a collector of rare old and modern paintings, but became known first to the art public in this rôle by his purchase of Fortuny's "Choice of a Model" for $45,000, at the Stewart sale last year. That now famous canvas, which it is to be feared acquires importance to many people more by and through the fact of the high price that Senator Clark paid for it than from its intrinsic art merits, which are great, figures in the present exhibition and to advantage in the well-lighted little gallery, where its remarkable decorative details and exquisite color can be once more studied and admired.

But the art lover will not linger long even over the Fortuny in the presence of most of its fellows in the present display. It is not often vouchsafed to New Yorkers to behold canvases of such strength and quality as those now shown. At the south end of the gallery hangs a large Rousseau, "Apres la Pluie," certainly the strongest example of the French master seen in New York since the dispersal of the Fuller collection, with its "Woodcutter's Hut." The canvas is a long, rectangular one—one of those late afternoon effects, with a burst of light in the middle distance reflected in the pools in the foreground, shadowed by brown-leaved trees so characteristic of this painter. The canvas has all that depth and richness of color, and especially that broad and vigorous brush work and sympathy with Nature in her wilder moods which marks Rousseau at his best. Near the Rousseau hangs a large and important Diaz, "La Forêt," with a characteristic woodland glade, pools in the middle distance, a strong, stormy sky, and sullen sunlight glinting on the white tree trunks.

Of Dupré there is also a rarely fine canvas, "Passage d'Animaux sur un Pont," a troop of cattle with mounted herdsmen crossing a low bridge over a marshy stream. The chief features of this canvas, in addition to its color, are its superb distance and fine sky, filled with rolling clouds. An early example of Jules Breton, "Colza Field," with a number of female figures, has a tender sky, rich and fine color, and that strong draughtsmanship and sympathy with "the simple annals of the poor" which has so well earned for Jules Breton the sobriquet of the "Modern Millet." There is an interior by Isabey, with many figures, characteristically glowing in color, a Corot, "La Bacchante," recently seen at Knoedler's with an important reclining female nude figure, very graceful in drawing and pose, and pearly in atmosphere and sky, and a Turner, "Italian Lakes," one of those lovely pieces of glows of color and fancy which are the despair of critics and the delight of artistic souls.

Added to all these canvases are three examples of John Constable and a Rubens. The last is a rarely fine example, and of the three Constables it is difficult to select the best. To some the stormy sunset, "Dunstanborough, Northumberland," with its broad, strong treatment, rich light, and color—a canvas which it seems Turner must have studied—will most appeal, while others will perhaps prefer the "Roehampton," that magnificent stretch of English landscape, swept over by alternate clouds and sunlight in the "uncertain glory of an April day," or the more sombre, rich, and deep-colored "Loch on the Thames." The display would be a notable one were these three Constables alone shown.

NEW SWISS PRESIDENT.

Walther Hauser Elected for One Year by the Federal Council.

BERNE, Dec. 14.—The Federal Assembly has elected Walther Hauser to be President for 1900.

Every year, usually at the beginning of the third week in December, the Federal Council, which meets at Berne, elects a President of the Swiss Confederation, who is also Chief of the Department of Foreign Affairs, for twelve months.

The rule which has been followed in the tranquil republic for some years is that the Vice President of one year becomes the President the next. This rule has been carried out on the present occasion. M. Hauser, who is a native of Wadenswell, Zurich, was elected Dec. 15, 1898, Vice President. The President elected was Dr. Muller, who was in turn Vice President during 1898.

M. Hauser is a Radical. The Radicals have been in power in Switzerland for many years, and have at present an enormous majority in the Federal Council. In spite of their name, however, their radicalism is very different from that of most other States, and few innovations have been introduced by them recently. There are no important questions agitating the republic at present, and it seems safe to predict that, unless unforeseen events occur, M. Hauser's tenure of office will be as quiet politically as the terms of his predecessors.

THE FIRST ASSEMBLY BALL

Society Out in Force Last Night at the Astoria.

THE DECORATIONS ELABORATE

Worthington Whitehouse Led the Cotillion—Prominent Women and Their Handsome Gowns.

Last evening took place the first Assembly ball of the season in the large ballroom of the Astoria. For several years, since the Patriarchs passed into history, the Assembly has been looked upon as the veritable opening of the social year. The Horse Show is only a prelude, and after that event is over society returns to the country. This year the majority of the fashionable people have been very late in coming to town, the delightful weather keeping them where they could enjoy the open. The absence also of many in Europe, and the unusual number of the modish world in mourning, did not augur well for the season which began last evening. Still, it has been an event looked forward to for weeks by many of the débutantes, and it has kept busy a small army of dressmakers and milliners and other industries of that character.

The Assembly of last evening differed but little from those of previous years, except that the floral decorations were more subdued and much less elaborate. The absence of Mrs. Astor, who for years has always made it a point to be present at the first Assembly, was taken as an augury of the beginning of the end, and seemed to confirm the rumors whispered for some time, that with the growth of New York society the Assembly would have to go as Almack's did in London and the Patriarchs' in this city, only a few years ago. There was no evidence, otherwise, of any decline last evening. There were a number of new patronesses, some of them, like Mrs. Edwin Post, young matrons. The guests were received by three representative women—Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, and Mrs. Edmund T. Baylies. There were many very pretty débutantes, quite a list of distinguished foreigners and strangers, Lander and the Hungarian bands played as of yore, the supper was excellent, and the cotillion, with its handsome favors, quite spirited.

Of the patronesses who were absent from cause of family mourning, illness, and foreign travel, were Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Cadwallader Jones, Mrs. Ward McAllister, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne, Mrs. Gerliyn Redmond, and Mrs. Frederick Sheldon. The absence also of any member of the Vanderbilt, Goelet, Warren, and Belmont families made quite a difference. Besides Mrs. Edwin C. Post, already mentioned, the new subscribers for this year were Mrs. Louis A. Jones, Mrs. William Street, Mrs. J. Kennedy Tod, Mrs. Beverley Robinson, Mrs. Walter L. Suydam, and Mrs. Henry Parish, Jr. Mrs. John C. Wilmerding, who has also been absent on account of mourning, returned.

The ball was not an early one, and it was long after 11 o'clock before it was under way. There were a number of dinners, which were given for the débutantes of the evening, and nearly every one was tardy in arriving. The new private entrance to the Waldorf, on Thirty-third Street, was used, and the stairway and passages leading to the Astoria were lined with palms.

The decorations were of a Christmas character, holly and evergreen prevailing. From the entrance through the halls leading to the foyer, where the patronesses were receiving, the main decorations were palms, which lined the walls, smilax, and wreaths of holly. The foyer itself was banked with palms, Boston ferns, and evergreens, making an elaborate bower. From the gallery running around the room were suspended smilax and holly and irregular garlands of white and pink roses. The mantel in this room was one mass of roses.

In the ballroom itself the keynote was red. There was any quantity of that brilliant scarlet flower the poinsettia, which has been used so effectively in the decoration of Christmas windows at the various florists. The boxes were filled with palms and profusely draped with holly, which formed a dark and contrasting background to the vivid red of the flowers.

In the foyer, receiving the guests, stood Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies. The guests, on entering, made their bow to these ladies and passed on into the great ballroom beyond.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor wore a silver gray silk elaborately embroidered and spangled and her diamonds. Mrs. Baylies was in black tulle spangled with blue electric jet and diamonds. Mrs. Gerry wore white brocade.

Dancing was general until after midnight, when supper was served in the Myrtle and East room at small tables. There was no attempt in this room at elaborate floral decoration. The following was the menu:

MENU.
Chaud.
Gombo de volaille en tasse.

Apollinaris.

The cotillion began promptly at 1 o'clock. It was led by Mr. Worthington Whitehouse, assisted by Mr. Craig Wadsworth. There were three favor figures. The favors were large bunches of flowers, with ribbons and orders.

Dancing was kept up until a very late hour, and it was nearly 4 o'clock before the last carriage rolled away from the Astoria. There were quite a number of distinguished guests from out of town. Among these were Mrs. Leslie Cotton, the guest of Mrs. Luther Kountze; the Earl of Cassilis, Duncan Pringle of Paris and Louisiana, the guest of Miss Louise Langdon Kane; Baron Allotti, Italian Ambassador to Russia, guest of Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean; Mr. and Mrs. John Munroe and Miss Julia Hunt of Paris, guests of Mrs. Cadwalader Jones; Count Odazio, George Thompson of Philadelphia, and L. C. Williams of Virginia, guests of Mrs. Frederic Bronson; Mrs. F. Watson of Boston and Miss Faraley of London, guests of Mrs. Beverley Robinson.

Among the débutantes present were Miss Helen Kountze, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther J. Kountze, Miss Evelyn Parsons, the daughter of Mr. Schuyler Parsons; Miss Mildred Stokes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes; Miss Cecil Boardman, daughter of Mr. Albert Barnes Boardman; Miss Iselin, daughter of Mrs. John H. Iselin; Miss Ella de Peyster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic J. de Peyster; Miss Harriet Delafield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maturin Delafield; Miss Heloise Beeckman, daughter of Mrs. William Beeckman; Miss Emma Rutherford, daughter of Mrs. George Crocker; Miss Crocker of San Francisco, niece of Mrs. Charles B.
